In Western New York Swings His Jack-o-Lantern in Voters' Faces and Bets for His Party's Life—With Sherman at Utica.

(United Press Special Wire.)
Oneta, N. Y., Oct. 30.—With only three days more before election, William H. Taft is making a whirlwind tour of northeastern New York state today. He is pleading for the election of the state and national tickets and the return of Republican congressmen.

Taft made his first stop at Canastota, and spoke to a large crowd there. He went from there to Rome and then to Utica, the home of the Sherman, Republican candidate for vice-president.

When Taft special arrived at the station an immense crowd was waiting. Taft and Sherman clasped hands on the platform of the special train, the crowd went wild.

Taft spoke at the Majestic theatre to one of the largest crowds ever assembled there. He paid a high tribute to Sherman and the names of the Republican candidates were shouted again and again by the crowd.

Taft ridiculed the idea that Bryan is the heir to the Roosevelt policies. He declared that since Roosevelt had repudiated Bryan he had not heard so much of the name of the campaign.

At Batavia the enthusiasm was great. The crowd was so large that it was impossible for the police to control the rush.

This afternoon the Republican candidate spoke at Buffalo, where he was greeted by enthusiastic crowds. He will stop at Buffalo tomorrow where a Republican demonstration is planned.

After speaking today, Taft declared, "The crowd here is representative of the voters of New York believe that the induction into office of another Republican administration is a step in the direction of the investment of capital and the return of prosperity and that the success of Bryan means the uncertainty of the future; that it means the withholding of capital, difficulty on the part of railroads and other corporations in borrowing money; halt in the work of construction and reconstruction upon which our prosperity may depend."

DIVORCES WIFE MARRIED COLLEGE DOGS FROM NIGHT

Dr. R. A. Collins Says He Knows of No Other Decree and Is Ignorant of Alliance Between His Spouse and Nobleman.

According to a dispatch to The Journal from New York several weeks ago, Mrs. Nora Collins was married shortly before that to Viggo Von Holstein Rathlow, son of Count Von Holstein Rathlow Copenhagen, Denmark. Today in Judge Morrow's department of the circuit court, Dr. R. A. Collins, Mrs. Collins' first husband, secured a divorce on the ground of cruelty. So far as he knows, his wife has not secured a divorce from him, and her alliance with a noble family of Denmark is something he knows nothing about.

Dr. Collins was 25 years old when she married Dr. Collins at Hartington, Neb. That was in 1902. Before that she had been a member of the New York Square Concrete company, the New York under the stage name of Goldie Lang. Their married life was unhappy, almost from the first. Dr. Collins this morning declared that his wife was almost insanely jealous and interfered with his practice by objecting to his calling on women patients. For a time he was employed in a drug store, and he said his wife called up so often that he was unable to work. The manager of the store finally forbade her the use of the telephone.

Dr. Collins also complained that his wife was extravagant and bought and had articles charged to his account far beyond what he could pay. He said she also neglected to properly care for their little boy, and would allow him to go for three weeks without a bath.

Dr. Collins was the only man among nine applicants for divorce who told stories of shattered love dreams to Judge Morrow. He said that the room was crowded with a rare array of hats and frills, with occasional gas tints of color, and when the noon hour came the mark of Cupid's defeat had been officially stamped on the records in nine different spots.

Mrs. May F. Henry said that because she would not "shut up" when Guy Henry, her first husband, told her, "he kicked her in the mouth," at another time, when he announced that he proposed to bounce her head on the wall, she was obliged to join her relatives in Roseburg, and her husband then had the effrontery to write to her father for money. She said that her husband worked very little after he found that she could work and earn money for them. They were married in April, 1904, and separated in July of the following year.

"DOC" ANDERSON'S FRIENDS COME TO HIS AID IN STRAW VOTE

"Doc" Anderson, baseball fan and Bryan enthusiast, will win his money if the voting in his straw ballot keeps up the gat it had maintained up to noon today. At that time the vote was approximately three for Bryan to one for Taft, in the corner of Sixth and Washington streets, where the Bryan boosters have joined hands to help him win his wager of $20.

Some days ago Anderson made the assertion that Bryan would win Multnomah county. He said that he could handle the matter at his own discretion until 8 o'clock in the morning until 8 at night and get more votes for Bryan than would be cast for Taft. The assertion led to a wager of $20 with a local cigar man.

This morning "Doc" took his stand and began to take the straw vote. The first Bryan ran far in the lead and the great margin gained and maintained up to noon showed that his friends were coming to his financial assistance indirectly.

The Anderson vote, therefore, seems to have lost any element of doubt unless the balloting steadies down during the afternoon. Anderson maintains, however, that he will win his bet on indication of the way things will go next Tuesday.

CANCER VICTIM KILLS HIMSELF

Despondent because he was suffering from cancer, which he deemed incurable, a man named J. H. McCreeby, 47, shot himself in the head at the New House, at Second and Broadway streets, in this city, this morning.

Nothing whatever is known of McCreeby by the proprietor of the lodging house, or by the many mill and log lodgers. He was a man who kept to himself and rarely spoke to anybody. He had been at the New House for six months.

The place where McCreeby committed suicide was a dark room. When the officers visited it in response to a call from the proprietors, they found that the body had fallen against the door and it was almost impossible to get the door open. The body has been taken in charge by the coroner.

SAYS HE WAS CHEATED IN HORSE TRADE AND ASKS COURT'S AID

Alleging that he was "worked" in a horse trade, J. L. Smithson has begun suit in the state circuit court against W. L. Diel for $735 damages. He declares that he got two horses of uncertain age, but not less than 14 years old, when he bargained for animals 7 and 9 years of age, and that the aggregate weight of the two was about 2,600 pounds, instead of 2,800. He accuses Diel of palming off inferior stock on the "broke down, old, stiff and sore." The two are far from able to pull heavy loads, he complains, and that is the purpose for which they were wanted.

Smithson bargained for the team on October 6. He said the horses, like Sheridan, were 20 miles away from the place where he bought them, but he did not go to look at them, but relied on the descriptions given by Diel. In exchange he gave a team of horses and a buggy valued at $375 and tools worth $200, a buggy valued at $35 and a note for $225. After he had taken the horses, he says, he offered to trade back, but Diel was evidently satisfied as matters stood and refused to trade again. Smithson asks for the full value of his property as damages.

STEAMBOAT MEN AND FARMERS ARE HAPPY

The rainfall during the past two days has been moderately heavy in western Oregon and Washington and rather light east of the mountains, according to the records at the weather bureau.

District Forecaster Beals says the rain is welcomed by farmers and river steamboat men because it has fallen upon soil that has already been wetted and there is a goodly portion of the moisture will flow into the rivers, improving navigation at upstream points. It will also soften the soil and thus facilitate plowing.

Mr. Beals looks for occasional showers for some time to come.

Larson went to the police station and read the letter addressed to him. It proved to be from an old friend in Sweden, and Larson, who is a native-born American, who, the letter stated, would stop in Spokane en route to Seattle.

Miss Sanderberg is 25 years old. Her name could not give a description, never having seen her. The police have no clues, other than the handbag, which was thrown away by a robber where he thought he could find it later.

Learning about Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at The Laid-Davis Drug Co. I soon felt their beneficial effects and when I had used the contents of one box, my condition had improved in every way. I hold a very high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and cheerfully recommend them.
