BANK GUARANTY NOT VISIONARY

The Mason and Sillard seizure brought us into contempt. England and France recognized the south as belligerent. Napoleon the Third menaced our Mexican frontier. England threatened seizure of Mexico and openly furnished the south with money as well as the munitions of war.

Suspended Specie Payments.

With no resource with which to replenish the national treasury, the government was obliged to suspend specie payments on gold, which advanced immediately gold commanded a premium and vanished from circulation, restricting our currency to the notes of the suspended banks and the note issues of the government, the prices of all commodities in the meantime soaring with the premium on gold, which advanced with every additional note issue of the government. The legal-tender act destroyed our specie banks and sent 20 million dollars of specie to the bottom of the sea. As our bond issues did not specify the kind of money in which they were payable, they deteriorated in value until Congress in the effort to enhance their value passed what was called the public credit act, solemnly pledging the credit of the government to the payment of its bonds in coin, also declaring that the issue of legal-tender notes should not at any time exceed the sum of $50,000,000. The effect of this, however, was not appreciable and the government found no market for its new bond issues. In its extremity the government was obliged to resort to heroic measures in order to obtain the money the sinews of war. This end was accomplished by the enactment of the national bank law which virtually sold to the banks "you must close your doors unless you will come into this national bank system. To do this you must first invest all your capital in

United States bonds. You must retire all your own circulation, under a penalty of 10 per cent upon every dollar not paid out by you. The government will then authorize you to issue bank notes to the extent of 90 per cent of the par value of the bonds. You will be required under this law to pay to the government a duty of one-half of one per cent semi-annually on the average amount of notes in circulation, one-fourth of one per cent on the average amount of deposits and one-fourth of one per cent on the average amount of capital in excess of the amount invested in United States bonds.

Did Not Lessen Taxes.

These duties levied by the government did not relieve the banks from their obligations to the state, municipal, and federal governments. In addition to these duties, the banks were required to pay all the expense incurred by the government in procuring plates, paper and for the printing of the notes, together with the cost of redemption, destruction and reissue of the currency, and also the cost of examinations provided for in the law. The comptroller of the currency was given full authority to make regulations for the management of the banks, and at his discretion to close, take control of and liquidate the affairs of any bank which he should deem to be insolvent or conducted in violation of the laws and regulations governing them. The liability of shareholders was fixed at double the amount of stock subscribed.

The national bank bill framed by Mr. Chase, secretary of the treasury, and championed by Senator John Sherman, met with strong opposition in the senate. Mr. Collins of Vermont denied the right to tax the state banks out of existence and to establish corporations in the states and territories. He objected making the government responsible for the ultimate redemption of the bills. His only constitutional foundation was the power given to congress "to coin money and regulate the value thereof."

Mr. Carlile of West Virginia said: "The state banks will be destroyed and widows and orphans whose all is invested in the stock will be impoverished."

Mr. Blaine says: "The bill came to a vote in the senate on the 12th of February, 1863, and narrowly escaped defeat. The yeas were 23 and nays 21. The senators from Oregon—NeSmith and Hatfield—were the only Democrats who voted in the affirmative. Nine Republican senators voted against it."

(Both of these senators told the writer they so voted at the personal solicitation of Secretary Chase, who came to their apartments at a late hour the night before the bill came up in the senate and in tears implored them to support it as the only means to provide money to pay our soldiers in the field.)

When Deposits Were Taxed.

As heretofore stated, the government's share of the earnings of national banks since their organization after the revenue act of 1863, $11,535,375.20 from tax on circulation 1864 to 1907. Deduct from this the actual expenses of the currency bureau, exclusive of reimbursements made directly by the banks to 1868, $10,286,180.50, and we find a surplus of tax levied on circulation above all expenses to be $1,249,194.70. Making in the other items as above stated $162,095,017.20, as the net profits to the government, the tax on circulation, contributing nothing to the capital, having in consideration of its management secured a large and permanent fund for the banks, should it not in justice be held

ENDS HER WOES WITH A BULLET

Mrs. Helen Douglas Will Always be a Loyal Supporter of Her Remains to a Medical College.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Los Angeles, Oct. 31.—After trying to sell her cadaver to Dr. George W. Kress, secretary of the medical college of the University of Southern California, Mrs. Helen Sutherland Douglas, the beautiful young wife of Jack Douglas, a traveling man for a wholesale grocery firm of San Francisco, committed suicide by shooting herself through the neck with a .32-caliber revolver. Her body was found today in a room in the Hotel Acadia, on West Sixtieth street, and it is believed she killed herself last night.

Mrs. Douglas was separated from her husband several months ago and had been living at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Browning, at Pasadena. A week ago she came to Los Angeles seeking employment. She was unsuccessful in her search and last Wednesday went to Dr. Kress and offered to sell him her body for use in the medical college after her death. The doctor refused to consider the offer and she departed after telling him she wished her body to be used in scientific work and promising that she would will it to the medical college.

When her body was found a piece of paper revealing her identity and giving the address of her mother was discovered, together with a sealed note addressed to Dr. Kress. This note will be sent to Dr. Kress late this afternoon.

DISAPPOINTMENT FOR THE FAT

Realizing the danger and disagreeableness of their condition, many fat people rush off and buy a sweater, intending to exercise it off. Alas for the frailty of human intentions. Few survive the first hour's exertion. Others prefer dieting, but are made to look foolish by the first savory whiff of broiled steak they run into.

How many sufferers in to get a large 75c case of Marmola Tablets either direct from the makers, the Marmola Co., Detroit, Mich., or better still, of your local druggist, and take one of the generous supply of pleasant tablets it will contain after each meal and at bedtime. Forget exercising and dieting and do this.

It is not only easier, but safer and strictly in accordance with the famous Marmola prescription, these tablets hurt no one—don't affect the stomach in the slightest or produce even one wrinkle, and yet a single case of them will give a person most acceptable service. In fact, scores of people have taken off thirty pounds of fat in as many days, just by taking our little tablet—four times a day as described.
