Steamers Navigated With Difficulty and Extreme Care.

The fog began to fall unusually early last night, and navigation on the river became extremely dangerous almost before sunset. The steamers Alliance and Eureka, bound for Oregon coast ports, left their docks, but it is doubtful if they will reach Astoria much before noon tomorrow.

STRANGE CONDITION FOR TIME OF YEAR

Never before has the fog been so thick on the river at this time of the year. Mariners ascribe it to the warm days and cold nights, the cold night air causing the warmer river water to rise in heavy vapor. So thick does the fog rise that the water at times is almost as opaque as milk.
