

STRIVE TO PUT KLIKTIAT ON MAP

Boosters From the Fertile Washington Valley Come to Portland to Enlist Aid in Advertising Campaign To Make Its Market Here

Kliktiat county, Washington, is to be put on the map. This is the declaration of H. N. Frazer, D. Leadbetter and C. T. Camplin, who, together with N. B. Brooks and L. A. Duncan, compose the executive committee of the Kliktiat Development league, organized at Goldendale last Saturday.

Messrs. Frazer, Leadbetter and Camplin came to Portland yesterday to see what they could do toward securing the cooperation of Portland in making better known the resources and advantages of the Kliktiat valley. They said last night that they had met with great success and felt much encouraged. They will be in the city for several days, and it is expected that they will probably put up at least $5,000 to be added to the $500 advertising fund subscribed by the citizens of the Kliktiat valley last Saturday week.

What was said to do said Mr. Frazer, is to bring closer together Portland and our little valley. We are really a part of Oregon, from a commercial standpoint. We are shut in by the Columbia river on one side and by the Simco mountains on the other. The mountains shut us out from the cities of Washington, and Portland is our big city.

The Kliktiat valley is on the north bank of the Columbia river opposite The Dalles. It is 20 or 25 miles wide and about 80 miles long. It has all the advantages of Hood River, and the advantages of that is what we want to get. At present our principal crop is wheat, but all kinds of fruit are raised in the valley—peaches, strawberries, apples, etc. Such a thing as a crop failure is almost unknown. We can raise the fruit, but we want some one who knows about such things to come in and show us the best kinds of fruit to raise and how to pack it properly. When we know that, we can do as well as Hood River. We want to make the Kliktiat valley prosperous with new people, new interests and new diversities.

Portland has as much to gain as the Kliktiat, if not more, by helping us. Portland is to be our market and our trade virtually will be with this city. We want to go on record that as a community we are in our power to do our share if Portland will do hers.

We have met with all kinds of encouragement since we came here. We have with great success taken the matter up with the Hill and Harriman lines, and they have promised to help us. An official of the roads told us yesterday that in his opinion the Kliktiat valley is the richest along the north bank of the Columbia, and that we would be taken care of.

To put it briefly, what our league is organized for, and the Kliktiat valley on the map, and we are certainly going to do it.

TROUBLES OF THE OVER-RICH

of a man of my husband's large wealth. It certainly will cause comparison with the security purchased by the wife of the defendant's brother, George Gould, who is an accredited millionaire and whose name is valued at $1,500,000.

Mrs. Gould takes up in detail the allegations of her husband regarding her actions at various hotels and cafes. She denies them in toto, and insists that most of the charges are made by discharged employees, or others brought under her husband's influence.

In answer Mr. Gould declares that he has paid on his wife's account for bills contracted by her since their separation, $1,938.40 in addition to the $25,000 monthly allowance which he says she has received since November of last year.

While Mrs. Gould says she believes her husband's fortune amounts to $15,000,000, Mr. Gould pleads being so poor that he has been unable to put either of his two yachts, Niagara or Niagara IV, into commission. He says his personal loss during the recent financial depression amounted to about $300,000.

Mrs. Gould follows his wife's career from the time of their marriage and alleges numerous instances of misconduct. He declares that he surrounded her with detectives at the St. Regis, but says:

Watched His Wife. "To a certain extent, however, and upon occasions when I suspected the likelihood of misconduct, the plaintiff's movements were watched and reported to me."

Concerning Mrs. Gould's plea that detectives shadowed her, Mr. Gould says: "The facts are that having reason to question the propriety of the plaintiff's relations with an actor known as Dussard, I learned that he had been seen by her at Lynchburg on a given date, and I immediately caused my detectives to follow the plaintiff, who would make this the occasion for a meeting between Mr. Farnum and herself.

Anticipating this possibility, detectives in my behalf were sent to Lynchburg to take up their quarters in the hotel Carroll in that city. In this respect my precautions were not taken in vain, as on information and belief the plaintiff and Mr. Farnum did meet at the hotel Carroll in Lynchburg and Mr. Farnum spent much of his time in Mrs. Gould's apartments in said hotel between Sunday afternoon, November 13, 1908, and Monday morning, November 20, 1908, when Mrs. Gould left the hotel for New York on a train which left at 5:37 a. m.

New Accusations. A new accusation was brought against Mrs. Gould in the affidavits of Alfred Richardson, a former steward of Castle Gould, who says that one night during the absence of Mr. Gould a man named Colbert was admitted to the house.

Mrs. Gould denies that she knows anyone named Colbert and brags she falsifies the statement of Colbert's visit to Castle Gould. She also creates the statement of James Lureston, her former footman, to the effect that the maid told him a man was visiting Mrs. Gould in her apartment in the Waldorf in New York on one day in January, 1904, is untrue and adds that most of the affidavits against her are made by discharged or otherwise had a grievance. In itemizing her expenses, Mrs. Gould includes her household necessities among her household necessities. She says two and not one, are the usual accompaniments of a woman of her rank and she figures $1,000 a month for the cost of this adjunct.

Buy New One Every Year. "It scarcely pays to keep them longer than a year," says Mr. Gould in his explanation of the size of this item in her tabulation. Experience shows that the monthly cost for an up-to-date automobile is about $1,000.

An item of absorbing interest to women is Mrs. Gould's list of the estimated $100 a month for her wardrobe. No woman of fashion, according to Mrs. Gould, can spend less than $100 a month on her wardrobe, and she is telling of expenses for clothes, Mrs. Gould says:

Tailor-made suits cost not less than $100, and certainly the dresses, coats, wraps, etc., for evening, street, yachting and motoring which a woman of my rank must have in the dressed wardrobe in a manner with those with whom she is associated will cost $1,000 a month.

Two hats a month and veils to match are figured at a cost of $100 a month, while riding and walking shoes and slippers are charged at $100. Hosiery, $25; gloves $10; lingerie $50; parasols, umbrellas, fans and opera glasses and a complete outfit for traveling, including hair dressing and manicuring $200; massage, doctors, dentists and health treatment in general $100; books and stationery $50; theatres and operas $50 and tips and small payments $50 monthly.

Contradicts Husband. Mrs. Gould contradicts her husband's statements that she was boisterous and intoxicated at the casino during a performance of "Baroness Fiddlers" in November, 1904, or that she misbehaved herself during a performance of "Humpty Dumpty" at another time. She says she threw a pack of cards in Mr. Gould's face during a game of bridge while at the home of Leroy Baldwin in the city of New York in the same month. She also denies that she was charged with attending a wedding in St. Thomas church or while they were dining with friends in the city of New York.

Mrs. Gould says she had been there with some women of bad character, says Mrs. Gould. Mr. Gould says that his wife's excessive weakness for drink was never overpaid and sometimes an intelligent Esquimo boy helped me. There were two native families on the island, and the principal work was in geology, and the mapping of three rivers which have never before been shown on any maps or charts.

Six Months of Giddling. "I spent six months of each year in giddling and on my trips found two or three prospectors who said they had found very little or not before and the other was of the country being rich in minerals like the Yukon basin. But geologically it was none the less interesting. The darkest time being twilight for about six hours and sufficiently light for the trip."

I left Flaxman Island the latter part of last August in the whaler Karluk and left her at Point Barrow, where I was met by the whaler Nautilus. I had to come out of the Arctic for my outfit had run low. But I shall return in a year to Flaxman and other regions of the Beaufort sea and the Arctic, probably going up in one of the whalers. It is my intention to remain there three or four years.

and in turn referred to the European situation.

Might Have Shaken All Europe. The great disturbance caused by the interview with the kaiser published recently in the Century magazine, and the fears of the foreign office last week, the Century article should contain even more disturbing utterances of his nature.

International disruption might have followed the publishing of the article, if it had not been for the intervention of the author and his publishers to recognize the danger. Mr. Hale, it is believed, was quickly convinced that the German point of view was correct and willingly sacrificed the personal prestige and personal advancement bound to accrue to him from the publication of so important an article over his signature.

The object of the article was first advanced the Century company hesitated to incur the heavy financial loss of such action and, what was still more important to them, disrepute their many readers who were anticipating the advertised interview with the kaiser. The situation evolved two points of view and an issue unique in journalism. The question was one of ethics and not of business. The publishers could not refuse to withdraw the article, and could even have enhanced its value by advertising the fact that it was of a startling nature and had brought a continental power to its knees.

Such an action, it is said on reliable authority, would have resulted disastrously to Germany and opened up the possibility of international conflict. The publishers, backed by Mr. Hale's urgent request, and the Century company, and the original manuscript, every proof and every printed word of the article have been destroyed.

Mrs. Hale had not granted an obscure American newspaper an interview on his royal yacht recently in Norwegian waters last summer and amiably discussed past, present and prospective world events and later authorized the publication of the same.

Sacrificed His First Scoop. "Hale did the only gentlemanly thing," said a close friend of the author today. "He undoubtedly had a story that would have made him known the world over, and chose to act in the cause of peace and his friendship with certain high officials of the German government, at the expense of his ambition."

It was his first big scoop, too. The Century company's non-committal statement follows: "The Century company states that the article on the German emperor by Mr. William Bayard Hale has been withdrawn by the author, he feeling it would be improper for him to proceed with the publication in view of recent circumstances."

Mrs. Hale, when shown this statement, said: "It is true that I have requested of the Century company the permission to withdraw from publication the announced article and that the Century company has acceded to my request. I am asked to give the reasons for this action. Mr. Hale would only say: "I believe that my letter to the Century company, stating that circumstances which have arisen since the writing of the article prompt me to withdraw it."

LEGAL MIX FOR ROBBERS' SWAG

Two Suits Filed Over $13,395 Found in Bandits' Possession.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Helena, Mont., Nov. 7.—D. D. McPhee, Helena, Mont., M. E. Ryan, T. P. Enright and John Delaney, who captured Charles McDonald and George Frankhauser, the two bandits who held up the Oriental Limited on the Great Northern, in the Flathead country about a year ago, today filed a motion in the federal court asking leave to intervene in the suit of the Marine Insurance company, limited, against Sheriff W. H. O'Connell, which collected $13,395 which was in possession of the bandits when captured.

The insurance company had to make good the $10,000 the bandits secured, and it has brought suit to obtain the money which was found on the robbers, and their retention, and which Sheriff O'Connell has in his possession.

The intervenors seek to collect $14,395 from the two bandits who captured the Oriental Limited on the Great Northern, in the Flathead country about a year ago, today filed a motion in the federal court asking leave to intervene in the suit of the Marine Insurance company, limited, against Sheriff W. H. O'Connell, which collected $13,395 which was in possession of the bandits when captured.

land nor new continent within a wide range of their position. Upon reaching Flaxman island on their return the explorers found that their schooner, the Duchess of Bedford, for which they had so much in store, was a total wreck and that the crew had been saved. The schooner had set in to leak, soon after the explorers left on their expedition over the ice, and the crew after saving everything of value aboard, camped near by on the shore.

But the loss of the schooner changed the plans of the scientists for traversing the open waters and rendered their chances of getting out of the desolate regions somewhat problematical.

Leffingwell's Story. Speaking of his experiences, Mr. Leffingwell said today: "It was in March, 1907, that we started out on that two months' trip over the ice to the northward, searching for land. But everywhere we sounded we obtained such great depths that we did not consider it advisable to search farther for land in that direction. Most islands along the coast were from a depth seldom deeper than 100 fathoms and everywhere we sounded we found more than 300 fathoms. It was a new territory that we had entered, and it was tremendously thick. Though we traveled much farther, of course, we reached point after point, and then north of our headquarters on Flaxman island, which is between Point Barrow and Herschel island.

The return of the schooner and the members of the crew has been told about, and the marvelous trip of Captain Mikkelsen and his crew, the dreaded wilderness of North Alaska from Flaxman to Valdez. He was six months on the way, sometimes accomplishing a great deal of work in a very short time. I have been a member of the crew and sometimes an intelligent Esquimo boy helped me. There were two native families on the island, and the principal work was in geology, and the mapping of three rivers which have never before been shown on any maps or charts.

EVERYBODY MUM SINCE ALL'S SAFE; INCIDENT CLOSED

(Edited Press Leased Wire.) Washington, Nov. 7.—Efforts to probe the mystery attending the suppression of William Bayard Hale's interview with Kaiser Wilhelm, which was published in the December issue of the Century Magazine, were met tonight with denials at the German embassy and evasions at the state department.

Count von Hatzfeldt, charge d'affaires of Germany, stated that he had refused a request from his government concerning the article, and in fact was unaware that such a publication was about to be made.

It is recalled, however, that one of the editors of the Century was in Washington within the past week and called at both the White House and the state department. There was considerable speculation at the time as to the cause of his visit, and the impression prevailed tonight that it was in connection with the kaiser's interview.

The incident recalls the Tower-Hill episode, which was discreetly dropped with sudden silence on the part of all concerned, leaving the mystery of the

What is Catarrh? A Dangerous Disease Affecting Thousands of People. It is an inflammation of the mucous membranes, and may affect the nose, throat, stomach, bowels, or bladder.
