GIVES VERDICT AGAINST REID

Jury Decides That the Boy Homicide Is a "Delinquent Minor."

The juvenile court jury in the case of Jackson Reid, the 12-year-old boy who killed George F. De Mars on August 4, returned a verdict yesterday afternoon declaring young Reid to be a delinquent minor. The jury was out an hour.

This verdict came as a surprise, not only to the defense, but also to the attorneys representing the state, who had virtually declared that they did not expect such a verdict. The defense had proved that young Reid, when he shot De Mars dead with a huge .45-caliber revolver, thought he was in danger of his life, or at least a serious bodily injury at the hands of an infuriated man.

It had been pretty clearly proved that De Mars was running to the attack armed with an axe, and was about to chastise, not the dog as the prosecution claimed, but the boy.

Attorney Idelman and Esterley for the defense confidently expected a verdict of acquittal, and the best that the state hoped for was a hung jury.

But the jury evidently took other things into consideration, particularly the influences by which the boy is surrounded at home, and concluded that no boy of 12 years has any right to be as free to use a deadly weapon as Chase Jackson Reid had demonstrated himself to be. The fact that the boy's stepfather had instructed him to shoot and shoot to kill—on at least one occasion, if he were molested, was probably the determining influence on the verdict.

Schemp, the stepfather, when on the witness stand yesterday gave testimony which will probably either send the boy to the reform school or result in his being placed on trial in the circuit court for murder. Schemp swore, as if it were the most natural thing in the world, that he himself had instructed the boy to use the revolver if any man attempted to enter the house.

"I told him to shoot and shoot to kill," said Schemp. "I told him he must not wound a man, because the man might still be able to do him some injury. He must kill him."

Schemp added that he had given the boy no instructions in the use of the revolver which was kept where the boy could get it at any time.

Other testimony as to the home surroundings of young Reid was of such a nature that the jury probably concluded he would be better off in the reform school than at his home on Government Island.

It is probable, also, that the attitude of the boy himself had a good deal to do with the verdict. He exhibits no remorse whatsoever for his act, seeming rather proud of what he has done and carrying himself as a hero. An acquittal would probably have confirmed him in this attitude.

The attorneys representing the state, who were Deputy District Attorneys Moxness and Vreeland and special counsel John H. Stevenson, expressed regret that there is no statute under which they can prosecute Schemp, the boy's stepfather, whom they hold to be the one really responsible for the tragedy. "They think it was undoubtedly his teachings and instructions that made young Reid so ready to take a human life."

The verdict rendered carries with it no punishment. It merely places the boy under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court as a "delinquent boy." Judge Moxness will sentence him to the reform school, if he thinks best, or may release him with a warning, or may order that the boy be held in the circuit court for trial under the indictment which charges him with murdering the first degree.

The attorneys for the defense moved for a new trial, and this motion will be argued this afternoon.

Charge Against Schemp.
A charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor child is to be brought against Charles H. Schemp, the stepfather of Chase Jackson Reid. A statement to that effect was made this morning by Deputy District Attorney Moxness, who said that he would himself make the charge.

This becomes possible through the verdict rendered yesterday by the jury in the trial of young Reid for delinquency through the killing of George F. De Mars. Schemp testified yesterday that he himself had instructed the boy to kill a man if he tried to enter the house. Schemp's whole testimony was such as to make it appear that the boy would probably never have thought of shooting De Mars if it had not been for the teachings of his stepfather and the general nature of his home surroundings.

Contributing to the delinquency of a minor child may under certain circumstances become a serious offense, punishable at the discretion of the court with imprisonment in the penitentiary.

AT THE THEATRES

Seat Sale for "Paid in Full."

Shepp's Comical Monkeys.
One of the greatest acts with Shepp's dog, pony and monkey circus at Pantheas theatre is the performing monkey, Angle Pace, who goes through a military drill with a gun—he works fast, and is very comical. Special matinee for children tomorrow afternoon.

THOUSANDS OF REPLIES IN EILERS CONTEST
Winners Will Probably Not Be Known Until Early Next Week.
Upwards of six thousand replies were received up to the official-closing time in the Great Counting Contest launched by Eilers Piano House in cooperation with a group of the largest and wealthiest eastern piano manufacturers. Although actually swamped with replies, through the systematic and careful method of sorting which has been adopted, much headway is being made. This work will be rushed as much as possible and the fortunate winners announced at the earliest moment. However, it is doubtful whether the judges will be able to reach a decision before the first of next week. The estimates submitted vary all the way from 10 up to $27,000, neither one of which is anywhere near the correct number.

Judges Are Well Known.
The awarding of the prizes will be entirely in the hands of a board of three disinterested judges, consisting of the following well-known gentlemen: Rev. Father H. J. McDevitt, Professor Frank Higley, City Superintendent of Schools and Tom Richardson, manager of the Commercial club.

The Eilers House is to be congratulated, not only on the great success of this notable contest, and the bonafide and straightforward method of awarding the prizes by a group of three totally disinterested individuals, but also the fact that they have been able to secure such eminent and well-known citizens to act as judges. It insures a square deal to everybody.

Salomes.
From London Punch.
The Clerkenwell magistrate has suggested that in future when papers tear up their clothing they shall not be given any other garments. It is thought that the result of this may be that some of the offenders may obtain valuable music hall engagements, to the advantage of the rates.

We are going to move to the Acheson Block—5th Street Opp. Meier & Frank's, and are offering our $15,000 stock of Chinese and Japanese Curios, Furniture, Silks, Satsuma Cloisonne, Brass Goods, Etc., at cost.

Care of Silver.
Pieces of silver that are seldom used should be wrapped in Canton flannel cases, never in flannels or other woollen as they absorb the moisture and cause the silver to tarnish. To clean silver rub with a mixture of whiting and Gold Dust washing powder. A good way to clean large pieces of silver that are covered with a great amount of ornaments, is to place them in a kettle of warm water in which has been dissolved a tablespoonful of Gold Dust washing powder. Line the kettle with pieces of cloth and lay pieces of cloth gradually to the boiling point. Rinse in clear, hot water, dry with soft towels and polish with chamois.
