

LONG BURIED TREASURE FOUND

Hoarded Wealth of Hans Johnson, Deceased, for Which Search Has Been Going on for 17 Years, Is Dug Up by Farm Hand.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Chehalis, Wash., Nov. 11.—A short time ago a can containing a roll of greenbacks was found buried under a stump on the farm of Hans Johnson, near Mayfield, a small town 25 miles southwest of this city. The money was in such a brittle state that the finders could not estimate the value, but from the bulk of the roll it is certain that it will aggregate several thousand dollars. It was sent to the treasury at Washington for appraisal and redemption. The money was buried by a man named Ransom Ball, who was killed at Mayfield, July 20, 1891, 17 years ago. It was supposed that he was in affluent circumstances and that he had his money buried somewhere on his place, but after his death a most exhaustive search of his premises failed to bring to light any of his treasure, and the hunt was given up years ago.

up against the wall with the rest," he ordered, and the astonished newcomer, taking one look at the yawning muzzle of the gun, hastened to do as instructed.
No attempt was made to search the man in the saloon, but taking the money from the cash drawer which Lutkemeler handed him, the fellow backed out of the door and disappeared in the fog, after calling back to his victims not to move for five minutes.
As soon as the robber had gone, Lutkemeler hastened to the telephone and called the police station and related what had happened. But it was 30 minutes, he says, before the police arrived, too late to take the trail of the robber.
An attempt was made to get a physician to come to the place where the wounded dog, but none could be obtained, and the dog, with the bullet in her lung which she had got in defense of her master, lay on the floor of the saloon all night.
This morning her master tried to lead her to his home, on East Tenth street between Ash and Ankeny, but the animal was too weak from loss of blood and sank to the ground before she had gone half way. An express wagon was called and she was loaded into it and taken home, where she now is being cared for.
Lutkemeler and his wife are much grieved over the injury to the dog, and will do everything possible to nurse her back to health. The dog is a splendid specimen of her kind, weighing about 155 pounds. She has been stolen several times, but has always been recovered.

Robber Loses Nerve.
The second holdup was of the Glendia saloon at 25 1/2 North Second street.

They've Never Used The Right Kind

That's why some women don't like naphtha soaps.

The right kind is P. & G. Naphtha Soap.

It is as much better than other naphtha soaps as they are better than ordinary laundry soaps.

Why is it better? Because it is made of better materials; because its washing power is greater; because, being harder, it will last longer; because it weighs more and does more.

Millions of cakes of P. & G. Naphtha Soap are made every month. Every single cake helps to make some woman's work easier. By using it, she is able to do as much work in an hour as her neighbors do, in two. That is a fact—a fact to which hundreds of housewives bear willing testimony.

the proprietor of which is M. Sankovich, and occurred earlier in the evening, 745 Commercial, although committed by the same man who later in the night held up F. W. Lutkemeler's salooning job which proved to be nothing. His lack of success was probably due to his nervousness. The attempt at robbery came near resulting in murder, the thug firing one shot, which, fortunately hit nobody.

Two men were seated at a table in the back of the room playing cards. They evidently took the holdup as a joke and began laughing. They stopped suddenly, though, when the gun in the robber's hand went off and a bullet struck the floor at their feet. They glanced and went through a partition back of them and lodged in the rear wall of the building. It is probable that the robber was nervous and fired the shot accidentally.

Alarmed by the noise and fearing that it would draw attention, the robber made no further attempt to carry out his plans, but hastily backed out of the room and fled.

LEO BEZEMER, KIDNAPER, CAUGHT

mer. Mrs. Foy began to tremble and grew very excited.
"Why do you tremble, right now?" chattered the trembling woman. "I'll lead you to his room."
With that Mrs. Foy entered the room while Mrs. Foy held the lamp. Bezemer was found asleep. Meek walked over to the bed and shook the sleeper. Bezemer opened his eyes, but when he saw the three of us, he sat up in bed. He was terribly excited. Hill slipped the handcuffs on him.
"What have I done?" stammered Bezemer.
"We wanted to know why he asked such a question and he told us he was mixed up in a shooting scrape near Marysville two weeks ago, when the posse was close to his heels."
Silent as to English Affairs.
"Although Bezemer would not admit that he had killed a man, he admitted and grew calmer when he learned that Deputy Sheriff R. K. Dunham, who was shot at Marysville by one of Sheriff Hill's posse, was not killed."
Bezemer, who had been silent, asked him if he fired any shots at the posse, but he evaded the questions.
He asked him to speak in English, but he absolutely refused to tell us anything about the affair. After talking with the police several times, quite calm and we removed the handcuffs to allow him to dress. We searched his clothes and room for weapons, but none was found. He would not tell us where his guns were, but I think he cached them a short distance from Foy's home.
"On our way into Seattle Bezemer talked freely of his successful attempts to elude the Seattle county officers. He told us he worked in several logging camps between Marysville and Mukilteo and laughed heartily when he was told that a posse was threshing about in the woods for him."
Close to Tracy's Record.
Bezemer's flight from Mount Vernon to Bitter Lake, the longest record of traveling over more ground with more men at his heels than any other fugitive since the spectacular chase of Harry Tracy, the outlaw, who left a trail of death in his path in 1902.

Aided by friends who placed every obstacle in the path of pursuit, Bezemer backtracked and made short jumps with such bewildering frequency that the Seattle county officers could not find him again. It was not until Harry McDermott's bloodhounds were used that anything like systematic pursuit was employed. But even the hounds were baffled, because the fugitive hustled from place to place in buggies and on log trains. The fact that he put 75 miles, the distance across Snohomish county, between his pursuers and himself was entirely due to the efforts of friends. Despite the publicity given to his movements Bezemer made his way into Everett three days ago and worked in a logging camp two miles below the city for one day.

NAMES BANKS FOR STRAUS' PLACE MOTIONS FOR NEW TRIAL DENIED

Minto Discharges Accused Cashier From Service Under Orders From Washington—Successor From Registry Department.

Zachary T. Banks, formerly of the registry division, is the new cashier in the Portland postoffice. Mr. Banks assumed his duties this morning. He succeeds Charles A. Straus, who was suspended some time ago as the result of an alleged shortage in his accounts and was yesterday bound over by United States Commissioner Cannon to await the action of the next federal grand jury. The charge against Straus is embezzlement of a trifling more than $4,000. Straus has been discharged from the department. Postmaster Minto received instructions from Washington several days ago to take this action, but he delayed making the appointment of Straus' successor until after the decision of the commissioner as to whether or not Straus should be held. Following the commissioner's report of yesterday, Mr. Minto announced the appointment of Mr. Banks as cashier this morning.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

GIRL'S SUTOR IS CHASED WITH GUN

Only two years ago Clem Bigger, or Belker, a Russian, went through the ordeal at the wife-beater's whipping-post, yet last evening he made an attack upon the home of his former wife and is again in trouble.

Clem Bigger Creates Disturbance at Home of Former Wife.

A caller upon his daughter suffered first. The young man was about to knock at the door of the house at 317 Stanton street last evening, when Bigger, who was waiting outside, ordered him away. The command was not readily complied with and Bigger drew a revolver and chased the caller down the street for a block. He then returned to his stand in front of the house, and demanded entrance. This was refused, so he fired several shots, none of which injured anyone inside.

By this time the young man who was giving a call upon Bigger's daughter, had found Patrolman Russell. They found Bigger standing at the entrance of a saloon at Williams avenue and Ivy street and he instantly put his hand toward his hip pocket. Russell covered Bigger with his gun, and the Russian at last surrendered his weapon. A charge of carrying a concealed weapon was placed against him until some serious pulmonary trouble could be filed. Bigger's wife obtained a divorce from him after he had beaten her and had been punished by the whipping-post, and he had been warned not to annoy her.

Proof of Watch Trust Extortion

CONGRESSMAN MADE THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT IN DISCUSSING TARIFF REFORMS

"Let me give you another striking instance. Go to a certain dealer and you can purchase from the lowest to the highest grade of watches at a fraction more than one half the price you can buy them for at any other store in the country."
"Why is this? This dealer went abroad and bought the watches made by the American manufacturers at one half the price in the London market that they can be bought for in the American markets. If anybody desires the correspondence upon this subject and the numbers of the watches and their makes and their prices, I will furnish him with them at any time."
"The four watch companies—the Waltham, Elgin, Keystone and the Crescent—control the American output, and they have a written contract with every jobber in the United States that their watches cannot be sold in the United States below a certain figure, but in Europe they sell them at one half the price that they have put them to the American public. This man went to Europe and bought the watches and he is now in the advertisement, offering them, from the Riverside Maximus, which is the finest Waltham watch, down to the lowest grade, at a price a little more than one half that at which you can buy them anywhere else."

Thursday, Nov. 13
