JOE CANNON IS CONGRESS, YET

Tariff Revision Predestined to Fail—Taft as a Stand-patter.

By John E. Lathrop.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 12.—On every hand I find in Washington a deep-seated conviction that the tariff reduction program is not likely to be carried out.
Washington is nearly always out of touch with the country-wide sentiment; but as to probabilities for any given legislative program, the capital city is expert. Self-contained as it is on election information it knows what congressmen are likely to do, and one hears little dissent from the proposition that the "stand-patters" have won out.
The election of the Republican national ticket carries with it complete endorsement of James Schoolcraft Sherman, who has been a member of Speaker Cannon's committee on rules—that automatic body which, literally, rules the house.
Also, Cannon's reelection from the Danville congressional district is a local endorsement, and the reelection of John D. Daniel to congress from Pennsylvania, with the return of Seneca E. Payne from New York and James A. Tawney from Minnesota, gives complete and official voucher for the speaker to assert that the people have affirmed his policies in toto, for, in the face of an open fight on "jocannism," the Republicans hold firmly their house majority.

"By its friends," goes.
"By its friends," then, the tariff policy of the past 12 years will be maintained, which is taken here almost universally to mean the Dingley schedule will be disturbed at no vital point.
There will be a surface pretense at least, but it is improbable to discover any one who should know, who looks for a move not desired by the Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, New Jersey and New England long-time beneficiaries of the purely protective and paternalistic system of import duties.
Taft Virtually Stand-patter.
Judge Taft is unanimously on record in favor of raising the duties on pottery and crockery and china, as witness his East Liverpool, Ohio, speech; of maintaining duties on refined sugar—witness his Denver and other Colorado and Michigan speeches, while his references to tariff reduction have been so vague as to leave him absolutely bound to no specific reductions.
When these pieces of fact are put together—Taft's utterances, the platform pledge, the triumph of Cannon, Payne, Daniel and Tawney, and the retention of a Republican house majority—they form a political pattern designed by the now admittedly too highly protected factories, a pattern which is not regarded as harmonizing with the style of ornateness pleasing to the tariff reductionists—Democrats or Republicans.
True, Judge Taft said something in Iowa to the farmers about revisions, but it was not specific, and anyway there's the triumph of Cannon, Payne, Daniel, Tawney and Sherman to be reckoned with by the incoming president.
One house official, who lives by the smile of Joe Cannon, said:
"I guess that will hold those tariff reductionists awfully; don't you think so?"
I could not, nor could I find anyone else who was informed, who could aver to the contrary.
However, that a spirited fight will be made by the liberals of both parties to force reduction is to be expected. It will engender the bitterest sort of internecine warfare in the Republican party. Murdoch of Kansas and Lenroot and Cooper of Wisconsin in the house, and La Follette and Bristow in the senate will battle for relief from tariff exactions.

Those indeterminate quantities, especially in the house, who never yet have developed backbone enough to oppose Joe Cannon, but who have skulked about the corridors, afraid to adopt an affirmative attitude, will in most instances remain negatively if not positively adjuncts of the Joe Cannon machine, joining the opposition only when they learn, if such a thing shall come to pass, that Cannon has lost his dictatorship in the lower import program.
LaFollette May Lead Fight.
I am in possession of information, by the way, that LaFollette will manufacture some fireworks, ready to give an excellent imitation of a senator making a lower tariff demand. Indeed, it is by no means improbable that he will be the general manager of the tariff reduction fireworks factory, notwithstanding all revenue bills originate in the house.
However that may be, the fireworks are due to begin almost any time after congress convenes, and the Sixth Congress may know that the explosives have been touched off even before Christmas.
Here will be a chance for a real mix-up: for LaFollette in the last week of the campaign openly attacked the Republican platform expression on the tariff, and declared merry war thereon.
I am sure, however, that New England, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and New Jersey will boss the revision job, with a lot of "spineless shrimps," to borrow Tom Lawson's phrase, refusing to do aught but remain negative factors, even though in many instances their constituencies plainly demand tariff reduction.
The steam power in use in the world today is estimated at 120,000,000 horsepower.

HEAVY FINES AND PRISON FOR THREE

Ames S. Johnston, a former deputy United States commissioner, was fined $500, the court holding that he had allowed himself to be used by others in connection with a fraudulent scheme against the United States.
The four Curry county men, all of whom are out on bond, immediately began arranging to pay the fines imposed.
The amount of bond for Smith and Hedderly was raised from $5,000 to $10,000 in each case. The bond of Hynes was advanced from $2,000 to $4,000.
Asks for Stay.
Marcus C. McLemore, counsel for the three defendants given jail sentences, immediately asked the court for a stay of execution and at the same time gave notice of appeal. He was given 60 days' time in which to file a bill of exceptions to the sentence imposed by Judge Wolverton.
Smith, Hedderly and Hynes were ordered into the custody of the United States marshal until they could make arrangements to give the additional bond which had been provided for by the court. As soon as this is arranged they will be allowed their liberty, pending the outcome of the appeal.
Dr. Hedderly made a statement to the court in his own behalf before sentence was imposed. He said that he had been financial and general manager of the Pacific Furniture & Lumber company, first having been connected with the concern through Dr. Goodwin, of Los Angeles. When he entered his duties with the company, he said, a statement submitted to him by Dr. Goodwin showed large tracts of land in Curry all of which had been sold to the company by Jones, and four mills, three steamships, three factories, stores and three borrowing accounts.
Statements Untrue.
Later, Dr. Hedderly said, he discovered that the statements were not true. He said no land from any source had come into possession of the company after he had joined its forces. He said that he had no motive for land fraud and that he would have withdrawn from the company had he known that the statements given him by Dr. Goodwin to have been false.
Hynes also made a statement to the court, saying that he had never sold a share of stock in the company to any one who had agreed to take up a timber claim for the company. Jones had told him, he said, that the stock was being sold for the purpose of buying steamships.
John Manning appealed for leniency for Smith on the ground that he had been led into the scheme through the influence of Jones, saying that Smith was a better man now than Jones was dead.
Mr. McLemore, appearing for the defendants, said he thought conviction was largely due to his own fault and asked for leniency in sentencing the men. He said the ones who were really responsible for the inauguration of the company were not the defendants in the case.
Stewart Pleads Guilty.
Stewart, who pleaded guilty, was represented by counsel who made a statement, saying that his client had been connected with the history of Oregon and always had a good reputation. He was technically guilty only, he said.
Mr. Becker for the government said but little as he thought the government had done its part and that the court was familiar with the situation to know whether some of the men had made statements on the stand which were the same as those made before the court at this time.

Judge Wolverton reviewed the case and giving the reasons of the court for carrying out the letter of the law. He said the scheme was a vicious one and had been organized by Jones to defraud the government of a large area of timber land. A part of the scheme was to defraud various individuals.
History of Case.
The Los Angeles conspiracy case, as it has been known, has been one of the largest and the hardest fought legal battles that the government prosecutors have had to contend with in connection with the Oregon land fraud cases begun some years ago. The land in question is in Curry county, Oregon, and the claim of the government was that the members of the Pacific Furniture Lumber company entered into a conspiracy to defraud the United States of something like 30,000 acres of timber lands.
In all about 18 persons were indicted because the defendants fought removal from the jurisdiction of the California federal courts. October 12, this year, the case against Smith, Hedderly, Richard Hynes, Lee E. Myers and Jeremiah Huntley was called by Judge Wolverton in the federal court. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Huntley and Myers.
For the prosecution John McCourt, United States district attorney, and Tracy C. Becker, special assistant to the attorney-general, appeared. The defendants were represented by Marcus C. McLemore, of Los Angeles, and John Manning of Portland. The trial lasted nearly three weeks.
