HUNDREDS AT OPENING DAY

Educational Congress at Walla Walla Will Surpass All Expectations — Dr. Pearsons Gives Sound Advice to Students.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Walla Walla, Wash., Nov. 17.—With an attendance larger than the college authorities had even hoped for, the educational congress opened this morning, with many hundreds of visitors from outside points. Interest in the congress is high, and the two days' session promises to be one of exceptional interest.

Among the distinguished visitors are Dean Alfred E. Burton of the Boston Institute of Technology, who arrived yesterday; Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes Jr. of Yale, who arrived this morning, and President Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota, who also arrived this morning.

Dr. Pearsons arrived last Friday, and is a guest at the home of President S. B. L. Penrose. Yesterday morning at the chapel exercises of Whitman college he took occasion to rap college athletics and to express his opinion in regard to helping young men through college. In part he said:

Raps College Athletics.

"Get your athletic exercises by hoeing vegetables before breakfast, earning money for your support. It will do you as much good physically and more good mentally, than football or other sports.

"Any boy who has the spirit and the energy can go through college. There are, I am told, many boys who are working their way through college here without any aid from outside. But none of them can tell the story I can tell. For five years I boarded myself, cooked my own meals, kept my own room, did all my own work and waxed fat in the doing and was at all times healthy.

"It makes me sick when a man approaches me and asks me why I do not help this boy or that boy by lending him or giving him money. Would he have me spoil him? The boy doesn't need it. He is better off without it. I have helped many boys, and my aid has been abused.

"The best work I ever did was to help seven young women. I started by paying their tuition, board and all expenses. But I tired of the everlasting demand for money and built four houses near the Northwestern university, and the rent of these houses is sending seven girls through college all the time. The houses will always be kept up and seven girls will always be kept in college. It has been a paying investment.

"But boys do not need help. They have energy and ability to get through college without it, if they only will. Rent a patch of ground near the campus, plant vegetables and get your exercise in the morning hoeing the ground instead of later in the day by playing football. Then you will have a chance to think good thoughts while you are working. Any boy who wishes to can get through college without aid. Let him fight his own battles. It will do him good. But let him never forget character, which is above all, and most important."

At the close of his speech, despite the jolt he had handed athletics, Dr. Pearsons was given an ovation by the students, and three cheers and a college yell ended a remarkable demonstration in his honor.

Opening of the Congress.

Today the congress opened with an address by the chairman of the board of overseers, followed by President Penrose, who spoke on "Whitman College, Its Organization and Present Status." Dean A. W. Hendrick followed him with an illustrated address upon "The Greater Whitman; Its Purpose to Become the Representative Private Institution of the Northwest." Dean Alfred E. Burton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, opened the afternoon meeting with an address on the subject, "The Economic Value to the Pacific Northwest of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Were Transplanted From Boston to Walla Walla."

Tonight Dr. Cyrus Northrop of the University of Minnesota, who is representing state universities at the congress, will speak on "Is a Great Private Institution Located in the Same Territory a Benefit or a Hindrance to the Institutions Supported by the State?"

Following this address receptions will be held in four places for the guests who are attending the congress. At the home of President S. B. L. Penrose one reception is to be given, another will be given at the home of Acting President L. F. Anderson, a third at the home of John W. Langdon, and the fourth at Reynolds Hall, the girls' dormitory, where the students will entertain.

Banquet Promises Big.

The banquet promises to outdo anything ever held in this city. At $10 a plate, every place at the table was eagerly taken and seating space in the balcony is selling for $5. At this banquet Dr. Pearsons has promised something extraordinary, and it is hinted that he will announce a large gift to the college.

Speaking of the movement for the greater Whitman, and of the educational congress, Dean Burton of Boston, who arrived yesterday, said last evening:

"Whitman's movement for the greater school she has planned to be is a commendable one. It is, as I have seen it, entirely feasible and one which should interest any one who takes cognizance of higher education. As I understand it, there is no great technical school in this part of the country, and the value of such a school as is planned here is inestimable, not only to Walla Walla, but to the whole northwest. That I shall show in my speech tomorrow night. Whitman can easily become this school and I am satisfied she will.

Northwest and Whitman.

"I am greatly impressed with the surroundings of the school, and the field of labor the graduates of such a school would have. Undeveloped waterpower, railroads building, everything that can afford a field for a technical expert, is furnished here. It is a great country, this Pacific northwest, and its development could easily be hastened by the establishment of the greater Whitman. In fact, I know of no better way to hasten the development of the country."

Chapel exercises at the college were led this morning by Bishop Funston of the Protestant Episcopal church of Idaho. Tomorrow morning Rev. A. M. Mathews of Seattle will lead the devotional exercises.

BAR ASSOCIATION

$249.80, leaving a balance on hand of $163.45.

The report of the grievance committee usually creates considerable excitement, but this time it was very pacific in its nature. The committee, of which A. L. Flegel is chairman, Frank S. Grant secretary and Ralph B. Fisher prosecutor, reported that it had had no occasion to file charges against any member of the bar before the supreme court.

A number of cases, however, had been left over by the former grievance committee. These were against John F. Watts and Marion R. Biggs. The latter was tried and convicted in the United states court, on a criminal charge, but the decision of the court was later reversed, and this was considered as clearing Mr. Biggs of the charges placed against him by the Bar association. The committee was, therefore, instructed not to file any further charges against him.

Two cases against H. C. King had been considered, three against J. A. Finch, one against John F. Watts and two against J. H. Hitchings.

Would Pay Prosecutor.

The committee acknowledged its obligation to prosecutor, Ralph B. Fisher, for his work and recommended that if possible a salary of $25 a month be paid the prosecutor hereafter.

The report of the executive committee contained a recommendation that resolutions be adopted relative to the death of former president Judge Hailey. This recommendation was adopted and the secretary instructed to transmit to Mrs. Hailey a copy of the resolution. The committee also recommended that harder work be done toward trying to increase the membership of the association.

The committee on legal education and admission to the bar reported that during the year it had considered the applications of about 75 persons to become members of the Oregon bar. In each case five letters had been sent out inquiring into the moral fitness of the applicant, yet in no instance was the committee compelled to report adversely. This was considered as an indication of the fact that the moral tone of all applicants for admission to the bar is high. The committee also reported that the law school of the university is in a flourishing condition.

Reports on Legislation.

The committee on legislation, of which George W. Thomas is chairman, submitted a short report, appended to which was the report of a subcommittee appointed to draft a measure amending the existing legislation in regard to tenancy. This committee submitted the draft of the proposed measure, and the report was received and laid on the table, to be taken up in the regular order of business tomorrow.

Before adjournment for the morning was taken, several resolutions were introduced, all of which will come up for action tomorrow morning. Ralph B. Fisher offered three. One was the Heney resolution. Another was a recommendation that a salary of $250 a year be appropriated for the prosecutor of the Bar association. The third says:

"Be it resolved, That we favor the adoption of more stringent rules and requirements for the admission of applicants to the bar of this state," and recommends to the supreme court that that body appoint seven members of the bar of the supreme court to constitute a board of law examiners whose duty it shall be to examine applicants for admission to practice law in this state touching their qualifications in learning and ability in the law, under such rules and regulations as they may prescribe therefor.

A resolution was offered by J. N. Teal indorsing the bill introduced into the senate of the United States increasing the salary of United States circuit judges to $10,000 a year and that of district judges to $9,000.

Tribute to Judge Hailey.

In preface to his annual address, Mr. Montague expressed the profound sorrow of the association for the untimely death of Judge Thomas G. Hailey, who was elected president of the association at its last annual meeting, but did not live to assume the duties of the office. A high tribute was paid to the legal attainments of the dead jurist and to his high qualities as a citizen.

Mr. Montague's address was, in accordance with a long-established custom, largely devoted to a review of the important legislation of the preceding year. No legislature having met since the last session of the association, he turned his attention to the measures submitted to the people at the last June election and reviewed from the standpoint of a lawyer the bills and constitutional amendments that were approved or rejected, dealing at length with each.

"The first constitutional amendment submitted by the legislature," he said, "was of section 29 of article 4, of the constitution, which prescribes the pay of the members of that body. By the amendment the compensation was increased from $3 to $10 per day. This measure was defeated by a sufficiently decisive majority of about 50,000. This result is in some part due to that intense dislike which the voters usually display to increase of official salaries, and all other forms of expense, of which more will be said hereafter.

Slap at Legislature.

"It is impossible, however, not to see in it some reflection of the poor esteem in which legislators are held by the very voters who elect them. The fact that the proposers of this measure did not take the pains to verify the section which they sought to amend, but offered their amendment as to section 28, when they manifestly and necessarily intended section 29, might by a hostile minded critic be thought to afford some little evidence that this poor esteem is not wholly unwarranted.

"A lawyer who, with plenty of time at his disposal, would make a similar blunder in a matter of such grave importance would certainly afford the text for caustic editorials in the public press upon the decadence and general worthlessness of the legal profession; and indeed might be generally thought to deserve these animadversions. Moreover he would quite certainly lose his client, while nobody seems to care much whether a legislator displays ordinary sense, so long as his views on the senatorial succession are in accord with the prevailing sentiment; and here, in all probability, lies the secret of the inefficiency of legislators.

"The bulk of their work has nothing whatever to do with questions of national politics. They are held accountable for nothing else, and the result is what might be expected."

Commenting upon the defeat of the amendment to increase the number of supreme court judges, Mr. Montague attributed the result to the strong prejudice that exists to increasing the number of salaried officers, together with "a deep rooted conservatism with the respect to the form of the courts, which in Oregon curiously jogs elbows with a vigorous and unshrinking radicalism in respect to the legislative branch of the government."

Mr. Montague said he was of the opinion that the incorporation into the amendment of a provision transferring to the circuit courts the jurisdiction of the probate courts, was a tactical error, and also expressed the belief that had as strong a fight been made for this amendment as was made for the university bill, the measure would have been saved from defeat.

In conclusion Mr. Montague said that while legislatures have been exceedingly conservative and slow to receive or act upon the results of scholars and investigators, if the results thus far had in Oregon are typical, it would appear "that the people are disposed to trust themselves fearlessly to such political theories as have the stamp of scholarly and intellectual approval, and that direct legislation, whatever may be its fields, will smack more of the university than of the caucus and the barroom."

Following is the program for the two days' session of the association:

Tuesday—Morning: President's address; presentation of applications for membership; report of committees. Afternoon: "Law of Water Conservation and Use"; papers by Will R. King, commissioner supreme court; James E. Babb, Lewiston, Idaho; Roscoe R. Johnson, Hermiston, Or.

UPWARD START

After Changing From Coffee to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of coffee with the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is often the case with talented persons. There is a simple, easy way to get rid of coffee evils and a Tennessee lady's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was 15 I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun.

"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I finally quit coffee and drank hot water, but there was so little food I could digest, I was literally starving; was so weak I could not sit up long at a time.

"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat—felt strengthened. That was about five years ago and, after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, today I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady.

"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start, was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee." "There's a Reason."

SHE LEFT US; IS NOW BACK

Our traveler writes from Reading, Pennsylvania, as follows:

"Druggist Samuel Bell of this city "today told me of two cases here, one "a lady fifty-eight years old, who took "twelve bottles of our Renal Compound "and was doing well. Becoming impatient, she dropped off and went under "the treatment of two of the most "prominent physicians in Reading, and "instead of getting better became "worse. Result—She is back on our "Renal Compound and is again getting "along nicely.

"Bell also told me of the case of a "traveling man who had to quit the "road. He went on the Renal Compound and is today back at work."

All of which means that inflammation of the kidneys, which has resisted all known treatment, commonly yields to Fulton's Renal Compound.

The sensible procedure for a man with kidney trouble is to take the only known specific for Bright's Disease. The reason is clear, both kidney trouble and Bright's Disease are forms of kidney inflammation, and a specific for the most serious and stubborn form is a specific for both. There is only one safe procedure for the thoughtful man who has kidney trouble.

RECEIVER SUES BANK DIRECTORS

Highest Kind of Finance Alleged in Case of Nevada Institution.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Carson City, Nev., Nov. 17.—The affairs of the defunct State Bank & Trust company are further complicated today by the filing of a suit against the directors of the bank by Receiver Frank Wildes for securities he alleges were allowed to pass out of the hands of the bank after it had failed. Each director is sued individually for the money alleged to be due the bank. It is stated that the bank commissioners will be sued if the report that they sanctioned the transactions is shown to be true. Donald MacKenzie, who has offered to take the bank over, is here taking a hand in the affair and declares the new suits will greatly complicate his work.

The complaints declare that by reason of these transfers of gilt edge securities the depositors of the bank were deprived of assets they might have had and were entitled to. It is alleged that the transfers were made after it was known that the bank was insolvent.

It is stated here today that suits will be brought to recover the last dividend of the bank, which, it is alleged, was declared after the bank was insolvent. All the directors are under indictment as a result of the failure of the bank.

DEFEATED CANDIDATE CONTESTS ELECTION

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Wallace, Idaho, Nov. 17.—Notice of a contest of election was filed here this morning by Joseph P. Keane, defeated Republican candidate for state senator. The official count gave A. G. Kerns, Democrat, a majority of five, after the unofficial count had shown Keane elected by 22. Keane claims that in about one half of the precincts in the county enough legal votes were cast to elect him and were not counted through the misapprehension of the election judges of the law dealing with the matter. The hearing has been set for November 30. The application contains the names of 50 witnesses.
