GREAT "DRY" MAP OF THE W. C. T. U. SHOWS THE WONDERFUL ADVANCE OF PROHIBITION

By Ada Wallace Unruh.

There have been national conventions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union before the recent one in Denver, in fact there have been 35 or more, but none have measured up to this one in enthusiasm and reports of actual work done. Because of the impending election which in many cases involved matters of temperance interest which necessitated the presence of women at home, the delegation was not so large as usual, but the women more than made up in enthusiasm what was lacking in numbers. The convention was held in the great auditorium which was built for the Democratic convention and it was none too large to accommodate the crowds that were attracted by the day as well as the evening sessions.

Oregon was represented by a full delegation. All the state officers save Mrs. Shane were there, as was Mrs. Neal Inman, the president of the central union, Portland.

The first thing that greeted the eye when coming into the convention hall was a giant motto above the platform which read "The Nation Is Going Dry," and indeed it seemed to be fairly on the way when the great "dry" map which has been made with such painstaking care to secure accuracy, was swung above the presiding officer's chair. Aside from the mountain states the whole country seems to be blossoming out in white, washed clean from the stain of the saloon. Seldom does a convention gathering witness such enthusiasm as swept the hall like a storm when this map first appeared. Small copies can be seen at the state headquarters of the W. C. T. U. in this city, and it would be well for such as are doubtful of temperance victories to study it.

The Advance of the Year.

In the wide review given by Mrs. Stevens in her president's address which is always an important feature of the convention, much place was given to the great advance of the past year, particularly to the extension of prohibition territory and the splendid enforcement of the law. A careful analysis of ex-Governor Peck's attempt to prove prohibition a failure showed the utter untruthfulness of his contention, and cited proof sufficient for one who was willing to be convinced that prohibition is of incalculable benefit wherever it has been won.

Reference was made to the tribute paid to our organization by the director of the department of archives and history in Mississippi at the time the pen with which the governor of that state signed the prohibitory bill, was presented. An extract from an address quoting from Governor Glenn of North Carolina is of special interest. Governor Glenn said: "I took the oath of office to do everything in my power for the agricultural, industrial, educational and moral upbuilding of the state and the last words of this oath were: 'This will I do, so help me God. I then felt the solemnity of that oath and I have felt it ever since. In carrying out my oath I felt that as a business, educational and religious proposition there was nothing that I could do that would so build up the commonwealth as to rid the state of the manufacture and sale of strong drink, and one of the first things I did was to make a pledge to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union that I would devote every energy of my intellect and body to banish the drink demon forever from the borders of the state."

Due time was given to recounting the victories of Alabama, Oklahoma and Georgia, while Illinois, with nearly 90 per cent of the territory dry, was duly illuminated. Forty millions of people in the United States were declared to be living in saloonless territory.

Judge Lindsay Given Oration.

An event which next to Mrs. Stevens' address, aroused enthusiasm, was the presentation of "The Kids' Judge," as he is lovingly called by the boys of Denver, Judge Ben B. Lindsay, a friend and collaborator of the W. C. T. U. He was greeted with an ovation and in an earnest address gave some salient points of his work. While holding that his work was of grave importance, he said: "I am dealing with effects, you are dealing with causes. The home can not be protected as long as the saloon is over against it. Referring to the juvenile court work he said: "As much as we all love that work, and however important it may be, there is no work for the child which, in my judgment, can compare with what you are doing in your splendid organization. The bosses say that I will not be elected, but I believe that you will be in this state and I still have hope that I will be left to do the work that I love."

It is needless to tell the readers of this paper that the women of Colorado justified his faith in them and he was selected by a large majority. Benefit night was the great night of the convention. On this night the state presidents of states that have made a gain in membership during the past year had an opportunity aside from the reports that have been made at other times to tell of their triumphs and plans for their respective states.

Oregon Heard From.

Oregon by virtue of a goodly growth in W. C. T. U. membership, was represented by the state president, Mrs. Henrietta Brown of Albany. She said in part:

"Oregon is the land of big red apples (at this point the delegation raised waving in air samples of the Oregon fruit on pointed sticks), beautiful women and many men. Oregon also enjoys the distinction of being the first state to adopt the initiative and referendum law, which provides that an election may be held every two years upon any measure desired by the people. Under this law and our good local option law, 21 counties have been placed upon the 'dry' list and in the 12 'wet' counties there are 101 dry precincts. The recall law enables the people to recall any official who fails in the performance of his duty. Through the W. C. T. U. an amendment to the constitution known as 'the home rule amendment' which if passed would have largely annulled the local option law, was defeated. The market inspector of Portland is a woman and we have one woman on the regular police force of the same city."

Following Mrs. Brown's address the state song was sung and the "well" given with true western enthusiasm, as follows:

DISTRIBUTE FLOWERS AND DELICACIES TO POOR AND SICK

Flower Mission Workers Ready for Day's Labors.

The Portland Fruit and Flower mission has adopted a new method for the distribution of provisions, fruits, clothing and flowers to the worthy poor and sick of the city. Every Thursday morning the workers in this voluntary service gather at the day nursery, which is maintained by the Fruit and Flower mission for the care of little children of working mothers, and from there go to their errands of mercy with full baskets.

This year the Fruit and Flower mission is making an appeal to the public for any such articles as can be distributed to sick people, to invalids and to the poor. Any article of household use, food or clothing can be used, but the officers particularly desire the following: Money, fruits, flour, wines, alcohol, groceries, jellies, canned goods, cereals, beef extract, condensed milk, poultry, pies, bread, fresh vegetables.

A large storehouse has been built to accommodate the supplies from which the mission draws for its charities, but as the calls are many and the supplies light, the officers of the society have —a few "fit" suggestions concerning that new winter suit

Roominess is just as important in a suit as it is in a nightshirt. There is no reason in the world why the body should be cramped for room when awake any more than when asleep.

A well-fitting suit must be cut full, so as to adjust itself naturally and symmetrically to the wearer's figure.

The "drawing" or wrinkling across the shoulders, characteristic of many poorly-fitted suits, is caused by unscientific drafting and by trying to save material in the cutting.

No suit, cut on narrow, niggardly patterns, can possibly fit.

Columbia-Tailored Clothes are cut generously full, but without exaggerations that make them conspicuous—that give them the "hand-me-down" look.

They are exact in size, accurate in balance and true in drape. Every detail of fashion, fabric and finish is unerringly correct. That's why Columbia-Tailored clothes have gained such a foothold in the estimation of good dressers.

You can find a pattern in our stock that will meet your ideas exactly and at a price you will feel is reasonable.

Columbia-Tailored suits, made-to-your-own-measure, $20 to $50. Made by Portland tailors.

RESERVATION LANDS

Siletz Indians Are Now Eager to Sell Their Lands.

The Siletz Reservation, embracing an area of about 50 square miles, is that portion of Lincoln county lying north of the Yaquina river and bordering on the Pacific ocean, running as far north as the Tillamook county line. This country generally is a timbered section, with the exception of the land lying along its two big rivers, the Siletz and Salmon rivers. Here is to be found about 50,000,000,000 feet of the best timber in the state of Oregon and lying along the two large rivers are thousands of acres of rich river bottom and grazing lands except the same as that in Tillamook county, which has been converted into the richest dairy section of the state and is sold as high as $100 per acre.

The country between the Salmon river and the Siletz bay is generally rolling prairie country, a distance of about nine miles. Here is located a beautiful large fresh water lake by the name of Devil's Lake. This lake lies between rolling hills and affords excellent fishing and hunting, as also does the Salmon river and the Siletz. In this section of the country between the Siletz river and Salmon river is one of the most scenic countries of the west, especially beautiful as a resort. The section of the reservation as here described is mostly inhabited by whites, while up the Siletz river a distance of about 40 miles, is located the government agency where the habitation is mostly Indians.

The building of the coast railroad, or even of good wagon roads, into this region, will make it one of the finest dairy sections of the state. The development of this rich section has been retarded until now on account of the Indians being unable to sell their lands. Many of them now, however, are getting their patents from the government and, as is usual with Indians, they are eager to convert their lands into money at remarkably low prices.

Ralph Akeley, who conducts one of the largest general real estate businesses in Portland, is doing a great deal to promote these Indian lands. He knows the country perfectly and has some excellent maps of the coast counties which may be had by calling at his office at 603 Corbett building.
