Riverside Is Undoubtedly the Best Orchard Tract in the Willamette Valley Today

It is the old Braley ranch, known all over Oregon as A FARM THAT WILL GROW ANYTHING. The Riverside Orchards Tracts are ONLY EIGHT MINUTES FROM McMinnville, "THE WALNUT CITY," in Yamhill county, at the junction of the Yamhill and Willamette rivers. Already FOUR Southern Pacific Railway TRAINS run DAILY to and from Portland to the Orchards, and the OREGON ELECTRIC proposes to have ALMOST AN HOURLY SERVICE. The Braley ranch cost nearly four times as much as land used for walnut purposes generally costs, and yet we are selling as cheap as anyone else in this line.

A Riverside Orchard Is a Bargain--Buy One Now

The Riverside Orchards have been planted to walnuts, because WALNUTS REQUIRE LITTLE CARE; ARE EASY TO HARVEST, DO NOT SPOIL--and INCREASE IN RETURNS EACH YEAR for centuries.

One Prominent Man Has Said To Us: "I AM NOT OFFERING MY ORCHARD FOR SALE, BUT HOLDING FOR A PERMANENT INVESTMENT, AND CONSIDER IT AS GOOD OR BETTER THAN A LIFE INSURANCE POLICY."

It is not unusual for a walnut orchard to yield A STEADY INCOME OF $400 PER ACRE PER YEAR, netting the owner of a ten-acre orchard the splendid return of $4,000 a year. The Thomas Prince orchard, which is only six miles from the Riverside Orchards, harvested last year 18,000 pounds from 1,500 trees, many of them yielding over 100 pounds each. Frank Diehm, another Willamette valley walnut-raiser, harvested TEN BUSHELS FROM ONE TREE and sold them for FIFTY-FOUR DOLLARS.

It is NOT NECESSARY TO LIVE ON YOUR TRACT to take care of it, although those WHO WANT TO have a farm of their own CAN LIVE THERE and by RAISING SMALL FRUITS make A BIG INCOME from a small tract. In addition, WE CAN GIVE WORK to those who want it.

We Take Care of Your Orchard for Four Years Absolutely Free

MR. J. R. SHEPARD of SALEM, who is in charge of the planting and WILL SUPERINTEND THE RIVERSIDE ORCHARDS for the next four years, is an expert in horticulture. The BRITISH COLUMBIA GOVERNMENT called upon Mr. Shepard in their recent fair, and MR. SHEPARD acted as SOLE JUDGE OF THE HORTICULTURE EXHIBIT.

In other words, the best man obtainable is in charge at RIVERSIDE ORCHARDS. THIS IS A GUARANTEE that the tracts will be kept in the FINEST CONDITION.

NEWS FORECAST OF COMING WEEK

Chief Event Is Thanksgiving--Big Auto Race Thursday at Savannah.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—A variety of events will occupy the attention of newspaper readers in this country during the coming week, and near the top of the list will be the celebration of the great American holiday of Thanksgiving, with the indispensable dinner of turkey and cranberry sauce. Of the three men who have been most in the public eye recently, President Roosevelt will eat his Thanksgiving dinner at the White House; President-elect Taft, according to present plans, will be at Hot Springs, Va., and William J. Bryan will pass the holiday in Mexico, where he has gone to recuperate from the fatigues of the late campaign. On the afternoon of Thanksgiving day the president will attend to the laying of the cornerstone of the Negro Y. M. C. A. building that is being erected in this city. On the day previous he will attend the unveiling of the statue to General "Phil" Sheridan that has been erected at the intersection of Massachusetts avenue and Twenty-third street. The unveiling is to be a great occasion. The president will speak and there will be a considerable military display. The Indiana monument erected in the Andersonville National cemetery will be dedicated Thursday with interesting ceremony. Governor Hanly and other representatives of the state of Indiana will be present. Great Auto Race at Savannah. The eyes of the automobile world will be turned toward Savannah, where the international 400-mile event, known as the "grand prize" race, will be run on Thanksgiving day, preceded on the day before by a race for small cars. The big race will be a contest of speed and skill between the foremost drivers in the world operating cars of all the leading makes of America and Europe. The general assembly of Iowa will convene Tuesday for a session of one day to elect a United States senator for the unexpired term of the late Senator Allison. There will be no opposition among the Republican drivers in the election of Governor Albert B. Cummins to fill the place.

To Fight Boll Weevil.
What promises to be one of the most notable gatherings of farmers ever held in the south will convene Tuesday at Natchez, Miss., for a session of three days. The chief purpose of the meeting is to prepare the farmers of the cotton belt east of the Mississippi river to battle with the boll weevil and to acquaint them with the ways and means of minimizing the ravages of the pest. At Austin, Texas, on Wednesday and Thursday the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the University of Texas will be made an occasion for a notable gathering of educators and alumni. The annual international livestock show will be opened in Chicago Saturday and will continue through the following week. The fourth trial of Herr Maximilian Harden on a charge of libeling Count Kuno von Moltke will begin in Berlin Monday. New and amazing revelations are expected. The Duke of Oporto, the heir apparent to the crown of Portugal, will leave Lisbon Tuesday on a mission of state to England in order to formally notify King Edward of King Manuel's ascent to the Portuguese throne.

Main Issue of Senatorial Election Being Obscured by Many Arguments

Portland, Nov. 19.—To the Editor of The Journal—In all this discussion now-tending to get away from the plain, simple question, which is: Shall we, through the mechanism of Statement No. 1, elect our United States senators by the direct vote of the people? Is that a good thing for us to do? There is an effort made to belaud this question with "Unconstitutionality," "Is Statement No. 1 a Law?" "Is it a true people's choice?" "Legislators had no right to give a pledge because contrary to their oaths of office," and other such cries. I don't care very much whether Governor Chamberlain is elected for any particular interest I feel in him, but I do care very much about the principle involved in Statement No. 1 and I do want to see it survive this attack that is being made upon it. Few men doubt, I presume, that the people of the United States desire to elect United States senators by direct vote. At least their representatives in the house have passed the necessary amendment to the constitution several times, but the senate has always blocked the amendment. Too many of our respected senators know they would not be there if the people had their say. But the constitution of the United States is an extremely difficult one to amend and the United States senators continue to be elected in the old way by the legislatures of the states and the senate remains the stronghold of the trusts against tariff revision and other reforms. Every one knows how it has opposed all of Roosevelt's measures, even though they had a strong public opinion behind them. Will People Be Balked? Whatever the country at large desires, it is certain that we in Oregon at least want to elect our United States senators and have devised a way to do it, and I hope we are not to be balked now by the attack that is being made by the politicians who see their power being decreased. We don't want the old days of machine fights in the legislature and open bribery of members and trading this man for that until the whole session is wasted in fights between rival factions trying to elect their man and the true needs of Oregon disregarded. We say, No, we're tired of all that and we will elect our own senators. We're quite as fit as the legislature to do it. And those men who say that we have no right to pledge a man who is asking our vote to vote as we desire for United States senator, must show why the electors have not a right to receive the voluntary pledges of candidates on any subject whatever. Statement No. 1 is simple enough. Those candidates who desired to do so pledged themselves to vote always for that man for United States senator who received the highest number of the people's votes at the preceding June election. Nobody had to sign it, and when the candidate gave it he knew perfectly well he might have to vote for a Democrat. Judge George, in an article the other day in the Oregonian, said: "The constitution gives each legislator that absolute right" (to cast his vote as he sees fit), "and no one can hold him up and take it away." "Hold him up and take it away." That shows how in the heat of discussion men wander away from the truth of things, when everybody knows that no candidate for the legislature was held up or coerced, but each one who signed Statement No. 1 did so voluntarily and presumably because he believed in it, and having given his pledge he should stand by it. Pledge Rests on Honor Alone. Self-seeking and scheming men are talking now about whether Statement No. 1 is a law or not. What difference does that make? Because it isn't a binding law with penalties attached, is that a reason for a man repudiating his sacred pledge? It ought to be all the more sacred to a man of honor, because it rests in his honor alone. The time for all this discussion was before the primaries and the June election, not after men have won office because of the pledge willingly given. To me it is pitiful to see a man who has been a judge urging men to violate solemn pledges of which they have reaped the benefit under the shallow pretext that "they still have their constitutional discretion and duty. It remains for them to use, or they will violate oaths and violate the constitution again if they simply ratify, for the mere sake of keeping their word, any discretionary power they attempted last spring to sign away."

This continual talk about the constitution and of violation of oaths of office is an attempt to fool people and raise a doubt in their minds, and it is wrong. What is this oath of office? It is an oath each legislator takes to support the constitution of the United States. And what does the constitution of the United States say? It says the legislatures of the states shall choose United States senators. But it does not say, and was never intended to mean, that the legislators were not to be influenced by the wishes of the people. That they were to be influenced is exactly what was intended, and what better way to know the people's wish than to have them express it at the polls. The electors of the presidential electoral college take an oath to support the constitution of the United States, and under that constitution, as interpreted by the anti-statement politicians, they have a right to choose whomever they please. But can any one imagine a man chosen to elect Taft casting his vote in the electoral college for Bryan? "Subtle Turns and Twists." Among other subtle turns and twists the anti-statement men are giving to their argument is this: They say that the only possible real ground a legislator pledges to Statement No. 1 could have for voting for Chamberlain would be if he believed Chamberlain to be the best man for the place. I don't agree with this, but if they choose to take that ground I will say that a legislator could, with wisdom, say to himself: "That man who has received the highest number of people's votes is by that very fact made the best man for the place, and I will vote for him." They say Governor Chamberlain got the Democrats to vote in the Republican primaries. If he did, it was a low political trick and the primary law should be so amended as to prevent its recurrence, but it remains to be proved that he did this, and if proved it is not a sufficient reason to warrant the annihilation of Statement No. 1 and the

DUKE ABRUZZI APPEARS HAPPY

Said to Cable Miss Elkins Every Day Notwithstanding Rumors of Discord.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
Rome, Nov. 21.—For a man disappointed in love, the Duke of Abruzzi maintains, outwardly at least, a happy appearance. He is leading a pleasant sort of life in Turin. He is taking all his meals at restaurants, motoring in the vicinity of Turin and passing his evenings at the theatre. His mail is enormous, but the duke reads little, a majority of his letters remaining unopened. He spends considerable time in the gardens of his palace, indulging in gymnastics and designing an original type of yacht. He carefully reads the clippings concerning his marriage, from the American and continental papers. To friends he speaks enthusiastically of the United States, saying he wished he was not a prince, as he would then become an American. He considers American women more intellectual and fascinating than European women. He says he would consider himself unfortunate if it became necessary to marry a European princess, as there is now no one who answers to his ideal of what a woman should be. The duke apparently has not altered his habit of cabling Miss Elkins every evening. He received a reply one afternoon, when he visited Rome a few days ago, and told some of his friends he was hopeful that the marriage was only postponed and not abandoned.
