

FULTON MEN FIND GOLD COMFORT

Rank and File of Republican Party Opposed to Attempt to Induce Statement No. 1 Men to Break Pledges—Real Leaders Hold Aloof.

Opposition to Statement No. 1 members of the legislature casting their votes according to their pledges to the people, and by so doing electing Governor Chamberlain to the United States senate is doomed to "blow up" before it has gone much further, if the situation is correctly "sized up" by close observers of things political. The old time politicians, eager to get their feet into the political trough once more, who are backing and boosting the game, are making no headway and already their cause is beginning to look dark. They are finding out that the people of the state do not look with favor upon the effort to cause members of the legislature to violate pledges, break their word with their constituents, and dishonor themselves.

The people, on the other hand, are seeing more and more plainly that the agitation is being stirred up by a small ring of men, for selfish purposes, and to overthrow the primary law, to defeat the principle of direct election of senators, and to cause a reversion to the old system of barter and trade for the senatorship.

So far, in spite of all the agitation, there has not been even a rumor of one Statement No. 1 legislator who is not intending to carry out his agreement with the people who elected him. All of the men are standing firm to their pledges and are even lining up all the more solidly in the face of the onslaught being made upon them, feeling that they have been unjustly criticized and attacked because of their championship of the principle of direct election of senators.

Agitators Are Fooled.

Aside from this, the agitators have also found to their surprise and chagrin, that the most influential members of the political organizations and of the party, the most solid and highly respected citizens of the state, are coming out openly and emphatically in favor of and advocacy of Governor Chamberlain's election, holding unanimously that for the legislators to repudiate their pledges would be a disgrace to themselves and to the state, a dishonorable action.

The people again, watching the controversy, have discovered that all the noise and shouting comes from a small circle. They have found that the lead has been taken in the movement by the old line machine men of Multnomah county who want to defeat the primary law in order that they may once more get back into the political saddle, from which they were thrown by the passage of the law and the consequent abolition of the old machine organization.

Aside from the close henchmen of Senator Fulton, who, with their chief, are angry because they are caught in their own trap, are others always willing to follow where the wheel tracks of the machine show. Max G. Cohen, who learned his card index system of politics from Tom Flatt, Jimmy Kercheim, Cohen's understudy, Elmer B. Colwell, who worked for the election of Chamberlain against his party nominee in June in the furtherance of the Fulton scheme; these men and a few others of the like motives are the ones who are taking the active part in the agitation. Practically all of the talk being made in favor of broken pledges is being made by them.

Real Leaders Honest.

They are not meeting with much encouragement. The real leaders of the party are taking positive stands against them and the people are behind the bigger men. Very little in a general way, and nothing definitely, is being heard of the petitions which have been launched.

At Salem Senator J. N. Smith, personal representative of Fulton in Marion county, is complaining that the people do not take kindly to the proposition and that nothing can be done. From all parts of the state word is coming that prominent men are taking a stand against the agitation and advising the legislators to stand by their guns. The men themselves, are planning to meet and outline plans for harmonious action in the organization of the legislature and in legislative matters.

Altogether it looks as if the big noise is about all there is to be heard of the agitators on Statement No. 1 and the desire of the voters of the state as set out at the polls last June.

JUDGES WILL BE BUSY MEN

Four Non-Jury Cases Per Day in Circuit Court Instead of Three.

Presiding Judge Gastenbein in the circuit court this morning announced a new departure in the procedure of the circuit court in handling non-jury cases, by which an effort will be made to dispose of these cases more readily. Beginning with December 21 four court cases will be set for trial each day for the first three days of each non-jury week thereafter.

For seven and a half years the practice of the court has been to set only three cases for trial each day, there being only three trial judges. This leaves the presiding judge free to hear motions and attend to the preparation of cases for trial. But the number of cases set in advance has gained so rapidly that the judges decided after conferring on the subject a few days ago, to try the experiment of setting four non-jury cases for the first three days of each week. Very often cases set for trial are dismissed, settled, or continued, and the vacancies thus created, it is thought, may be enough in number to enable the courts to take care of three additional cases each week for two weeks in the month. The rule will not be applied to jury cases, as experience shows that three jury cases per day are all that can be cared for.

Because of the adoption of the new rule, no cases were set today. Next Monday cases will be set, those already fixed for trial having preference in case the attorneys agree to their advancement. After all the attorneys who have agreed on advancing cases have been accommodated, the docket will be taken up in regular order.

This picture conveys a good idea of how the tailors and designers have compromised in making fall fashions. The cut of the coat is conservative, while the pockets and lapels give it the desired touch of "life" and tone. But this is only one of the endless array of totally different models, some of which are thoroughly extreme (for young chaps), while others are more sedate.

The best way to learn all about the new fall notions is to come in and see them all side by side for easy comparison. The more you know about skilled tailoring, the more you will appreciate these gems of craftsmanship.
