MOB ATTACKS PORTUGUESE MONARCH

Manuel, Riding in Open Carriage, Saved From Death at Hands of Armed Republicans Only by Instant Charge of Cavalry Guard.

Lisbon, Nov. 25.—King Manuel had a narrow escape from death today at the hands of a mob of armed republicans and was saved only by the quick and vigorous action of his cavalry guard.

The king was arrayed in the uniform of a field marshal and was riding in an open carriage, participating in the royalist demonstration.

Without warning the procession was attacked by the republicans, who had concealed themselves at a point of vantage. It was their evident purpose to kill the king, but at the order of his royal highness the cavalry charged the mob.

The driver of the royal carriage lashed the horses. A squad of cavalry surrounded the vehicle and it was driven swiftly to the palace. The cavalry followed the carriage to the palace and then returned and attacked the mob again. The republicans were so strong that they were able to hold their own until the infantry was called out.

The foot soldiers charged the crowds with fixed bayonets, wounding many who stood in the way. After a hard fight the mob was dispersed. Many arrests were made and the city is in a state of great unrest this evening.

It is believed that republicans here fully planned the attack to break up the royalist celebration and assassinate the king. Many shots were fired during the rioting and in the first attack it is said several bullets passed close to the monarch's head.

MORE FIGHT TALK

No sooner had Cellars taken his seat than Vaughn jumped to his feet, his face scarlet, his eyes fixed in a savage scowl on Cellars, and his whole manner so menacing that the sergeant at arms drew his club, ready to prevent physical violence if necessary, and demanded from his colleague if he meant to name the councilman whom he charged with graft.

"If you know of any such person," shouted Vaughn, "it is your duty to denounce him, to file charges, and not to make implications. I say, who is this man? I demand his name. Do you mean me?"

Mentioned No Names.

"I did not mention any names, Mr. Vaughn. I repeat what I have said before. You some time ago indirectly accused me of working for the Warren company. I paid but little attention at the time, but now I insist on my privilege of answering you in kind," said Mr. Cellars.

"If you mean me, why not say so, Mr. Cellars; don't be a coward and hide behind an insinuation."

"Well," retorted Cellars, "I did mean you."

"Now I will answer Mr. Cellars," said Vaughn, speaking to the chair. "I will say that I have no malice towards the Warren Construction company. I think they have a good pavement, but they charge too much for it. I have opposed them for that, and for no other reason. I asked that a committee be appointed to ascertain if this company was charging exorbitant rates.

"Mr. Cellars objected to this. I then said that he could not have displayed more zeal in working for them if he had been their paid attorney."

The big councilman grew more excited every instant, and towards the end of his remarks his voice rose to a defiant roar.

Never Took a Cent.

"I defy any one to prove that I ever took a cent from any paving company," he thundered. Then he shook his fist in Cellars' face and wrathfully cried:

"The man that refuses to give his authority for such a statement as you made is a coward of the blackest and most damnable type. I again defy you to prove that I ever took a cent from the Warren Construction company. And, Mr. Cellars, I don't accuse you of being paid either. If you are, the money doesn't go through my fingers."

"No, you bet it doesn't; it stays there," interrupted Cellars.

"Well, it's a cinch no one can prove you take any money. If you get any, nobody is around to see you take it," retorted Vaughn. "It has got so notorious that the bitulithic paving company controls this council that it has the reputation of being one of the most corrupt legislative bodies in the country. I resent having a henchman of this company cast aspersions on me when I am doing my best to protect the interests of the people. Why, it has been stated in this council that the word bitulithic is stamped upon the noble brow of one of its members."

Mr. Vaughn concluded with a hot torrent of words in which he openly and loudly proclaimed his willingness to be investigated. He prayed Cellars to file charges against him and shouted: "Mr. Cellars, if you are an honest man and not a coward you will prefer charges against me, if you know that I have taken money from any paving company!"

Councilman Cellars was given the privilege of the floor again and reiterated his former statement.

"I did not make a charge directly that you grafted, Mr. Vaughn," he said, "in fact I was very careful not to. It is said that some people often hasten to defend their weakest point. Now I did not accuse you directly of taking money from the Warren company. Yet you made a strenuous defense. It is quite possible that there may be a little speck of guilt that makes you rush to the defense of your weakest point."

Then the council took a deep breath and proceeded to business, but it was some time before the clerk could find out where the routine had been interrupted.

HOLBROOK VETO IS SUSTAINED

By a vote of 8 to 6 the council this morning sustained the mayor's veto of the F. B. Holbrook franchise ordinance. This ordinance granted F. B. Holbrook a blanket franchise on Alberta street between East Thirtieth and Ainsworth avenue for 25 years without safeguarding the city by means of regulative provisions.

The council also upheld the mayor in his disapproval of the hawkers' and peddlers' ordinance which gave them the right to use of the city's streets. The mayor thinks the city has no authority to sell the use of the streets for commercial purposes.

HUME IS DEAD

methods of canning, inventing a machine for making backseamed cans, another for filling the cans, a soldering device and many other minor improvements. This last summer he erected a cold storage plant at Port Orford, and expected to put up the fish from the Sixes and Elk rivers, having leased the fishing privileges on both streams for a term of several years.

He served one term in the legislature as joint representative from Coos and Curry, and was very active in all legislation pertaining to the salmon industry. He had always been a Republican in principle, but at different times had worked for independent candidates when he considered their cause just.

Mr. Hume supported a private race track on the hills above Wedderburn, and important meets have been held there for the past two seasons. He had a good stable of his own and entered his horses at all the principal meets of the west. While he owned a handsome residence at Piedmont, Cal., he spent the most of his time at Wedderburn looking after his interests.

Mr. Hume took a great interest in the propagation of salmon and probably was the best informed man in the world on the subject, appearing at one time before a committee of congress to explain the work. He had written many pamphlets and newspaper articles in connection with the work which are now considered standards. He built the hatchery on Elk river and afterwards turned it over to the governemnt of the United States. He also had a private hatchery on Indian Creek, just above Gold Beach.

Soon after coming to Gold Beach he commenced buying up the lands along the river and the ocean until he finally controlled all the river frontage for more than 12 miles up the river, and seven miles of ocean frontage; this gave him a monopoly of the fishing and brought millions to his purse.

At the time of his death he not only controlled the Rogue but practically all the waters of Curry county, besides interests on the Klamath river in California. A line of his own boats carried the products to Marshfield, where they were transferred for shipment to San Francisco.

He was a man of considerable literary ability, and a great lover of good literature. For several years he edited the "Radium," at first a monthly edition and later issued weekly.

Mr. Hume was at all times progressive and energetic, attending to the most minute details of his business with great fidelity. His greatest aim in life was to be successful in the propagation of salmon and it will be for this that he will long be remembered.

GROCERS' DOORS SHUT TOMORROW

At a largely attended meeting of the Oregon Retail Grocers' association last night it was almost unanimously decided that all grocery stores in the city should be closed all day Thanksgiving. All grocery buying which is to be done preparatory to Thanksgiving must be done today.

A special meeting was called by Secretary Merrick and immediately after the Thanksgiving question had been decided this meeting was adjourned and a smoker held. There were plenty of cigars, refreshments were served and a good program was enjoyed.

This smoker was one of the best attended ever held by the grocers' association and the hall in the Alisky building was completely filled. The program was as follows:

Piano solo, Leo Shapirer; dialect recitation, John E. Malley; tenor solo, W. N. Greer; Shakespearian readings, Ed J. Quillinan; vocal solo, J. Carmody; remarks, C. B. Merrick. Mr. Quillinan also read an original poem by E. B. Duffy on the Retail Grocers' association. Remarks, J. C. Mann and Councilman Dan Kellaher.

HIGHER BAIL FOR BEARERS OF GUNS

Immediately following the declaration of Acting Municipal Judge Seabrook to inflict the severest penalties on all persons arrested for carrying concealed weapons, Chief Gritzmacher has issued the following order to captains of police:

"Captains of Police—A large number of persons are arrested regularly for carrying pistols, most of them without another thing of value about them except the gun. This shows plainly that they are bent on mischief and crime and a heavy punishment should be administered to such persons convicted of carrying pistols or other concealed weapons, and after consulting Municipal Judge Seabrook, you are instructed to accept no less than $50 cash bail for any case as above stated.

LINNTON STORE BURGLARS' PREY

This Is The Way To Wash

With P. & G. Naphtha Soap. Try it, next washday.

WHITE CLOTHES:—Dip each piece in lukewarm water. Rub soap on the soiled parts and roll up. Pack rolls in a tub and cover with lukewarm (not hot) water. Let them soak half an hour or longer. Fill a tub half full of lukewarm (not hot) water; unroll each piece and rub soiled parts on the washboard, using fresh soap. The dirt will come out with little or no rubbing. Rinse in two warm waters and blue in a third cooler water. Excepting in cases of sickness, clothes need not be boiled. Hang them up to dry in sunshine and fresh air.

Isn't this simpler and easier and better than your present method? And wouldn't it be a good idea to try P.&G. Naphtha Soap and see if it really is as effective as we say it is?

The experiment costs little. —a cake is ample for a week's washing.

OREGON GIRLS PRAISED

to know a little something about most everything. Between the two of them they asked so many questions that they had the reporter on the run. First Mr. Hapgood wanted to know all about the places of interest, then about questions, local and state which are uppermost in the minds of the people. And about Statement No. 1 he wanted know a good deal, but on that subject he was well posted. Mr. Hapgood is a Statement No. 1 man first, last and all the time. He said so, too, most emphatically.

Visit Council Crest.

This morning, as the sun was shining brightly, Mr. Hapgood and Mr. Gibson took a ride out to Council Crest. What a corking story that will make if Mr. Hapgood writes it and illustrates his impressions with drawings by his companion! Let it be hoped that the mountains were out in their finest this morning, and that the sun glistened upon their snow capped peaks. And also that Mr. Hapgood was inspired.

Mr. Hapgood is a genius. So is Mr. Gibson. Mr. Hapgood is a wonderful man. If he wasn't he couldn't be wearing the shoes of the editor of Collier's Weekly.

Mr. Hapgood—and Mr. Gibson, too, for that matter—is such a wonderful fellow and such a strong writer that a common newspaper reporter doesn't know exactly what to say about him. In the first place the reporter was scared to death. So he only remembers about half what the two men said. And as for the questions that were asked and answered—in a way—they too have slipped from memory.

But Mr. Hapgood has a way that you can't escape. He asks a question, then listens most attentively. He talks to all sorts of persons wherever he goes and in this way learns the country as can be learned in no other way.

He has met Governor Chamberlain and he and Mr. Gibson are to be the governor's guests at dinner this evening. Mr. Hapgood thinks the governor just about one of the finest fellows ever. It would be a shame, a disgrace to the community, he said, if Statement No. 1 were not upheld and Governor Chamberlain sent to the United States senate.

Mr. Hapgood also wanted to know about the lumber industries, how the people stood on the question of new forest reserves, and about the fishing industry, and in fact everything of any consequence.

Mr. Gibson Talks Art.

Speaking of his work for the future, Mr. Gibson said:

"I plan to work in two directions equally interesting to me, or perhaps, I might say, in three directions, as my color work will have two branches. Some of it will be done for reproduction and will appear in Collier's weekly. Then I shall go right ahead with my painting of portraits and shall give, perhaps, half of my time for the whole future to that work. It has taken a very strong and permanent hold of me, and I feel that I have mastered at least the grammar of it. At the same time, my interest in black and white has never flagged and I never expect it to.

"When I take it up again in Collier's in a few weeks, it will, doubtless, be somewhat affected by my trip abroad and by this trip that I am now making through the west and northwest, but I shall always wish to express in that medium a certain side of life that interests me intensely; what might be called, perhaps, the observation of human nature in detail, the minor incidents, the satire, the special traits of character. Now, a man can no more express these things in oil than he could express in black and white the intricate shadings and values by which woman's hair shades into her forehead, or the gradations of value from the cheek to the neck, or the quality of the complexion.

"A few years ago I decided that I was unwilling to go through my life expressing only half of my interest. I know that a new and difficult art could not be mastered while I was emerged in the same life and the same work that I had so long known. Therefore, I broke away from my black and white for the time being and from my environment and went abroad to stay until I had learned the rudiments, at least, of the new medium.

"I worked as intensely as it was in me to work at the problems of oil, while studying the great masters of portrait painting in Spain, Italy, Holland, France, Germany and England. I feel now that I have mastered the alphabet and that I can go on expressing myself more fully and more satisfactorily every year. Each of these arts is made more satisfying by the fact that it is supplemented, and that, therefore, I can feel that I am not leaving unexpressed a large part of the things in the world which interests me most."

Mr. Gibson and Mr. Hapgood came to Portland from San Francisco. Tomorrow they will take a trip up the Columbia river as far as The Dalles. Tomorrow night they leave for Seattle, going from there to Butte and thence to New York.

GOLD DUST is better than soap and elbow grease for pots and pans. It digs deep into cracks and corners and sterilizes everything it touches

There is nothing about the kitchen which collects so much dirt, grease and grime as pots and pans; and there is nothing that will clean them so quickly, easily and thoroughly as GOLD DUST.

GOLD DUST cleanses until the last evidence of dirt has gone, and removes every trace of germ life.

You are probably not aware that pots and pans which are used constantly contain hidden nests of little wigglers—germs of putrefaction and decay. GOLD DUST removes these, because it sterilizes as well as cleans, and leaves your utensils clean, pure, wholesome, safe.

GOLD DUST will work wonders in cleansing and polishing milk cans, pails, bottles and dairy utensils, pots, pans and kettles.
