

MEMORIAL TO WINCHESTER FIGHTING PHIL

Equestrian Statue of the Hero of Winchester Unveiled at National Capital—President Roosevelt Delivers Address.

(United Press Leased Wire.) Washington, Nov. 25.—The national capital paused briefly in its grind of official business this afternoon while tribute was paid to Philip H. Sheridan, soldier and patriot, when the Borglum statue of the dashing cavalry leader was unveiled in the presence of the president, his cabinet and many prominent guests.

Lieutenant Sheridan, son of General Sheridan, had the honor of pulling the cords that loosened the drapery of flags concealing the monument. As the statue came into full view its magnificence was strikingly presented to the people. A mighty cheer was heard, while the military band present played the national anthem.

Experts declare that the memorial to General Sheridan is one of the finest pieces of equestrian sculpture in the country. The statue is of bronze and of heroic size. It depicts General Sheridan on the crest of his famous Kentucky steed "Rex," in the very act of turning his fleeing soldiers at Cedar Creek after his historic 21 mile ride from Winchester.

It is eminently fitting that the nation's illustrious men, the men who loom as heroes before the eyes of our people, should be fittingly commemorated here at the national capital, and I am glad indeed to take part in the unveiling of this statue to General Sheridan. His name will always stand high on the list of American worthies.

His career was typically American, for from plain beginnings he rose to the highest military position in our land. We honor his memory itself; and moreover, as in the case of the other great commanders of his day, his career symbolizes the careers of all those who in these years of the nation's direst need sprang to the front to risk everything, including life itself, and to spend the days of their strongest young manhood in valorous conflict for an ideal. Often we Americans are taunted with having only a material ideal. The empty folly of the taunt is sufficiently

"Man Is As Old As His Stomach"

This Persian Epigram Is the Real Gauge of a Man's Life.

The Persians were a very sagacious people, noted among other things, for their deep thinking on life and the things which make up life. The above epigram shows the wisdom of their thought. When a man's stomach is able to furnish new material to the system as fast or faster than the natural decay of man requires, then such a man lives his fullest, and his best. When through wrong living or disease a man's stomach begins to tax the other organs and the system, the blood strength which it cannot give back in nourishment taken from food, then begins the death of man and the decay is fast. The stomach is strong, splendidly strong, and can stand an untold amount of abuse and neglect, but when it gives out, the system is in a state of collapse.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain the most perfect digestive qualities known to science and at the same time the most powerful. They will mix with the poisonous juices of a sick stomach and digest food in spite of this handicap. They will stop gas making and bad breath. They tone up the nerves of the whole digestive canal, including those of the stomach. Each single ingredient contains strength enough to digest 3,000 times its weight in mixed food. They have stood the test of time and today are more sought after than all their imitators combined. They are used and endorsed by 40,000 physicians. Every druggist sells them, price, 50c. If costs nothing to demonstrate their value. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address: Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

HOW TO CARVE YOUR TURKEY

Many a married man of mature years who has served turkey every Thanksgiving for more years than he can tell still has the same difficulties in taking off the legs, cutting on the white meat and getting out the dressing that he had on the first turkey he ever carved. When it comes to the newly wedded husbands, their case is almost hopeless and only careful study and some practice can enable them to properly and easily carve the always popular turkey on Thanksgiving day.

So much trouble has arisen over this simple operation that it has now become quite the habit to carve the turkey in the kitchen and bring it to the table ready to serve. But this does away with one of the most pleasant features of the Thanksgiving dinner, and a feature which makes it seem more realistic.

Diagram No. 1, showing the correct way to take out the dressing. The carving of the turkey is not so difficult an operation as it has been pictured in fiction and oftentimes in life. There are many methods employed and any prescribed rule has to be varied to some extent, but the most successful maintain that above all things the fork should be first placed midway between the wings and legs in the breast of the fowl as it is laid on its back with the legs on the right. Care should be taken to see that the fowl is correctly placed before attempting to serve; otherwise trouble

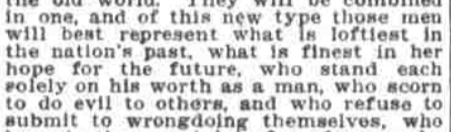

Diagram No. 1, showing the correct way to take out the dressing.

Diagram No. 2, showing the correct way to remove the legs and wings from the Thanksgiving turkey. First cut the meat as indicated on the diagram, in front of the second joint of the leg, on the side nearest the carver. This is a straight cut downward. Do not attempt to unjoint the leg from this side. After the cut has been made, the knife should be then inserted underneath the leg and on its back with the legs on the right. Care should be taken to see that the fowl is correctly placed before attempting to serve; otherwise trouble

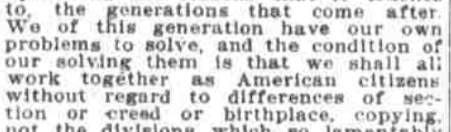

Diagram No. 2, showing the correct way to remove the legs and wings from the Thanksgiving turkey.

Diagram No. 3, showing the correct way to slice the white meat. After the legs and wings have been removed and laid on a plate by themselves, the white meat of the breast is sliced. Always slice from the top down, removing the white meat in thin layers, as indicated in diagram. An each layer is removed it is placed on the second platter with the legs and wings, so that when the meat has been removed it will all be on the second platter and ready to serve.

What Americanism Really Is

There is another point in General Sheridan's career which is good for all of us to remember. Whereas Grant, Sherman and Thomas were of the old native American stock, the parents of Sheridan, like the parents of Farragut, were born on the other side of the water. Any one of the five was just as much a type of the real American as what is best in America, as the other four. We should keep steadily before our minds the fact that Americanism is a question of principle, of purpose, of idealism, of character; that it is not a matter of birthplace, or creed, or line of descent. Here in this country, the representatives of many old-world races are being fused together into a new type, a type the main features of which have been determined at the time of the Revolutionary war; for the crucible in which all things are melted into one was shaped from 1776 to 1789, and our nationality was definitely fixed in all its essentials by the men of Washington's day. The strains will not continue to exist separately in this country as in the old world. They will be combined in one, and this new type those men will best represent what is loftiest in the nation's past, what is finest in her hope and her ambition, what is noblest in her soul as a man, who scorn to do evil to others, and who refuse to submit to wrongdoing themselves, who have in them no taint of weakness, who never fear to fight when fighting is demanded by a sound and high morality, but who have by their lives to bring ever nearer the day when justice and peace shall prevail within our own borders and in our relations with all foreign powers.

Civil War's Lesson for Today. Much of the usefulness of any career must lie in the impress that it makes upon, and the lessons that it teaches to the generations that come after. We of this generation have our own problems to solve, and the condition of our solving them is that we shall all work together as American citizens without regard to differences of section or creed or birthplace. Copying, not the divisions which so lamentably sundered our fathers from another, but the spirit of burning devotion to duty which drove them forward, each to do the right as it was given him to see the right, in the great years when Grant, Sheridan, Sherman, Thomas, and Sheridan, when Lee and Jackson, and the valiant men of the north and the valiant men of the south, fought to finish the great Civil War. They did not themselves realize, in the bitterness of the struggle that the blood and the tears which were shed, the death throes of what was worn out, and the birth pangs of a new and more glorious national life, the greatest inheritance which we have received from the men of the mighty days. We, in our turn, must give up our lives to meet the new issues with the same stern courage and resolute adherence to an ideal, which marked our fathers who belonged to the generation in whose honor we commemorate this monument today.

MARRIED TWO DAYS AFTER HIS DIVORCE

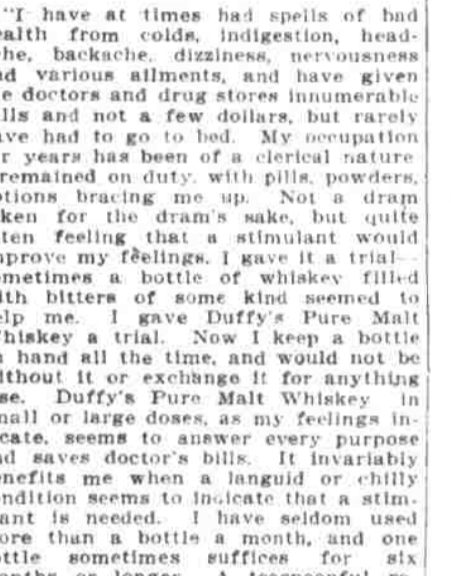

(United Press Leased Wire.) Seattle, Wash., Nov. 24.—A bench warrant has been issued for W. R. J. Theobald, a local husband-hater, who married Miss Frances Howard Tappan of Santa Barbara, Cal., two days after securing a divorce from a former wife. Theobald was first married in 1884, and in his divorce complaint alleged that his wife inherited $40,000 soon after marriage and her affection for him began to grow cold. Most of the property was lost in the San Francisco earthquake and soon after Theobald came to Seattle and secured a divorce September 24. On September 28, he married Miss Tappan in Victoria, B. C. The case is the first to be tried in this state under the law declaring that divorcees must not marry within six months after decrees have been signed.

MR. OPP

By ALICE HEGAN RICE

A delightful novel—having to a marked degree the qualities of humor and pathos that have given Mrs. Rice's other writings such wide acceptance. The leading figure in the book, Mr. Opp, is a tender-hearted, bombastic little Kentucky editor, and in him Mrs. Rice has created a character worthy of Dickens. Illustrated by Guipon

Selz Royal Blue Shoes meet the requirements

It seems to us, as sellers of shoes, that Selz shoes meet the requirements of the wearer better than most shoes. The makers have confidence in their work; they say so in a printed guarantee on every pair. These shoes are made with an evident honesty of purpose to see that the wearer shall have value for his money.

If the shoes don't give it, the maker is back of them, ready to make good. It's a pleasure to sell such shoes, and a profit to buy them. We ought to get together on that basis.

Washington State College Will Be Represented at the Apple Show.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Washington State College, Pullman, Nov. 25.—Under the direction of the head of the department, Miss Gertrude McKay, the senior girls of the domestic economy department of the state college will demonstrate the various uses to which apples may be put at the National Apple show, in Spokane, December 7 to 10. Large apple groves in the districts, such as Wenatchee and Yakima have consented each to supply for one of the apples that can be utilized. A cookbook, compiled by Miss McKay and containing only of apple recipes, will be sold for the benefit of the department.

An immense building will be occupied by the National Apple Show exhibition, many of which will be prepared in foreign countries. Carload after carload of prize apples are being received at Spokane.

The following girls will represent the department in Spokane: Lottie Jellum, Mina White, Zeena Holt, Mabel Joyce, Bernice Kimmel, Myrtle Groves, Ida Hart, Bess Fishback, Orpha Huxtable, Francis Devin, Lora Green, Ida Woodward, Edna Carmine, Mary Bartlett and Ada Wexler.

RAILROADS TESTING PHONE DISPATCHING

(United Press Leased Wire.) Chicago, Nov. 25.—The officials of railroads in Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois are experimenting with a system of train dispatching by telephone which, if successful, will replace the telegraph on their lines. The action of railroad men was brought about by the recent failure of the telegraph during a heavy electrical storm. For several hours the telegraphic system was paralyzed and the companies were compelled to resort to the telephones. It was found that the service was as perfect over the telephone as it had been over the telegraph, and that had been no electrification of the atmosphere. At every station a lightning arrester had been installed and every effort is being made to protect the system from interference.

VOTED DEATH BUT WAS NOT SLAYER

(United Press Leased Wire.) Chicago, Nov. 24.—Christian Rudovits, for whom the Russian government is asking extradition on a charge of murder, declared today that he was not a murderer, but a revolutionist.

Threatened by the czar's officers with the death penalty for his part in the Krinze family at Binen, Russia, Rudovits told Commissioner Foote he was not connected with the actual crime. He admitted that he was present when sentence of death was passed upon the family and was one of the committee which selected 16 members of revolutionary society to carry out the decree.
