

Endowed Theatre Will Solve Greatest Problem of the Stage

Household Economic Expert Tells How—$1500 Per Year and Comfort.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Atlantic City, Nov. 27.—The declaration of Miss Grace W. Pitman, household economic expert of Passaic, N. J., that $6 a week is ample to feed a family of four, stirred delegates to the eighth annual convention of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers to open dissent.

"I don't mean, of course," she explained sweetly, "that the girl who never brewed a cup of tea or made her own bed before she married could perform a miracle like this, but I do maintain that a little woman, with a keen business sense, devoted to her husband and children, could keep her table amply supplied with nutritious food for $6 a week."

The delegates, half convinced, began to smile approvingly, and Miss Pitman explained that she had a husband who had a fixed income of $1500 a year would be compelled to make her own fricks, Miss Pitman asserted. The family should be able to spend $1250 a month for church and charity, $18 for investment and $5.49 for education, under the heading she included theatre tickets.

"About one play a month" interjected a delegate. Miss Pitman said the girl who had a sneaking desire to make her social calls in an automobile should never make the mistake of making a play a month. This seemed logical to the mothers, but Miss Pitman's allowance of $10.74 a month for suggestions, she supplies one derision. Negative nods brought from the economic expert the retort that demands of $18 and $20 from domestics with their tips, and that to how the economy were an outrage to be adjusted by household diplomacy.

"Let us have these things only in moderation—remembering that to amuse is all right for the stage, but that in the last analysis—as with literature—its purpose is to uplift and to educate."

Willard Mack, Who Believes Actor Should Be Educator. Willard Mack, who is starring in "On Parole," says in an interview on "The Stage of Today": "After all, are we to say that the part of the theatre is to amuse, or to instruct or educate? It undoubtedly is both; but in the last analysis, which is the more important? Some will say that when they go to the theatre they are tired and that they do not want to listen to plays with lessons or be mastered, no matter how beautiful. Let those who want such things have their plays, but we want the play which gives our tired brains a rest, rather than makes them work throughout an evening after working all day."

STRAY TOPICS FROM NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 28.—The men of New York owe a debt of gratitude to a certain subway ticket agent who had the courage to act his protest against the immoderate size of women's hats while all the rest of the men confine themselves to lurid thoughts and unchristian wishes when they find themselves shut out from the sight of their surroundings by these monstrous creations of the milliner's art.

rive upon the scene of such "accidents" only in time to gather up the pieces. The New York health department had to deal with a regular comic opera situation the other day. The department conducts a sanitarium for consumptives at Otisville, in Orange county, New Jersey, which accommodates 170 patients, 50 per cent of whom are Jews.

New York is seriously threatened by the danger of losing Madison Square garden, which is undeniably more famous throughout the country than even the Metropolitan opera house. The stockholders of the company, which has the lease on the property for many years, are becoming discouraged by the hopelessness of their efforts to make the garden pay.

The pastor of the Second Reformed church in Jersey City gave out an interesting story of what he considered the efficiency of prayer. A woman of 75 became paralyzed Friday after election. The story is quite touching, but without irreverence one can not help wondering whether her prayer would have been granted had she asked to live until Bryan was elected. It had what a long life would not the devout old woman have.
