Ancient as time itself is mankind's inherited love of jewels and jewelry

"A jewel to a beautiful woman is as sunshine to nature."

With barbaric splendor, rolling down through the mystic cycles of past ages, comes the history of mankind's innate love of jewels—those flowers of the mineral kingdom. The ancients had jewels and jewelry, and it is a curious and interesting fact that the signet ring is used now with much the same significance it had three thousand years ago.

Literature is thick strewn with interesting associations and accounts of the part jewels have played in the history of the human race. The mystery of the very origin of gems was the source of inspiration for many of the beautiful myths of the Greeks. In our present collection history itself can almost be read backward in many of the exquisite designs.

The serpent motif suggests Cleopatra, Egypt's wonderful Queen. "The Serpent of the Nile," who pledged Antony's health by dissolving in the glass from which she drank an exquisite pearl worth a king's ransom. The charming French designs in necklaces remind one of the famous necklace of the gay, ill-fated Queen of France, Marie Antoinette, and they equal it in artistic, if not intrinsic, value.

So the jewelry designs which we are even now showing come to us through vast cycles of time, modified and refined with the mysterious processes of evolution—and revolution—through the ages. Even as man himself, from the primitive and barbaric, to the present-day conception of the refined and elegant.

Our selections of the finest jewelry are made by a connoisseur personally in France. We have only one of each design, and duplicates cannot be obtained.
