

OREGON MAY DIG $100,000 MORE

To Put Up State's Half of the Locks Fund as Per New Estimate.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.)
Washington, Dec. 8.—The estimate of the cost of duplicating the Oregon City locks is held in confidence. The figures will probably show the cost will be approximately 50 to 60 per cent more than the estimate of 1900 and the cost of putting the present locks in proper condition about $100,000. As near as can be ascertained, the estimate will indicate that the total cost of buying and repairing the locks somewhere in the neighborhood of $800,000, which, if true, would necessitate the state's increasing from $300,000 to $400,000 the amount of the appropriation to pay the state's half of the expense of acquiring the locks and putting them in condition for satisfactory use.

BUGGY USED

lived at the Monarch hotel, Park and Stark streets. He paid $2.50 in advance for the rig and entering it, drove off. Mr. Anderson at the time thought that the man must have come from some place near at hand, for although he carried no umbrella and it was raining at the time, his overcoat showed no signs of moisture.

Overlooked Cash.
Although $14,743 is a very large sum for a small bank to have outside the vault, this was not all that was expected to view of the robbery. A roll of $5000 in currency, which was lying under the hand of the leader as he worked the money through the window into the sack. It is also stated that there was another $1000 in silver in the tray out of which the cashier had been paying.

Aside from the curious crowd around the bank there was nothing this morning to indicate that the robbery had occurred there. The bank was open and doing business as usual. No inconveniences will be experienced by the bank on account of the large amount of money stolen. President Newhall said for the reassurance of all depositors that he had $120,000 on deposit in the Lead & Tilton bank. Besides the loss does not fall upon the bank as insurance policies fully covering the amount taken are carried by burglar insurance companies.

HOW BOLD THIEVES MADE WAY WITH COIN

Standing with arms held high above their heads, fearing to cry out or to make a sound, the robbers, H. H. Newhall, president of the East Side bank, on Grand avenue and East Washington streets, and his men Roger Newhall, the cashier, 5145 1/2 street, yesterday afternoon stood in the president's private office and watched three armed men loot the bank about $17,000.

The robbery was of a nature almost unprecedented in Oregon. Three armed men should enter a city bank at the very hour when the streets outside were full of people hurrying home on the busiest street east of the river, and at the pistol's point force the bank officials to stand aside while a great sum in gold, silver and currency was swept into sacks and then leave the bank by the front door in the full glare of an arc light overhead and escape with their haul, leaving no clues to their identity, all this seems incredible in a city the size of Portland.

Crimes in Other Places.
Several bold stage robberies and bank holdups of similar nature have been perpetrated in Nevada and California lately, and the most plausible theory advanced is that one of those robbers, learning of the number of street holdups that have occurred in Portland lately without police interference, may have concluded that this city offered a good field for their operations.

A curious fact in connection with the bank robbery is that President H. H. Newhall of the bank is a brother-in-law of Chief of Police Grimsbacher.

The very boldness of the robbers appears to have insured their safety and the success of the holdup. None of the officials of the bank suspected that there could be any danger at that time of day, with the streets full of people and the interior of the bank lighted up and fully exposed to the gaze of passersby.

From slickers to rubber boots, here's everything to make one impervious to bad weather. Also Raincoats for style as well as storm.

a man enter the door until there came the crisp command, "Hold up your hands!"
Newhall's Story.
President Newhall, started, looked up and squarely into the muzzle of an automatic revolver. Paralyzed with fear and astonishment, Mr. Newhall was a trifle slow in obeying the command. "This is a holdup—come, get up your hands—order the man behind the gun. The president and cashier realized that the holdup was a real one and their hands went up without further urging.

Get into that room there and be quick about it," was the robber's next direction and he indicated, the president's private room, in the corner of the bank. There are windows on both sides of the main room giving full view of it from both Washington street and Grand avenue, but the two men stood there with hands elevated above their heads while the robbers looted the bank, and no one outside realized what was occurring, although three people saw it—Bookkeeper Coulson, who returned from across the street, and Miss Myrtle Ramsey, 23 East Seventh street, and Miss Bertha, 193 East Sixth street. The two young women happened to be passing the bank and were eye witnesses of all that occurred, but failed to realize until it was all over that a holdup was being perpetrated.

Stepped Into Private Room.
As H. H. and Roger Newhall stepped into the private room, the robber, who seemed to be the leader of the gang, turned his confederates to come in, at the same time leaping lightly through the cashier's wicket. Although he is described as being a somewhat stocky built man, and the window is not over 20 inches wide, he vaulted through easily, although he might as well have entered by the door through the private office.

At the same instant two other men entered the bank. One of them gun in hand, stopped at the door to prevent any one else entering, while the third, the smaller and younger of the gang, stepped up to one of the windows and a sack ready to receive the money.

Now hurry up, you fellows," the leader urged, and turning to the low table standing near the cashier's window, heaped up money, he began to shove it through the wicket and into the other highwayman's bag.

The leader's first choice was a tray containing $500 in silver, which he dumped expeditiously into the sack. Then he poured out a second tray containing dimes, nickels and quarters. Then he reached under the counter and pulled out a stack of wrapped money. He evidently did not know it, but he knew his business well enough not to try to take it. Picking up his revolver which he had laid on the counter in front of him in scornful disregard of any possibility of the Newhalls trying to shoot him in the back as he worked, he leaped once more through the window and joined his comrades.

"Come on, let's get out of this," he urged, the other two picked up the sacks of money, and with the leader covering their retreat with drawn revolvers, the gang left by the front door opening upon Grand avenue, turned the corner into Washington street, and started east.

This seemed to break the spell that had held the street for the two or three minutes that it took to loot the bank. The money was given by half a dozen persons simultaneously. Cashier Coulson, who had, through the window, watched the latter exit of the transaction, ran up the street calling for Officer Sherwood.

Mad Good Start.
President Newhall ran out of the front door revolver in hand, and his son, Roger, rushed out of the back door, also armed. The robbers were nearly a block up the street and comparatively safe, but both the Newhalls emptied the revolvers at the figures rapidly disappearing in the darkness.

H. H. Newhall then returned to the bank, but Roger followed on up to Sixth street and fired again at the men as they went around the south steps of the Woodmen hall. All the shots, however, were apparently ineffective, and the highwaymen disappeared in the darkness.

A middleweight prize fighter of the navy recently came in touch with the association. It was not long afterward that he became the recipient of most tantalizing taunts and profane abuse from a shipmate—his inferior in both physical prowess and character. He stood motionless, his face crimson, his eye sparkling, every line of every feature was strained. After a few minutes of struggle, he dropped his head and joined the secretary of the M. C. A. He was changed to be passing on the other side of the street. "Any man can fight," he said, "I can, however, everybody can't control himself, I couldn't." "I couldn't," then after a long silence he said, "I am trying to control myself."

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
The Dalles, Or., Dec. 8.—Roy Bailey, 25 years of age, a well known Wasco county farmer of Mosier, accidentally shot and killed himself last night. He had just returned from a hunting trip. He was cleaning his .22 rifle, when the trigger became caught. He leaves a wife and baby.

NEW JERSEY GIVES UP CARTER CASE

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Seattle, Wash., Dec. 8.—Unable to secure the extradition of Elliott A. Archer, alias C. Archie Carter, wanted in Newark, N. J., on a charge of forgery in which $70,000 is involved, Detective Walter Godfrey of Newark, declared he believed it useless to attempt to bring other charges against Archer, saying that since extradition had been refused in one case he thought it would be refused in all. Godfrey received a telegram from Wilbur A. Mott, prosecutor of Essex county, which said in part: "If Governor Mead will not accept the word of Governor Fort, he will not accept the word of anyone. He can make his state an outlaw state if he wants to but we at least will not forget it."

The woman who has been introduced in Seattle as Mrs. Carter is reported to have gone east to a sister living in Chicago.

Governor Fort again wired Governor Mead regarding the Archer case, but Mead positively declined to reopen the case unless those who asked for the extradition papers were prepared to submit the evidence of guilt.

FAIRPORT LOTS WILL SHOW TREMENDOUS ADVANCES IN VALUES

Here are some of the conditions affecting Fairport and which make Fairport Lots the best investment on the Peninsula today—conditions of which you should be fully aware, so that you may take advantage of them. To begin—

Lots Sell for $250—$10 Down—$10 a Month

No other property is being offered in this district as cheap and none on as easy terms. Fairport Lots are within reach of every man's purse—$10 down and $10 a month.

In the Heart of the Peninsula

The Swifts secured the choicest property on the Peninsula for their townsite—Kenton. We secured the next choicest property. The Swifts have already spent over $650,000 for Kenton, to build stores, banks, offices and homes for their employes—Fairport lies next to Kenton.

Fairport Will Improve With Kenton

Every improvement for Kenton is an improvement for Fairport. Kenton will be the center for all this tremendous commercial and industrial activity. Fairport, lying directly next to Kenton, will benefit by it and values in Fairport will rise with values in Kenton.

Fairport Convenient to Packing Plants

The Swifts, the Armours, the Cudahys will employ thousands of hands—Hundreds will be employed in the other industries which will locate on the peninsula. The huge sawmill with daily capacity of 300,000 feet of lumber, glue factories, tanneries and by-product factories.

Fairport Will Give Them Homes

The employees of these industries will desire to live convenient to their work—well paid, skilled hands, they will own their own homes. Watch values in Fairport jump in six months when all these huge industries get running full capacity.

Fairport Lots Will Make You Money

Are you willing, can you afford to spend $10 now and $10 a month? Do so, then, but don't delay, for lots in Fairport are nearly all sold. Profit by the experience of those citizens of St. Joseph, Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, etc.

They saw the packing houses installed on the outskirts of their cities—They saw their cities build out to and around the packing houses—They had opportunities to buy lots at extremely low figures—Today, only a few years later, these lots are worth thousands

A FORTUNE WAS WITHIN THEIR REACH— A FORTUNE IS WITHIN YOUR REACH—

Invest your earnings and spare money in Portland real estate—buy a lot or two in Fairport. Will you take advantage of this opportunity that is offered to you or will you be like those other people who turned their back on opportunity and a few years later saw the lots that they could have bought for $250 today and on terms of $10 down and $10 a month selling for three and four times as much? Call on us and let us tell you more about Fairport and its location to the packing houses and other industries. Let us take you out to Fairport in our automobiles.
