SOME WASHINGTON STORIES THAT KEEP APACE THE NEWS

(Staff Correspondence.)

Washington, Dec. 8.—The victorious and the defeated allies are flocking into Washington for the "Roosevelt" congress. Yarns humorous and yarns pathetic were told in a half dozen hotel corridors tonight. Illustrative of phases of the recent battle in which the republic yet once more was saved.

"Too many statesmen," said Speaker Cannon today, "rely altogether too much for their fame on uncouthness—lack of socks, etc. It puts me in mind of a young friend of mine who had an outspoken admiration for frankness. One day he called on a pretty girl and in the course of conversation said: 'If there is one thing I reverence, perfect frankness is that thing.' 'Yes,' said the girl, 'then I'll at once grasp the opportunity to tell you switched if they didn't give me a darned lot of worry for a time."

Senator Johnston's Job.

Senator Johnston of Alabama told with gusto an incident which happened to him during the summer.

The senator has a beautiful home in Alabama and he loves to put on his old clothes and fix up the garden. Mrs. Johnston went out one day in July and left the senator in charge.

Soon a lady came to call. Seeing the senator in the yard she mistook him for the gardener and said:

"My good man, is Mrs. Johnston in?"

"No," he answered.

The lady then stepped up and inspected the flower bed upon which he was working.

"Have you been with Mrs. Johnston long; does she treat you well?" she inquired.

"Twenty years I have been with her," answered the crafty senator, "and she treats me pretty well."

"What does she pay you?" persisted the lady.

"Oh, just my board and keep and a few clothes now and then," he carefully answered.

"Is that all? Why don't you leave her? Come to me; I will pay you well."

"But," said the senator, "you see I have a life contract with Mrs. Johnston."

"A life contract?" shrieked the lady in horror. "Why, that is not legal; that is peonage."

"Well," laughed Senator Johnston, "that may be another name for it. I have always called it marriage myself."

Sherman's Finish.

Vice President-elect James Sherman was entering the New Willard at a time when Peacock alley was crowded. He wandered about for some time before any one recognized him. A senator, whose name can be given on demand, noticing Mr. Sherman, turned to a newspaper correspondent and whispered behind his hand, "Look at Sherman. He's as lonely and unidentified as though he had already been inaugurated."

Congressman "Ed" Madison of Kansas assigned this "prosperity" story as being productive of more votes in his fight for reelection than any other argument that he presented.

"To begin with," said Madison, "back in 1894, a Kansas farmer got 19 cents a bushel for his corn. It is now selling for something like 70 cents a bushel. In 1894 a farmer in my district bought a farm wagon for $60. Time went on and the other day—that's the way I brought it home to them—the same farmer came back to the same dealer for a similar wagon.

"It was a good one," he said. "That's the reason I want another. How much are you going to charge me?"

"I think you paid $60 for that wagon, didn't you?" asked the dealer.

"That's right," said the farmer.

"It will cost you $70 now," replied the dealer.

"Why?" demanded the farmer.

"Well," said the dealer, "the material like lumber, iron and steel has advanced in price and the wagon costs me more now. The tariff probably has something to do with the advance."

"The farmer went into the air when the tariff was mentioned and began to rail against it. The dealer interrupted him.

"You paid for that wagon in 1894 in corn, didn't you?" he asked. "And you had to give me 600 bushels."

"I did, but what has that got to do with it?" spluttered the farmer.

"You bring me 600 bushels of corn and I'll give you this wagon."

"Hold on," said the farmer.

"Wait," said the dealer. "For that corn I'll give the wagon, a $125 survey, a $125 self-binder, an $80 kitchen range, $20 worth of kitchen utensils, and some more. Add them up, friend."

"The farmer dug up his $70 without a word and invited the dealer out for a smoke."

ALUMNI OF NORMAL SCHOOL ORGANIZE

An organization of the Oregon State Normal alumni, of Monmouth, was effected Saturday night at the Y. M. C. A. hall. The name, Monmouth Normal club, was adopted and it was decided to admit to membership not only the alumni, but also past and present members of the faculty, students and benefactors of the school. The purpose of the organization is to bind those interested in the school more closely together and to meet business as well as social needs arising in relation to the normal. Regular meetings of the club will be held the first Tuesday evening of each month.

The officers are: A. G. Thompson, president; Miss K. Porter, vice pres-

MARITAL WOES CAUSE SUICIDE

Renting a room for the night at the Hotel Lenta, at Lenta, Gustave J. Jago went at once to the room and there swallowed strychnine from a bottle he brought to the hotel in his pocket. The man was Saturday evening, and yesterday morning when the young man did not appear an investigation was made and the suicide discovered.

Jago was 24 years old and a teacher. He was married a year ago, but he and his wife separated. The girl went to Vancouver to live with her mother. It is believed that worry over his unhappy family life prompted Jago to take poison.

The body was taken to the Douglas morgue, but as the coroner's inquest on the suicide no inquest will be held.
