THOUSANDS OF RATS BEAT HARD PATHS ON CITY DUMP

Over the four and a half acres of filth and putrefaction that comprises the dumping ground of the city garbage crematory run dozens of peculiar, smooth beaten paths calculated to puzzle one who does not know by what they are caused. They are made by rats—thousands of rats. That their little feet could make paths as distinct, as well defined, and as broad in places as cow trails, seems incredible, yet such is the case.

seeking eagerly to devour as much of it as possible. The trails, though seemingly wandering at random over the dump, all converge in two or three main paths leading down to the water. These are so firm and hard that one can walk on them without danger of sinking in above the tops of his shoes, as he does elsewhere. Without seeing a single rat, one would know that there must be thousands of them, from the evidence of these paths alone. And William Helber, the foreman, says that at night they swarm in countless numbers over the reeking dump.

A single rat infected with the plague might at any time escape from some foreign vessel in port and communicate the disease to this great rat colony. Some of them would inevitably make their way into the surrounding houses, spreading the disease, and Portland might become a great pesthouse, full of plague that would carry off hundreds if not thousands of her citizens. With a crematory capable of consuming all the garbage and refuse, this rat colony would disappear and the danger with it. But the powers that be and which can create new crematories at their pleasure have not yet awakened to the imminent danger. The accompanying picture, taken by a Journal photographer, shows one of the rat trails, with a dead rodent lying in it.

LIGHT WANTS $20,000 FOR LOSS OF A LEG

Counsel for the plaintiff in the damage suit of George W. Light against the Southern Pacific Railroad company for $20,000 for injuries, made the final argument in the United States circuit court this morning and the case went to the jury shortly before noon today. H. D. Norton and J. M. Long appeared for the plaintiff.

While in the employ of the railroad company several years ago Light lost his left leg near Leland. He was working with a gang of workmen who had been repairing bridges and tunnels. While on his way to the bunkhouse the plaintiff alleges that he was struck by a freight train, losing a leg as a result. He charges that it was impossible for him to get off the track because lumber had been piled along both sides of the rails.

SAY YOUNG IS BOUND TO LOSE

Fulton's Friends Believe Bourne Man Cannot Become Postmaster.

John C. Young is up against it, say the friends of Senator Fulton. Young's confirmation as postmaster of Portland will be a dream, but never a reality, is the opinion of the same prophets. He will never be postmaster, and it is all off with him. That is the way it is all framed up. Senator Fulton is playing a waiting game, say these friends, relying on the new administration to put the snuffer down on the hopes of Senator Bourne and his appointee. According to their story, Senator Fulton could have secured an adverse report on the appointment of Mr. Young almost immediately after the matter was referred to the postoffice committee. He, however, did not desire such action because had Young's appointment been repudiated by the senate it would have given Senator Bourne an opportunity to send in another name, and perhaps one against which there could have been no objection. In that case the senate would have been compelled practically to affirm the nominee of the president and of Senator Bourne, and the fight would have been at an end. Under present conditions these friends contend, the situation is entirely different. If the committee holds Young's name in consideration until the end of the session, Bourne cannot put in a new name. After Taft assumes his office, it is hoped Young will stand in influence with the president-elect. Bourne's choice would stand a less chance of success than under the administration of Roosevelt.

That is the game, the Fulton friends say, and they contend it is a winning game.

DALY TRIAL IS NEAR ITS CLOSE

Slayer of Harry Kenny Has Remarkably Speedy Hearing—Plea Is Insanity.

The case of Harry Daly, charged with the murder of Harry Kenny in a north end saloon on the night of November 16, will go to the jury in the circuit court late this afternoon. One of the notable features of this case is the remarkably short length of time which it has taken to try the defendant, compared with other cases where murder in the first degree is the crime charged. Daly's trial began yesterday morning and the defense had submitted their testimony and rested. Daly's only explanation of the crime he is charged with committing is intermittent insanity. His attorneys, John H. Stevenson and L. W. Humphreys, have endeavored to show that their client's mind was affected by an injury received at the Alhambra ferry slip not long ago, and that since that time he has been subject to spells in which he loses all control of himself and remembers nothing of what takes place for four and five hours at a time.

That Daly was in one of these spells at the time the crime was committed is the contention of the attorneys for the defense. Two prisoners in the county jail who occupied the same corridor as does the defendant were called this morning and testified that since Daly's confinement he has shown peculiar symptoms of insanity during the night, throwing his hands above his head, groaning, and seemed at these times to be utterly devoid of reason.

During the introduction of the state's testimony an effort was made to show that Daly had, at times previous to the murder, made threats against the life of the man whom he murdered. The testimony was thrown out at that time, on a technicality, but was introduced again in rebuttal. W. J. Porter, a barber, testified to this effect. Other witnesses, including "Mysterious" Billy Smith, ex-pugilist, were brought by the state in an effort to show that Daly was in his right mind at the time of the crime, and that the murder must have been premeditated.

BARNHILL DENIES HE IS A FAKE SOCIALIST

J. B. Barnhill, who meets Walter Thomas Mills in a joint debate tonight on "Democracy versus Socialism as a Cure for the Trusts," wishes to correct an impression that he is a Socialist in disguise. As Mr. Barnhill received over 4000 Democratic votes in the twenty-fourth congressional district primary in Illinois where he lives, he considers himself able to meet such a reflection upon his sincerity. Moreover Mr. Barnhill has debated with Debs, McGrady and many other leading Socialists who surely would not stoop to participation in a fake debate. Scores of press reports, says Mr. Barnhill, attest the fact that this is a bona fide debate and one fought in a most spirited and determined manner. The debate takes place tonight in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium.

COUNCIL RAPS GUN TOTERS BUT IS KIND TO SMOKERS

The health and police committee of the city council this morning recommended the passage of the Cotel ordinance regulating the sale of firearms and imposing heavy penalties for carrying concealed weapons. The ordinance was first amended, however, to make it unlawful for any police officer to search the records of a firm without authority from the chief. Smokers will regain their lost privilege of puffing on streetcars, if the recommendation of the committee meets with favor in the council. This is that an ordinance be passed which will direct the railway company to rescind its latest orders prohibiting smoking. Passage of an amendment to the stable ordinance now in effect was also recommended. The amendment will prevent the erection of stables to accommodate more than six horses, within certain residence districts of the city.

VIOLATION OF GAME LAWS IS CHARGED

Charged with a violation of the state game laws, E. May, steward of the Commercial club, has been arrested on complaint of J. L. Green, deputy game warden. A number of similar cases are now pending in the justice court.

The attorney for Richards suddenly changed his plea of guilty this morning. Richards is charged with selling wild ducks. The change was made while Justice Hall was pronouncing sentence. Richards pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial.
