

PORTLAND, OREGON, SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 21, 1909.

Olds, Wortman & King Invite

All Lovers of Fine Dress Fabrics to View a Most Comprehensive Exhibit to the Season's Best Weaves

In every way the showing is as complete as the most exacting could ask for. The best weavers of this country and Europe have contributed their finest efforts—the latest word of fashion is represented. Immense window and counter displays make it easy for those who want to spend only a little time, to gain briefly, a good idea as to what has the stamp of Dame Fashion's approval. For those who have the time to look well over this magnificent collection there is much news to tell of what present indications are for the season's favorites that we will be glad to impart.

In Wool Dress Goods this season's tendencies are to plain effects in tailored fabrics, and satin-finished weaves are most in demand. Heavy Satin Liberty, Prunellas, Directoires and Fancy Tailored Suitings have the call.

Preferred shades for street wear are taupe, wistaria, canard, dark Copenhagen, reseda, peacock and mulberry. For afternoon and evening wear, old rose, reseda, straw, cream and white are much favored.

In silks, too, tailored effects are sought for, and weaves that lend themselves readily to these styles are most in demand. The unprecedented demand for silken fabrics in satin-finished weaves has made the outlook for a busy season in the section a flattering one.

Foulards have their share of approval, while oriental weaves such as Motora, Zira, Tussorah, Pagoda, Mandarin and Mirage Silks are prominent on account of their excellence in luster, finish and wear.
