SOCIETY

PREPARATIONS for the Washington's birthday celebration tomorrow and the county fair given for the benefit of the People's Institute yesterday were the chief points of activity last week. Two of the most prominent Washington's birthday affairs will be the musicale to be given by Mrs. John A. Keating in the afternoon to the Daughters of the American Revolution and the banquet to be given in the evening at Hotel Portland by the Sons and Daughters of the Revolution. At the latter W. D. Wheelwright will be the toastmaster and C. E. S. Wood the chief speaker.

There have been two or three large affairs the past week which were probably planned a long time ago before the county fair came up and usurped the horizon. These were given as scheduled and were largely attended, but seldom has there been a week with such a dearth of small events, the kind that are arranged on the spur of the moment a day or two beforehand, and which go to make up the "society butterfly's" full week. This was because everyone was busy running around getting costumes for the county fair and getting people to help them make their own particular department of work a success.

There was some fear expressed before the fair that everybody had been enlisted as workers so that none would be left to attend as spectators. But the fear was groundless. The armory was filled with a mob of eager pleasure seekers all afternoon and all evening. Many of the spectators came in costume and mingled as village marketers among the throng and they added much to the enjoyment of the occasion. Doubtless the fair can be pronounced a great success. Everything was well patronized. The crowds hung curiously about the recesses of the fortune tellers and Professor Morris Abd-El-Kader, Madame Vashti, Luna de Luna and Madame La Claire never were better patronized.

People were more patient than usual with the incessant organ grinding, and they smiled patronizingly upon the ragged little dagoes, and the impish little monkeys. Popcorn men and candy-on-the-stick men were besieged instead of besieging. Crowds gathered in rapt admiration about the hurdy-gurdies. The charidt races filled the vast crowds with thrill after thrill. The German garden ran freely without license from the city and everyone sat there openly without fear of arrest. The dairy appealed to many who had been reared on its products and the fair maidens there in their cleanly frocks and aprons and with their happy singing drew many to their corner. The living pictures were really beautiful and vied with the best art galleries. The sideshows attracted great curious crowds eager to view the wonders of the world.

A remarkable thing was the manner in which so many "doubled" as they say on the stage. There were some strenuous and enthusiastic workers who did three or four "stunts," so eager were they to help the cause. And one could almost swear he had seen double or triple several times.

Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. David S. Stearns gave a reception in honor of the 25th anniversary of their marriage at their home, 655 Belmont street. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The living room and reception hall were in pink carnations and smilax and in the dining room were daffodils and smilax. The guests were received in the living room by Mr. and Mrs. Stearns, and assisting them was Mrs. B. R. Woodward, who was Mrs. Stearns' bridesmaid, and Mrs. D. J. Russell. Punch was served from the cozy corner by Mrs. William H. Wilkinson and Mrs. Anna M. Niles. Webber's orchestra was stationed in the reception hall. Master Lloyd Stearns and Miss Clarice Churchill met the guests at the door. Miss Ellise Stearns and Gus C. Stearns had charge of the dressing rooms, Mrs. Howard Crofts and Mrs. J. A. Crouch presided at the dining table and they were assisted by the Misses Mildred Jackson and Edith Stearns. Mrs. Stearns looked charming in white messaline silk made princess, and carried violets. A feature of the evening was the presence of some ten guests who were present at the wedding 25 years ago, among whom was Mr. Stearns' mother, who is nearly 83 years of age. An engagement of interest that was announced in Lewiston, Idaho, last week was that of Miss Olive Neal to John Claire Monteith of Portland. The wedding is to be celebrated in June. A likeness is shown today of Miss Neal, who is pronounced one of the most popular and clever young women of Lewiston. She attended college at the University of Washington and Stanford and is a member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Mr. Monteith is among the best known musicians of Portland who has made his home here for three or four years and has built up an excellent reputation in that time. He has an excellent baritone voice which is often heard in solo work at concerts and recitals. He is director of the First Unitarian choir and is connected with a number of musical organizations. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Monteith, live in Lewiston and the acquaintance between Miss Neal and Mr. Monteith has been one of long standing.
