John L. Sullivan Says Man Must Have Brain to Be Fighter.

By John L. Sullivan.

ponent.
In stepping into the ring with an opponent I feel as if I were going to sit down to a healthy meal. I never was nervous at all. A great many people might not believe this, but I never was affected with nervousness in my life.
Some fighters get nervous, but this wears off after the first two or three rounds. I have never been affected that way.

Was I ever knocked down by Corbett? was claimed that Mitchell knocked ne down, but that was more of a slip than anything else. The blow that it was claimed Mitchell knocked me down with landed on my chest. I had both feet close together. I was not down a second, but jumped up and went at

No Regrets Vanished Million.

Those of us who, like Cassis Chadwick and Lon Whiteman, the former mayor of Duluth, have made a million easy and lost it, do not envy those who have a million or so in stocks that refuse to produce since the frenzy set in. We who have lost know the worst. The others can merely console themselves with the thought, "Cheer up, the worst is yet to come." I've earned a million in my time, but I've got my money's worth out of it while it was going and nobody will ever hear me crying over spilt punch.

We'll be a long time dead," poor Dan We'll be a long time dead, poor Dan Daly once remarked to me when a fel-low who had seen better days struck us for another lease of life. We respond-ed with a yellowback piece. Dan died with the affection of all who knew him, and I think the knowledge that he had and I think the knowledge that he had had a good time without depriving anybedy of his share of the fun of living made his last hours easier than they would have been had he left a lot of sore spots and a string of libraries with his name on them.

I may not have anything but my friends to show for the money I've put into circulation, but no man ever had truer ones, and foul weather hasn't scared them away. All of them who read these lines can take it from John L., and take it straight, that he has never for a minute regretted the price he paid for his old and true friends. They are well worth the price.

Some of the most learned men who persesent the United States of America in the halls of congress, were great boxers and athletes—such men as United States Senator Jack Chandler, Rossoe Conklin and John Morrisey. Even at this late date, we have the president of the United States, himself, who advocates and boxes continually during his spare hours, or when he finds time that doesn't interfere with his routine business.

A man has to have brains to be a fighter. It is not necessary for him to have great physical strength. It goes without saying that a little fellow cannot fight a bigger and stronger man than himself, though he might win for the time being. It is an evident fact that a good little more cannot beat a good big man; the same thing applies to horses, as a good little horse cannot beat a good big horse. They both must be put in their proper class.

He saw him playing with Portland last year and bought his release. Being his find, Manager Lake can be relied upon to give Danzig a thorough trial. I must say that I like the youngster's looks. It seems that he has grown six inches on his trip. We have Jake Stahl signed for first, but he is no fixture. Danzig will get the bag if he shows to be a better man."

Con Albright, the Rochester wonder, who has signed up to meet Eddie O'Connell in Exposition rink next Thursday night, is now about three pounds above the ringside weight of 145 pounds. Albright has been working hard every morning at the Y. M. C. A. "gym" and is in spiendid trim to meet the welterweight champion of the world.

Albright is a glutton for work. He has worked harder than any man who has yet appeared here. He can stand a gruelling training for the reason that he is a splendidly set up fellow and hard work keeps him in good health and good humor.

O'Connell is undoubtedly in for the hardest battle of his career Thursday night. When the pair battled for two hours and 10 minutes in Rochester last. July without either getting a fall, Albright was satisfied that had it gone farther he would have won. He has been itching to get back in the ring with O'Connell again, and now that he has the chance should make a good showing.
