

CATCHES KITTY WHEN SHE YAWNS

Snapshot Shows Miss Ticky in an Undignified Pose.

When Ticky first opened her eyes on the world, the weather was cold, and the rain was falling. She herself was but a little ball of black and white fur and not unlike her first glimpse of this place where she was to live, she snuggled up close to her mother's warm side. After she had grown to be so big that she would almost make faces at her mother, there came a wonderful sunlit day. Something made her long for out-of-door life.

So when her mother was not looking she slyly slipped out a half open door into the yard, then over into the road where already it was dusty. It was on this day that she met and vanquished the fat puppy belonging to a neighbor. Journal children will remember that the story of that fight was told in The Journal of March 17. Ticky was mighty proud of herself when she saw that puppy run whimpering to his mistress. So she climbed up to an old basket, the highest place she could reach, and looked around complacently on the world where it was so easy to have one's own way. But by and by she became sleepy and some one with very good hearing heard her say, "Isn't it almost bed time?" And she yawned a big yawn.

Just at that moment Ticky's mistress, who is Mrs. D. A. Owens of Sellwood, Oregon, came out of doors and saw Ticky with the funny look on her face. Mrs. Owens is a clever photographer and the kitten's pose appealed to her. By much coaxing she induced Ticky to repeat her performance. So The Journal readers through the courtesy of Mrs. Owens have been given views of the little feline actress. Both pictures are protected by copyright.

It is easy to see that the day was a big one for Ticky. To make one's first excursion away from home, to whip a real dog, and then have one's picture taken—these were momentous events. All these things made Ticky very tired.

Such a Sleepiness.

SIMPLE RULES THAT MAY SAVE LIFE IN CASE OF FIRE

One's ability to extinguish a starting fire or to escape if caught in a burning building depends upon intelligence and self-control.

If the blaze is just starting, throw water on the material that is burning, not at the blaze. One bucket of water will do more good if thrown on by hand, or with a broom, than dished on at once. A small fire may be smothered with a rug or blanket, or beaten out with a broom.

If you cannot put out the starting fire in a minute, yell fire and then, if in a city, call the fire department. Every one living in the house should know the telephone number to be used for getting the firemen, and it should be on the wall for strangers to use. There is no time for looking in the directory, even if one should not be too nervous to find a number. Every one should know where the nearest fire alarm box is, and how to use it.

Do not leave the door open when you run out to give an alarm. If the doors and windows are closed when a fire starts one can always get the firemen there in time to put it out while it is only in one room. The fire soon consumes all the oxygen in a closed room and may die out if it gets no fresh air. The fire alarm box in the street is quicker and surer than the telephone. In using it one telegraphs to the engine house the number of the box. The firemen know, by the number, where the call comes from and get their engines and ladders to it quickly.

How to Pull Alarm.
Nearly all fire alarm boxes are worked by a hook. To turn in an alarm one must pull a hook (which is just inside the door) down as far as he can and then let go. This makes a gong at the engine house sound the number four times, so the firemen may be sure of the count. Before pulling the hook in this kind of box one must open the door. In nearly all boxes this is done with a key. The keys of some boxes are kept in a building near by, and there are signs to show which building. In other boxes the key can be seen behind a piece of thin glass in the door. One can get at it in an instant by breaking the glass with a stick, a stone or a knife handle. The glass falls out of the way as soon as it is broken.

After the firemen are called, work at getting out the things you want most to save. Don't throw the clock out of the window and then carry out your clothing, as some persons have done.

If awakened in the night by the smell or cry of fire, don't dress. Wrap yourself in a blanket or quilt from the bed and get out the quickest way you can. Shut the doors you pass through. After calling help look in and see where and what is the danger. You can tell if it is best to carry out the household goods. If the fire is on the first floor, it is very dangerous to go above, because the heat and choking smoke rise.

How to Go Through Smoke.
One can often get through a hall filled with smoke by going on his hands and knees, when he would fall choking if he ran. The smoke is thickest at the ceiling. Holding a wet towel, or anything made of flannel, or even a coat collar, over the mouth greatly lessens the danger of injury to the lungs, or death from the carbonic acid gas in the smoke.

Most fires start in the first floor or basement of the building and burn a hole up through the roof. In a house the flames travel by the stairways; in a big store or hotel they go quickly up the elevator shaft. After reaching the top the fire spreads and slowly goes down.

If a man working in a big store or factory sees a fire starting he should turn in the alarm if there is a box in the building; try to put it out with water in any hall near by, then use a chemical extinguisher if there is one.

If a person is in a burning building with no fire escapes and the stair below is burning, or the hall is filled with smoke, he should shut the door and transoms to keep out the deadly gases. Then he should throw open the window to get cool air and let the firemen and neighbors see where he is, so that they may bring a ladder to the window.

One should wait at the window for help until he is scorched or choking. By that time the firemen will be holding a big hoop covered with canvas in which they will catch him. If no one is near, he should throw out the bedding, tick and all, and jump on that. It is safer to jump into the top of a tree than to the ground.

WRANGLE OVER NEW BRIDGE

Contractor Insists on Employment of Expert to Superintend Repairs.

The latest proposition of the North-west Bridge Work to the city council concerning repairs to the new East Twenty-eighth street bridge was considered yesterday afternoon by Mayor Lane and the bridge committee of the executive board and City Engineer Taylor. The committee will meet again Monday afternoon to make final decision.

The contracting firm offers to repair the bridge in what the city council has demanded, but asks that a competent engineer be employed to specify the repairs necessary to make the structure conform to specifications. Chairman Esterly of the bridge committee does not want to put the city to the expense of securing an expert to pass upon the defects of the viaduct. He drew up a resolution calling upon the company to make good the flaws in the south abutment and the parapet walls, to put in the missing expansion joints and also to increase the length of the approaches.

At the meeting Monday afternoon the committee will determine what course of action to pursue.

CLERGYMAN SPURNS A PRAYER FEE

Trenton, March 21.—The Rev. Father A. H. Stein, pastor of the Holy Trinity church, has created a stir in the legislature by sending a letter to the committee on clergymen, refusing to accept the customary check of $10 for making one prayer at the opening of a house session. This is the first time in his history of the state when a clergyman has refused to accept such a fee. One of the main scruples of the clergy is that there has been to give a favorite minister the chance of making a prayer, and incidentally, getting the fee.

Father Stein writes: "A fee of $10 does not make a prayer more effective, it does not pose as being better, or less in need of money than any of my fellow-clergymen, but the present method of inviting the 'prayer-makers' and the consideration attached has been criticized by the press, by members of the legislature, and by clergymen themselves. The objection in my letter and the nonacceptance of the fee is to innuendo the advisability of appointing a regular chaplain of the legislature. There are many old and deserving men of the ministry, incompetent by ill-health, to whom the salary would be a boon."

SENDS FLOWERS TO HOSPITAL PATIENTS

Patients at the city hospital were greatly pleased yesterday when young ladies from the North Albina Rose Culture club paid them a visit, bringing with them large bunches of violets and daffodils, presents from the people of North Albina. It is planned to make these visits regular weekly affairs and in order to help the people of North Albina to help the people of North Albina are asked to bring flowers to the meeting of the Rose Culture club next Tuesday evening or else to Miss Zella Gossett, 9 West Killingsworth.
