The indictment reads, in its first count, that on July 22, 1908, Scriber re-ported the loans and discounts of the bank at the close of business July 15 of the same year as being $163,019, when the true figures were $130,000. The lla-bilities of the bank were stated to be $75600 when they were actually $12,900. Another report to the comptroller of currency showed the loans and discounts of the bank to be $161,546 when the true figures were $130,000. The llabilities of the bank were placed at $2500 when the true total was $10,000. Wilbur, who appeared for O'Connell, insisted that Piggott is not the attorney for the woman, and that John Manning is the only one authorized to represent her. Piggott replied that he would not desert his client, despite the man-ner in which she berated him, because he believed her to be "quasi non compos mentis." KRUGER'S WI he believed her to be 'quasi non compos mentia." Judge Gantenbein finally granted a motion to dismiss the proceeding to reopen the divorce proceedings without prejudice, the understanding being that Manning may have the matter reopened if he so desires. Manning has already stated that he will have nothing to do with this, but will act for Mrs. O'Connell in making a final settle-ment of her property rights. A division of the O'Connell property was ordered by Judge O'Day last sum-mer at the conclusion of the divorce case. Afterward Mrs. O'Connell deeded away her land in a transaction in which she claims she was misled and de-ceived by her attorneys. She has since been blaming Piggott for much of her trouble. J. W. Votes to Submit Bond Issue Proposition to People, but Saddles It With Two Amendments Calculated

The city council voted unanimously this morning to submit the $150,000

crematory bond issue advocated by the Portland chamber of commerce to the people at the June election. But Coun-cilman Rushlight succeeded in amending the amendment so that the matter of a site for the crematory is again left in the hands of the council, as it has been for the past four years. And Council-man Belding tacked on a clause which authorizes the council to charge for the collection of garbage.

These two changes, it is thought, will have the effect of killing the bond issue; for as Councilman Cellars said, "the voters already realize the futility of hoping for a garbage incinerator if the selection of a site is left with this council."

council." As the amendment will go before the voters, it provides for a 10-year issue of 5 per cent bonds to be redeemed by 10 yearly payments out of the general fund. The selection and purchase of the site devolves on the council, and the building of the plant, its equipment and operation is left to the city health board.
