

CHICAGO BEGS DIAZ TO STAY

Remarkable Parade to Demonstrate Desire for Continued Service.

City of Mexico, April 2.—This ancient capital today was the scene of a popular demonstration, the like of which has never been witnessed here before. Many thousands of men from all parts of the country joined the people of the capital in a monster parade which marched through the principal streets of the ancient town and proceeded to the National palace to salute President Diaz and urge him to accept another term. For nearly a quarter of a century Porfirio Diaz has been the idol of his country and under his wise and strong administration the country has grown and developed and prospered as few other countries in history during an equal period.

When President Diaz, who will be 60 years next fall, announced some time ago that he desired to retire to private life and would not accept another term as president, the whole country was seized with consternation and, as numerous individual requests proved ineffective to induce Diaz to abandon his determination, a gigantic popular demonstration was decided upon. It is hoped that it would induce the "Grand Old Man of Mexico" to change his mind. For weeks the preparations were made on an extensive scale and everywhere in the republic the plan met with the most enthusiastic support.

To March in the Grand Parade.

Every ranch owner in the country sent at least ten men, fully mounted and arrayed in military style, to the capital, to take part in the demonstration and every mine, manufacturing establishment, plantation and many commercial establishments fitted out more or less picturesquely arrayed delegations, to march in the grand parade of today. The parade was probably the most brilliant in the history of the city and the streets of the capital were filled with enthusiastic throngs of people among whom there were thousands of foreigners, who had been attracted to the capital by the magnificent spectacle. Many races and nationalities and all strata of the social scale were represented and all seemed to be filled with the same spirit of enthusiastic admiration for their beloved president and with the eager hope that the popular fervor would persuade him to remain at his post, at least for another term.

Four in Line of Succession.

Although the final decision of President Diaz is still in abeyance, there are many who are convinced that his determination to retire at the end of his present term is irrevocable. It is generally believed that should Diaz refuse to accept another term his successor will probably be one of four men, three of whom are now looked upon as active candidates for the office. These four presidential possibilities are Ramon Corral, the present president; Jose Y. Limantour, minister of finance; General Bernardo Reyes, former minister of war and now constitutional governor of the state of Chihuahua.

Corral is the only one of the four who is not charged with laying plans to succeed Diaz in the presidency. He has attained great prominence in the political affairs of Mexico, however, and mention of his name in connection with the presidency comes from his friends and admirers in different parts of the country.

Could Dictate Successor.

It is generally conceded by men well informed as to the political situation here that President Diaz practically dictates who shall succeed him as chief executive, but it is thought he will not attempt to exercise this power. He has expressed the wish that the next president shall be chosen by popular vote. If this plan is carried out, the next campaign between the respective candidates will be exceedingly warm and exciting.

It has been charged from time to time that Corral is the political protégé of President Diaz and that the latter brought him to this city from the remote state of Sonora several years ago to put him in training for the presidency. This may or may not be true, but it cannot be denied that Corral shows himself a man of great executive ability. General Reyes is the idol of the army, and is also popular in civic circles. He is many considered the strongest of the candidates. Limantour is immensely wealthy and a man of acknowledged business ability. Creel is also a man of great wealth and has a strong following among the mine owners and men of finance throughout the republic. He enjoys great confidence and respect of the people in Mexico as well as abroad, wherever he is known.

TAPS SOUND FOR MAJOR CORNOYER, INDIAN FIGHTER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Or., April 2.—Major Narcissa A. Cornoyer, 88 years old, one of the old pioneers who has helped to make the history of Oregon, and one of the best known of the old Indian fighters of the state, died at his home about 10 miles south of Astoria, at a late hour last night. Death was due to old age. Major Cornoyer had been a resident of Oregon since 1852, having settled in Marion county in that year. He first came to the coast from Illinois during the gold rush to California in 1849, but came north to Oregon after a single year's residence in California. He soon became prominent in Marion county, having been elected sheriff before Oregon was admitted to the union. He was also the first sheriff of the county after Oregon had become a state.

Umatilla Resident Since 1861.

He had been a resident of Umatilla county since the year 1861 and was one of the best known men in eastern Oregon. For seven years he served as the agent of the Umatilla reservation, a part of this period being during the Bannock war of 1878. It was during this period that Pendleton was perhaps saved from falling into the hands of the Indians, the chief of the major's bravery and strategy.

He was born in Illinois, November 16, 1820. He was married in Marion county, Oregon, in 1851 to Miss Mary Ballew, 74 years old, who survives him. He is also survived by five children, all of whom are residents of Umatilla county. The surviving son is Gus Cornoyer. The four daughters are: Mrs. E. J. Summerville of Pendleton, Mrs. Forest, Mrs. Alex Kirk and Mrs. D. C. Kirk.

The burial is announced to be held in the Catholic cemetery at Walla Walla on Saturday afternoon. It is significant that it was near his burial place that Major Cornoyer won his title and his fame as an Indian fighter in the early days. At the time of the Indian uprising of 1858 he was a resident of Marion county, but he immediately raised a company of 30 men, all of whom he knew personally, and who were later known as Company K. The major went into the thick of the fight, centering about Walla Walla, and it was to him that the credit of the Walla Walla tribe surrendering. He and his little band of picked men are also said to be largely responsible for the victory that the whites gained over the Indians a few days after the surrender of the Walla Walla tribe.

OLDEST EUROPEAN MONARCH'S BIRTHDAY
Berlin, April 2.—Grand Duke George II of Saxe-meiningen, who has the distinction of being the oldest of the European rulers, celebrated his eighty-third birthday today. The small but populous and very prosperous duchy over which the aged grand duke reigns was set on fire in celebration of the anniversary and he was presented with addresses of congratulation from the legislature and the people. Other felicitous greetings from Emperor William and the heads of the various states of the empire showed the universal esteem and popularity in which the aged ruler is held. Grand Duke George succeeded to the throne of Saxe-meiningen upon the death of his father in 1868. In the 40 years and more that he has reigned he has devoted himself to the cultivation of fine arts, and his little court has been one of the centers of the highest cultured life of Europe. Brought apart from his devotion to art, the old duke is venerated for his bravery and brilliance as a soldier. He is obligated, too, as a thorough German patriot, for he broke with his father in 1866, when the latter espoused the cause of Austria in her fight with Prussia.
