This is the last week of the Lenten season and in consequence it is expected that a much larger demand for fresh fish will be shown. Practically all the fresh salmon used in the United States at this time comes from the Sacramente river, in California, streams in other states being closed for a while. This has resulted in an advance of he a pound in the price in the south and consequently at other centers. Chinook salmon is today quoted in the Portland market at 13c a pound.

From the present understanding, the season on the Willamette and perhaps the Clackamas, will open one week from the coming Thursday, or April 15. Efforts are still being made to keep both of these streams closed to fishermen until the Columbia season opens, and the efforts are being backed by practically the entire lower Columbia does not apply to the local streams, while the fish warden, backed by the Astoria crowd, says that it applies to all three streams alike. According to the Willamette fishers this solution would work a bardship upon them, inasmuch as they can fish only for a limited period because of the spring freshets, and if they cannot fish from April 15 their business would be absolutely ruined. Fish Warden McAllister has made a ruling that the new law applies to the Willamette and Clackamas, but through some flaw in posting the notice the decree is said to be unlawful.

Looks Like Good Spring Season.

According to special advices received

Fish Warden McAllister has made a ruling that the new law applies to the Willamette and Clackamas, but through some flaw in posting the notice the decree is said to be unlawful.

Looks Like Good Spring Season.

According to special advices received by The Journal from various interests, the prospects are bright for a very good season on the Columbia during the spring run. The delay in opening the Columbia season on account of the law passed by the late legislature, is said to insure a better catch when the season does start.

So far as the markets are concerned, the salmon situation could scarcely open with better prospects than seem apparent at this time. In all world's conters canned salmon supplies are limited and prices have therefore ruled better than usual. While it is still rather early to say that the Columbia river than usual. While it is still rather early to say that the Columbia river canned salmon market will open at this spring, there is considerable agitation among the canners to put the price 10 higher than a year ago, when values for Columbia fish were not placed as high as they should have been.

Some Weekness in Eog Market.

While sales of hogs were still reported today as high as $7.50, the general trend of the market does not look so good from a seller's point of view and it would take a better class of stuff to bring this figure than during the past week. Run of hogs for the 48 hours was liberal, a total of 640 head appearing. The late weakness in the hog price east has found a response here in view of the fact that Pacific northwest packers have been forced to purchase the bulk of their requirements at Nebraska points during the past few months.

No sheep came into the yards during the past 48 hours and while the indications are that the entire livestock situation is a shade weaker than last week, sheep show no changed values today.

Today, 40 horses were among the arrivals in the yards.

Today's arrivals in the yards compare with this day in recent years as follows:

No arrangements have been made for the entertainment of the party here, and it is presumed they will leave on the 11:45 Northern Pacific for Seattle, and not leave the Union depot.

Despite Cold Rain, Eugene Charter Revision Commission Would Abolish Park. Water, Health Boards

> The second charter revision commis sion at a session this morning recommended that the park, water and bealth boards be abolished and that the powers of these three municipal boties be delegated to the city executive board. Another amendment adopted by the commission was one giving the executive board the power to appoint the superintendent of the water department and the council the authority to fix his sainty.

Salaries of other city officials were discussed by the commission which, however, did not make any recommendation on this matter. It is the intention of the members to put the salary question up to the voters under separate amendments.
