STREAK OF STRANGE LUCK LEADS TO TALE OF TWO OVERCOATS

F. A. Gaddis, a rising young business man of the city, has come to the conclusion, after some doubt, that one good luck breeds another. Richard W. Williams, his brother-in-law and a well known engineer in the United States engineers' office, does not agree. The divergence in view has its rise in the tale of two overcoats.
A few evenings ago Mr. Gaddis accompanied Mrs. Gaddis to a local theatre. As the evening was cool he wore a brand new overcoat, which he checked at the theatre. After the theatre he presented his check, received a hat and coat and started home. Two blocks on his way he found a pair of gloves that did not belong to him and upon careful scrutiny discovered that he had an old and shabby pair, which did not fit and did not measure up to the requirements of his own property. He protested at the check window, but there was no trace of his new coat. So he was disconsolate.
Last night Mr. Gaddis visited at the home of his father-in-law, Captain George Williams. He was still bemoaning the loss of his coat. His brother-in-law starting down town, went into the hall to put on his overcoat.
"This is not my coat," he said, after he had selected a garment from the place where his own usually hung.

"Don't talk to me about overcoats. It is a sore subject," grumbled Gaddis.
"Very well," agreed Mr. Williams, coming back into the room with the foreign coat. "This is a new one and better than mine, so I am very thankful to the friend who traded with me."
Gaddis took one good look and gasped. Then he laughed. He is laughing still, though Williams has a deep dark thoughtful and at the same time philosophical expression. Mr. Gaddis had worn his brother-in-law's coat to the theatre.

Somnambulist in Bull Pen.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Luis Potosi, Mexico, May 14.—Suffering from somnambulism, Juan Nolasco, a boy, wandered while asleep into the pen where the bulls for exhibition and fighting purposes are kept. One of the animals rushed upon the boy and gored him. The lad was tossed against a fence and severely injured. His screams summoned the keepers, who prevented the bulls from trampling their victim.

Health Seeker's Long Tramp.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Sacramento, Cal., May 14.—After a two months' tramp from Los Angeles, A. Wood and his wife are in this city today. After a brief rest they will continue their journey on foot to Seattle. Wood recently recovered from a severe illness, and is taking the long tramp in hopes of completely regaining his health.

BACK TO THE OLD FARM WITH GUST WALL, WHO LOST HIS WAY

Gust Wall of Klondike, Ore., was not lost; he was simply afraid to come home in the dark. At least this was the explanation he made yesterday evening when he walked unconcernedly into the lobby of the Imperial hotel and seemed very much surprised to learn that they had been leading a frantic search for him since noon Wednesday. But such an explanation was not to the liking of Wall's wife and daughter. As angry as they had been anxious they thought the old man to pack up his belongings and all returned on the first train to their home in Sherman county where he perplexed noise and traffic of city streets will have no further tendency to embarrass them.
By his wife and daughter, accompanied by his wife and daughter, the intention being to make arrangements for the sale of his ranch so that they could move to town. When they went sightseeing on Council Crest, Wall wandered away while his daughter was having some post card pictures taken. After the mother and daughter had searched many hours and given up hope they put the case into the hands of the police and local detectives. All their Portland friends were called in to the quest. All during yesterday afternoon telephone messages were constantly coming in from searching parties scattered over the heights, asking for the latest developments.

Through all the searches, Wall wandered back to town, when he got ready. He announced that he had become bewildered and tired by the noise and bustle and wanted to get out in the country where he could see peaceful cows and horses. Darkness overtook him and he decided to stay in the country all night rather than face the dangers of a strange road. When daylight came again he leisurely returned to his anxious relatives.

PALMIST TO TESTIFY IN MINING SUIT

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Oroville, Cal., May 14.—Unusual interest is being shown here in the case brought by S. E. Churchman against the four Steifer brothers, directors of the P. M. Steifer Mining company, which is being heard here this week. The interest centers largely about the probable testimony of Mrs. Houseworth, a palmetist of San Francisco, who is supposed to know something of the affairs of the company. Mrs. Houseworth testified that one of the Steifer brothers went to her parlors in San Francisco for advice pertaining to the affairs of the company. The mine is near the famous Pershacker property on Magalia ridge and is said to be very rich. In his complaint, Churchman, who is a small stockholder, charges mismanagement with intent to freeze out minor stockholders, flooding the mine to delay work, and misappropriation of ore.

Servant Sues for Dog Bite.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Fresno, Cal., May 14.—Claiming nearly $3000 damages because she was bitten by her employer's dog, Mrs. Annie Davis, a servant, has filed suit against Miss M. B. Percival of Lathrop. Mrs. Davis charges that last February Miss Percival removed a vicious dog from its accustomed place in the yard and chained it near the door of the house. She was not informed of the removal of the dog, stepped out of the door and was bitten by the "pet." The plaintiff demands the following sums:
For loss of time $40; for physician's

Do You Feed Your Family Lard?

The thought of taking into your stomach raw lard—hog fat—is repellant; then why take it in cooked form? There used to be a poor excuse for lard; now there is no excuse at all.

Cottoleene is the perfect shortening and frying medium. It is pure, healthful and digestible—there is not a trace of hog fat in it. Its basis is choice cotton seed oil refined by a special process, and then sterilized and deodorized. The use of Cottoleene is the secret of healthful, digestible cookery.

Call up your grocer this minute and order a pail.

COTTOLENE is Guaranteed Your grocer is hereby authorized to refund your money in case you are not pleased, after having given Cottoleene a fair test.

Never Sold in Bulk Cottoleene is packed in pails with an air-tight top to keep it clean, fresh and wholesome, and prevent it from catching dust and absorbing disagreeable odors, such as fish, oil, etc.
