

WILL PROBABLY GO TO KLAMATH

Business Men Find Excursions Highly Profitable Ventures.

One of the greatest tangible benefits yet evidenced from the excursion of Portland business men last week was the enthusiasm displayed at the reunion and social gathering of those who had been on the trip with other members of the club. So successful did they consider it that a proposition to make a similar excursion to Klamath Falls on Railroad day, June 14, was received with enthusiasm and it is more than probable that there will be a special train out of Portland to Klamath for that occasion. The question of rates has not yet been settled but in case satisfactory arrangements can be made a large number of business men will undoubtedly make the trip to the opening of the road.

Every man who was on the excursion last week was either present at last night's meeting or was represented by a letter explaining why he couldn't be there. Not one failed to respond to the requests sent out that all the excursionists should be present.

The matter of public improvements in Portland which the club has become strongly interested in since the special taken up by S. M. Luders, Mr. Luders called attention especially to the excellent condition of the Tacoma street, a feature of the trip to Tacoma that was commented upon at the time by nearly every member of the party. Mr. Luders recalled how the excursionists had ridden in automobiles for an hour and a half without once getting off the road, a feat which is impossible for a party being shown the sights of Portland.

V. A. Holt made an excellent address on "The Booster Spirit," in which he commended the enthusiasm for one's own city which inspired the excursion and the good that belief in the possibilities of Portland is able to do. He called attention to what boosting had done for even the smaller Washington cities visited by the excursion and advised that a like spirit be encouraged among the cities and towns of Oregon.

J. R. Marshall told the meeting a lot about exhibitions and some good particular points of interest about the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific show, which he said was going to be well worth the while of Portland people going to see. It would be a help not only to Seattle but to Portland and the entire Pacific northwest, he said.

Irrigation, which made a great impression upon the excursionists, was told about by A. H. Averill. Mr. Averill contrasted the conditions in the Yakima valley with those in the Willamette somewhat to the advantage of the former and said it showed what those who labor to work for what they have will do to secure the highest degree of excellence. He said that Oregon's great future for much of the land is dependent upon proper irrigation and advocated the prosecution of irrigating work wherever there is favorable field for it.

any money for his services in that connection. The attorney general's statement, which was mailed at Washington today, will be introduced in evidence in the Calhoun case on its arrival here.

HENEY QUESTIONS RUDOLPH SPRECKELS

(United Press Leased Wire.)

San Francisco, May 21.—The prosecution is not done yet with sensationalism. There are others to follow Helms, and while their testimony will be no more startling than his, they will corroborate every allegation which was made of the plotting and law breaking of Patrick Calhoun and his force of attorney-detectives who hired men to declare William J. Burns today. "When we have finished introducing evidence, we will present to the jury a case that no 12 men can return any verdict on but guilty. We have other cards yet to play and we are going to play them strong."

After two days of sensational proceedings, the Calhoun trial today took a step backward, so far as interesting developments are concerned.

Spreckels on the Stand.
Rudolph Spreckels, who yesterday submitted to the defense his graft prosecution accounts and branded as false the allegations on the part of Calhoun and his attorneys, that he was paying Heney for his work as prosecutor, resumed the stand.

"Did you ever hear of me stealing any money?" was the first question put to Spreckels by Heney.

"The answer was a smiling denial. Spreckels then testified that Heney had never received a cent from him for personal use in connection with the graft prosecution or for any other services.

"Do you know how I have been able to live for the last few years?" Heney asked.

"Spreckels said he did not. Later testimony revealed that Heney was supporting three unmarried sisters and had loaned $5000 to a brother.

Henev Takes Up Spy System.
Taking up the spy system of the United Railroads and its employees, Heney asked Spreckels:

"Do you know whether anyone in your office is employed by Earl Rogers?"

"I do not know what means they use to spy into other people's affairs, and I don't care," responded the witness. "They are welcome to anything they can find in my office. There is nothing to hide."

"Neither have I anything to hide," declared Heney, rising, "and since they have brought up the subject of my pay, I am going to obtain all the checks, vouchers and receipts that have been used in paying the expenses of the prosecution."

"Then, turning to Earl Rogers, attorney for the defense, the prosecutor shouted:

"And I am going to show up your method before I get through."

Rogers replied, intimating that Heney had received large sums of money for prosecuting the Oregon land grabbers.

The prosecutor grew angrier, and emphatically declared that his accounts with the government were not secret, with that they were on the way here and would be brought into court as soon as they arrived.

Helms Cross-Examined.
After a few unimportant questions Spreckels was cross-examined by John Helms, who provided the sensations in yesterday's proceedings, was called by Rogers about his being employed by both the United Railroads and the prosecution at the same time.

"I want to say that under no circumstances while I was in the employ of the United Railroads did I give information regarding the company's lawful business to Burns. I only informed Burns that he was being double-crossed."

INTERSTATE COMMERCE

only get the short haul from the Columbia river to the sound?"

In their briefs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission the Harriman lines alleged among other reasons why the gateway should be opened, the fact that the Northern Pacific was discriminating against them in that it would not sell through tickets with the Harriman lines, but did so with both the Great Northern and the Canadian Pacific, allegedly competing lines for Puget sound business.

Pullman Accommodations.
Among other inconveniences has been that of Pullman accommodations. A man buying a Pullman from Chicago to Seattle via the Northern Pacific pays $14 for it. If, however, he goes from Chicago to Portland and then to Seattle he has to pay $14 to Portland and the Pullman fare between Portland and Seattle.

Harriman officials here are in hopes that they will be allowed to place the through rates between the east and Puget sound via Portland in effect at once so as to reap the full benefit of travel to the Seattle fair. It is possible, however, that the Hill lines will not be content to let the case drop at this point, but will carry it into the United States supreme court. W. W. Cotton is in Spokane on matters connected with the Spokane rate case and the Northern Pacific has no general legal representative here.

Mrs. Johnson Drinks Acid.
(United Press Leased Wire.)
Everett, Wash., May 21.—Mrs. Johnson, employed as a domestic in an Everett rooming house, killed herself Wednesday by drinking carbolic acid. The woman's husband and two children are at Sellwood, Or. The couple are supposed to have been divorced. Mrs. Johnson left a letter addressed to her young son intimating she intended to commit suicide and expressing sorrow over her separation from them.

CALL OF SEA NOT TO BE RESISTED

all the bathhouses both in Portland and Oregon City had failed to reveal that a boat had been borrowed, rented or taken on that date without having been returned. No trace could be found of the supposed man with whom Davis had left on his pretended fishing trip and all these things taken together began to make the disappearance look like a deliberate one rather than accidental.

Said He Was Going Fishing.
When Davis left on May first he told that he was going fishing to Oregon City, stated that he would leave early on Saturday morning so as to get to Oregon City in time for the early morning fishing at the falls. That was the last seen of him. He left his clothing, all his personal belongings and other effects in his rooms as usual, and left a handsome gold watch with Mrs. Deubert for safe keeping, remarking at the time that she was to keep it until his return. When asked if he meant the following morning he remarked, "Well, I'll keep it until I show up again."

The watch as well as all his other belongings were, however, turned over to Gilbert Davis.

Davis is 23 years of age and has been in Portland since last October. Financially, every investigation has revealed the fact that he had saved a little money before leaving. He seemed happy over his approaching marriage, was well liked by the hardware people with whom he was employed, and apparently had no other reason for leaving unexpectedly except that he obeyed the too audible call of the ocean. Gilbert Davis, the older brother who is here now, says:

"There was no reason for his leaving as he did and that is what makes the matter inexplicable to me. He did not have to ask our permission to go to sea and the fact that he was to have been married makes it all the harder to believe. If he was going to sea, why didn't he tell us of his intended departure?"

The fact that he left here Saturday night and apparently went to Coos Bay makes it appear likely that he took passage on the steamer Alliance, which sails from Coos Bay street dock every Saturday night for Marshfield. If he left Coos Bay for Honolulu, he very likely went on the steamer Nann Smith, plying in the lumber trade out of Coos Bay in command of Captain W. B. Olson. The Nann Smith is owned by the A. C. Smith Lumber company and Davis was probably aware of the fact that the steamer had been scheduled to sail for Honolulu in the near future.
