

MAN ATTEND BRILLIANT AFFAIR

Admiral Ijichi and Staff Formally Made Welcome to Rose City at Banquet and Reception at Hotel Portland Last Night.

Taken Trip on Columbia.
Admiral Ijichi and his staff were taken for a trip up the Columbia river this morning under the guidance of Consul Numano. The party was scheduled to return to the city this afternoon at 8 o'clock, when they will be taken to the home of President Ralph W. Hoyt of the Rose Festival association for a light luncheon and entertainment until the dinner hour, when they will be entertained at dinner by Consul Numano.

Banners of the United States and Japan were twined together and the people of Portland brought their best in the way of attention and entertainment last night when Admiral Ijichi and his staff of the Japanese navy were formally made welcome. No banquet and reception ever given in Portland were more brilliant than those tendered last night to the Japanese admiral. The Hotel Portland, where the event transpired, was made splendidly beautiful with flowers mingled among the colors of the United States and Japan and the Rose Festival. The foremost business and social leaders of Oregon were present to do honor to the city's distinguished guests.

"This spontaneous display of good will toward us can only be regarded as a direct and frank expression of the traditional good feeling existing between these two nations," said Admiral Ijichi, responding to the welcome which had been given him and voicing as he did so the feelings of all the other Japanese present. The admiral continued in words believed to bear great significance as outlining the future policy of Japan toward the United States:

"I think I need not dwell upon the sincerity of Japan toward America. I am therefore convinced that these exchanges of visits and reciprocal friendship will go far toward strengthening the good will existing between the two countries linked together, instead of separated by the Pacific coast, which opens a broad channel of ever increasing commerce and navigation. And I hope that the star spangled banner gracefully entwined with the flag of the rising sun, and which is in the room, will eternally symbolize the lasting peace and prosperity of the United States of America and Japan."

Master of Ceremonies.
William MacMaster was toastmaster of the evening and right graciously presided. As he rose to call the company away from their enjoyment of the elaborate menu to the greater enjoyment of the toasts his face lighted up with the pleasure all felt because of the felicitous occasion. In a few simple words he assured the Japanese guests of the entire good feeling of all American people toward them and expressed his own sense of honor at being in a position to proffer such a tribute of esteem.

Numano, Japanese Consul, Proposed the Toast. "The Health of President Taft" During his short address he emphasized the indelible impressed sense of gratitude felt by the Japanese people because of the aid in progress given them by the people of the United States in identifying this country as a leader of the world's march of progress and he expressed his deep gratitude because of the place being taken by Japan among the great powers. His remarks were well put and elicited applause of the heartiest nature.

Wheelwright Welcomes Guests.
William D. Wheelwright formally welcomed Japan to the United States. He chose during his remarks to recall the recent history of Japan, when Commodore Perry went to that country, only to find a dubious welcome. Then he detailed the great results that have followed the opening of that country to the trade and fellowship of the Anglo-Saxon races. He applauded the Japanese because of their progress and spoke of them in the words of President Taft a "nation of gentlemen, scholars, soldiers and statesmen."

ara, soldiers and statesmen." He declared the Japanese were the most courteous people in the world and cited instances to show how every foreigner who now visits the kingdom of the Rising Sun is given every possible courtesy and attention. Mr. Ayres' address was frequently interrupted by the music of the bands marching in the Rose Festival parade, but as all the first they played were of a patriotic nature, the effect was only added to.

The Friendship of Nations. The toast given by Colonel C. E. S. Wood, was a masterpiece of its kind. He pronounced a new creed of individualism developed for the masses. He disclaimed war, its carnage and its sorrow, and pointed his hearers toward the higher ideal of civic righteousness, peaceful invention and consummated ideal.

Eloquent Address by Colonel Wood.
Flowery periods of oratory sweeping every listener away from any possible contemplation of the sordid or unworthy were but vehicles for the expression of a deeper thought—that the day is to come and progress is now being made toward it when the nations of the earth will be linked together in the bond of peace and brotherhood and the terror of war, even, shall be a thing forgotten and left on the pages of history.

Strengthening his position by an appeal to history, Colonel Wood related instances to show how war and the thought of it grow the two great enemies of a past when a battle for existence was forced upon men. With the invention of civilization and the higher standard of living consequent came more the spirit of brotherhood. Hell has been for many generations as a result of religious wars. Colonel Wood asserted. But the true religion is the religion of happiness. This is the religion of peace. It is an every system of philosophy, in every dream of the poet, in every religious aspiration and in every noble deed. It is peace. This emphasizes the pronouncement that man has but one great passion, the passion to exist. Out of it grow the two great ideals, said the speaker, liberty and peace, liberty to live upon the plane of individual desire and ambition, peace for the enjoyment of life. Thus man dreams the dreams that he will make come true. Even now this wonderful creature, man, has accomplished every ideal and desire. It remains for him to accomplish those desires which the age and the time produce. In the time of peace the ideal of liberty and peace are gaining sway. The need for government will some time have no farther need of existence. There will be no need for greater armament.

Opposed to Big Navy.
The speaker declared that he did not believe the God of war is the God of justice, but is the God of the heaviest battalions and the richest treasury. For this reason he contended against Sebree's ambition to increase the size and power of the navy, adding that the cost of one ship would develop all the needs of Oregon and raise a more effectual way than in millions of war.

Cheers for Admiral Sebree.
Admiral Uriel Sebree was not on the printed program for a speech. But he was a guest of honor and his presence among the guests was the signal for prolonged applause from those who believe in the work he is doing and is able to do. Admiral Sebree, preceded Colonel Wood in his address, but he made little reference to the navy. He paid tribute to the maritime genius of Admiral Ijichi, made known his appreciation for the courtesies shown him while a guest in Japan, and then with a trace of sentiment in his voice, told of his regret that he is now counted one of the senior officers of the navy, and must, like the other midshipmen, one of these days pass on and out to make way for a younger man.

Admiral Sebree loves Portland. He declared his affection for the beautiful city grew out of his residence here many years ago, when his only son was born. He added that as long as he lived he would continue to love the city and its people, not only because of the memories that cluster around it, but because of the welcome tendered him on his visit here.

Brilliant Reception Follows.
The banquet was followed by a formal reception, tendered in honor of Admiral Ijichi and his staff. The entire lower floor of the hotel and the spacious outer court were surrendered for the purpose. The room where the banquet was held was made magnificent with flowers and lights. In the decorative scheme the rose held the place of honor but great banks of crimson and white peonies added to the splendor.

Manager H. C. Bowers of the Hotel Portland had neglected no feature of entertainment which might add to the enjoyment of the occasion. Music was furnished by the Imperial Japanese band. As a courtesy to the Americans many of the national airs were played, and then followed much of the late popular music which was perfectly rendered.

The throng in attendance upon the reception was a brilliant one, at the banquet none but men were guests, but the ladies of the city held the places of prominence in the reception and their presence gracing the occasion brought the judgment that the event should become momentous in the history of Portland as signifying Portland's ability to entertain.

All present had words of praise for E. C. Giltner, secretary of the Commercial Club, whose careful planning and happy thought much of the pleasure of the evening was due.

MISS CASE LEAVES FOR OREGON HOME

(United Press Leased Wire.)
New York, June 8.—Declaring that her engagement to Claus Spreckels has been broken and then requesting her interviewers not to think her a prevaricator if she and the millionaire's son were married, Miss Mary Adele Case today departed for Portland, Or., where she will visit her mother and sing in concert.

She declared that she broke her engagement to young Spreckels because his father, John D. Spreckels, told her that no son of his could be on the stage. She said also that the elder Spreckels accused her of putting operative notions into his son's head.

Young Spreckels will remain here with his father until Friday.

Bread Advancing at La Grande.
(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
La Grande, Or., June 8.—Bakers of this city have raised the price of bread to 5 cents straight. They say they can no longer afford to pay the advances on flour and sell bread at the old price. The raise is from six for 25c to 5 cents straight.

TITLE SETTLED; 'HUSBAND DIES

Mrs. Saunders Gets News of Wealth. Then Comes Death.

Following the news that years of poverty were ended by the successful adjustment of the title to rich mining lands came to Mrs. Otis W. Saunders of Portland the sad announcement of her husband's death in Duluth, Minn.

For many years Mr. Saunders was a leader in the business enterprises of the north and northwest, and was well known to the lumbermen of Oregon and Washington. The panic of the early 90s brought business reverses and forced him to dispose of valuable real estate in Duluth, at ridiculously low prices. So reduced in circumstances did Mr. Saunders become that he was almost forced to beg aims from former business associates. In 1902 he came to Portland, where he and his wife lived

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT

On Wednesday we make our first showing of midsummer Millinery. In this display we will show for the first time this season the new blocked Rajah Hats, new Linens, blocked Milan straws, Silk and blocked Leghorn Hats. In style and shape they are radically different from the early Spring fashions, being trimmed in a more severe and simple manner. These hats are very suitable for evening wear, garden parties, automobiling and traveling. Prices are as great an attraction as the hats, being very nominal, ranging from $4 to $10 each. We invite your inspection.

DO YOU KNOW WHY?

Do you know why the White Sale goes on prodigiously without much advertising by us? Not hard to understand? WE DID THE ADVERTISING LAST WEEK. Did you ever before see such varieties and qualities quoted? No? Women who bought them are telling their friends and, better than that, are SHOWING their friends. This is the very best advertising any store can get, and we are pretty sure that Lipman, Wolfe & Co. gets more of it than any store in the city.

This is simply to supplement what thousands of women are saying to thousands of other women:

For the best values extant in Muslin Underwear, Waists, Blouses, Kimonos, Silk and Cotton Petticoats, Sactees, Negligees, Wrappers and the like, you should go visit Lipman, Wolfe & Co. Original White Sale assortments are practically unbroken.
