

DO YOU WANT A HOME LIKE THIS

In a Few Months Westmoreland Is Going to Be Solidly Built Up

Yours is going to be one of them.

The vast influences at work all over the United States are increasing the population of Portland by thousands.

These same influences are going to make Westmoreland property extremely valuable in a very short time. Why? Just stop and think: Westmoreland is closer in than any other addition put on the market in the past two years. It's on the best streetcar line in the city, the only one that did not go out of commission during the cold, snowy spell last winter.

A strike is the only thing that will affect Westmoreland transportation and in that emergency the river boats are at hand.

Westmoreland combines all of the features found in other additions and adds plenty that are peculiar only to itself.

The thousands of people coming to Portland are, a proportionate share of them, going to build homes in Westmoreland.

It is inevitable.

Take a run out and look the property over, and your home will go up with the others. Improvement work starts IMMEDIATELY—no waiting.

Take the Sellwood car to Bybee street and step to the opposite curb. Westmoreland is in front of you.

Ask us for one of our beautiful Westmoreland folders; it shows two views in three colors—one looking toward grand old Mount Hood and showing the character of the homes Westmoreland will boast of, the other looking from above Crystal Springs Lake out across the Willamette and taking in Council Crest, Portland Heights, South Portland, the Oaks and many points of interest. We have saved one for you—why not ask for it? Use the coupon.

MORE MONEY FOR BAPTIST COLLEGES

Committee Is Appointed by Convention to Outline a Plan by Which Denominational Schools May Receive Adequate Support.

Senator Francis W. Parker of Chicago, Head of the Baptist Brotherhood.

More actively than ever before the Northern Baptist convention will support the educational work of the denomination. This became evident when the subject of education was brought before the convention this morning by President Emory W. Hunt of Denison University and Rev. Y. P. Montague of Chicago.

A motion to appoint a committee by the convention to prepare a report for submission next year at the convention was unanimously passed. The motion provided for a consideration of secondary, collegiate and theological education; for a closer relation between the denomination and its educational institutions; for closer relation of denominational educational work to state schemes of education; and for emphasis on the educational needs of foreign fields.

Dr. Hunt, known as the "young man's man," made in connection with the motion a powerful plea for the small colleges and particularly did he refer to the colleges of Oregon. In direct conflict with the views taken by the general education board for the spending of the Rockefeller millions, which have been set aside for education, he declared there was no reason why the colleges of Oregon should not receive material assistance because they are small.

"There is no reason why a weak institution should not be helped to become strong; no reason why one college should not be helped because there is another 50 miles or so away from it," said Dr. Hunt.

Oregon should be helped.

"Oregon schools should particularly be helped just at this time," Dr. Hunt added during a personal conversation. "There is more reason for helping a weak college in Oregon than a weak college in Ohio. Schools there have a longer life and a more extended opportunity. If they have failed to grow it is more or less their own fault. But in Oregon conditions are different. The roots have not all been grubbed out of the ground here. The future is the big thing in spite of what has already been accomplished. You'll not have such good oilings unless you support the colleges. The small college is the desirable place, too, for the young man, during his earlier days. He wants a school where he gets more personal contact and attention from his instructors. He wants to get into the atmosphere of a wholesomely religious school. I have no use for the school that has the air of a protracted prayer meeting; neither do I believe in the value to our people of institutions where the deep and sacred things of life are made light of."

"It isn't always at the restaurant where most people eat that the best service is obtained. It is not always in the biggest school that the best education is secured. Training in the small school helps to balance the young man and helps him to know the difference between the true and the false when he goes to a larger school for finishing work."

Oregon Future Assured.

Dr. Hunt, whose vivid personality has made him one of the strongest men in the denomination and has made it largely possible for Denison university to secure an endowment of more than $1,000,000, with much more than this sum invested in apparatus, added that he believed thoroughly in the future of Oregon colleges.

But the people here must support their own schools," he qualified. "It will not be the best plan to wait on a general education board of a Carnegie foundation to help them out. The people will be more interested in their schools and have greater faith in them if they contribute to their support largely without waiting for outsiders to take up their own obligations."

Dr. Hunt, accompanied by Mrs. Hunt, will leave Portland tonight going back to Ohio by way of Seattle and Chicago.

WILLIAM CAREY TELLS STORY ABOUT INDIA'S TRANSFORMATION

Rev. William Carey of Barisal, India, Third in the Line of Missionaries in His Family.

Seated on a low stool an English country shoemaker attempted one day to divide his attention equally between the pair of shoes he was cobbling and that part of the Bible which lays most stress on missionary work. Suddenly he looked up from his work and with one hand resting on the shoe the other on the book, seemed to be thinking deeply. At last he said very simply, "I'll do it."

The man was William Carey who nearly 100 years ago, put into three short words his decision to leave the business of cobbling shoes and go as the first English Baptist missionary to foreign fields. His destination was India.

Today his grandson, also William Carey, comes from India to Portland and in a trilling way tells of the transformation in the lives of the people and in the country itself which has been accomplished by the Christianizing impulse which was begun many years ago.

representatives from the principal denominational churches. For this great purpose as Rev. Mr. Carey explained, yesterday by Governor Benson to examine into the sanity of Joe Anderson, sentenced to be hanged at the penitentiary tomorrow. The physician reported this morning that Anderson is sane.

Anderson was convicted of the murder of Harry Logan, a railroad engineer. The crime was committed two years ago on the Fourth Street bridge which spans Marquam Gulch in South Portland.

President S. W. Woodward of the American Baptist Missionary union, under whose auspices the exercises of the latter half of the morning's program were conducted, was presented with a historic lion in which is set a piece of the lion's cage which held the roaring monster who was daily expected to breakfast on Rev. Adoniram Judson and Rev. Mr. Price, another missionary who were imprisoned for 18 months in India. In the other end of the cage is set a piece of the stone erected over the grave of Rev. George Dana Boardman, the first missionary to the Karens of Burma, by his son, also Rev. George Dana Boardman.

President Woodward delivered his annual address, which was received with great appreciation as he announced that the American Baptist Missionary Anderson Reported Sane.

(By Journal Leased Salem Wire.)
Salem, Or., July 1.—Dr. J. N. Smith of this city and Dr. L. T. Griffith of the asylum medical staff were appointed yesterday by Governor Benson to examine into the sanity of Joe Anderson, sentenced to be hanged at the penitentiary tomorrow. The physician reported this morning that Anderson is sane.

Anderson was convicted of the murder of Harry Logan, a railroad engineer. The crime was committed two years ago on the Fourth Street bridge which spans Marquam Gulch in South Portland.

union is now free from debt, a sum sufficient to meet all expenses having been placed in the treasury through the results of the apportionment plan. He spoke of the renewed interest in Christianity now felt in China, as the result of placards posted at street corners commending the action of the United States in returning a large part of the Boxer uprising.

Mr. Woodward said that this action had favorably impressed the minds of the Chinese and inclined them to accept the statements of the missionaries.

Mr. Woodward touched upon the laymen's missionary movement and spoke of the great incentive given to missionary enterprise through this agency. He urged a larger appropriation for the foreign work inasmuch as the other denominations are making a great forward movement in this line.

Missionary to Orient.

An important action taken by the American Baptist Missionary union was that of authorizing the appointment of a general missionary to China and the Philippines, an action which is equivalent to creating such a diocese for the denominational representative as is occupied by the bishop of a new territory.

STARS AND STRIPES JOINED WITH BRITISH ENSIGN AT CONVENTION

Baptists Do Honor to Dominion Day and Felicitations Are Exchanged.

Swung together and joined by great bouquets of sweet peas the Stars and Stripes and the British flag covered the platform of the White Temple at the Northern Baptist convention session this morning.

To the same melody the great congregation sang with splendid volume, "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "God Save the King." Then the people joined feelingly in "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and thus singing brought to a close the most impressive and beautiful exercise of the convention.

It was the honor paid by the Baptists of the United States to the Baptists of the Dominion of Canada. The occasion was "Dominion Day," celebrating the union of Canadian provinces into an independent dominion July 1, 1867.

Dr. Judson, president of the convention explained the meaning of the observance and emphasized his gladness because along the entire line separating the two countries there are practically no fortresses, but many colleges and churches on both sides of the same faith.

Dr. J. Whitcomb Brouger voicing the cord welcome extended to the Canadian visitors declared that in the union of sympathy and cooperation between the Christian workers of the two countries existed the possibility to realize the prophecy and petition, "Thy kingdom come and thy will be done in the line between the countries will be only imaginary," declared Dr. W. T. Stackhouse from Canada, responding to Dr. Brouger's sentiment. "We are working together toward one great object, the evangelization of the world. Together we can accomplish the ambition we have and with our great countries thus cooperating our union indeed will be made complete."

STATE SEEKS TO RECOVER TAXES

(By Journal Leased Salem Wire.)
Salem, Or., July 1.—Suit was started in the circuit court for Marion county yesterday afternoon to enforce the collection of nearly $30,000 corporation taxes from Wells Fargo & Co. and the Standard Oil company. A. M. Crawford, attorney general, filed the papers in the case. The tax is that imposed by an act of initiative being tested by the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company and now pending in the United States supreme court. The amount is unpaid tax of the corporations named for about three years.

SAM HISKIN, LABORER, KILLED BY CAVE-IN

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Los Angeles, July 1.—Buried in a cave-in and killed, in sight of many men working on a new building being erected by F. W. Braun at 306 East Third street, some time yesterday afternoon and his body not discovered until today, was the fate of Sam Hiskin, whose body was unearthed by his fellow laborers when they began working this morning. An unusual explanation of the man's death is given by contractor J. J. Heiler. He claimed that Hiskin was inexperienced and that on Tuesday evening he told Hiskin and his other employees at work on the sewer not to work today but to report as usual Thursday morning.

It is claimed by Heiler that Hiskin came back to work contrary to orders yesterday afternoon and that being inexperienced he caused the cave-in that resulted in his death.

New State Printer Named.

(By Journal Leased Salem Wire.)
Salem, Or., July 1.—L. R. Silman of Salem was appointed state-printing expert by Governor Benson yesterday to succeed Albert Tozier, who had held the position throughout the six years of Governor Chamberlain's administration. No dissatisfaction with Tozier was felt beyond the fact that he was a Chamberlain man and the governor thought he should be superseded by a Republican.
