WEATHER REPORT

A ridge of high pressure extends from the north Pacific states east to Montana and Wyoming and thence southeastward to the gulf states. The barometer is relatively low over Arizona, and a low pressure area is noted north of the Dakotas, while another low pressure area is central over northern New England. Heavy rains have fallen in the Canadian northwest, and light rains have fallen at scattered places in the northern states east of the Missouri river. Fair weather continues on the Pacific slope. The changes in temperature since yesterday have been small and unimportant. It is cooler than usual in the Rocky mountain states, while in the Atlantic and gulf states the temperatures, as a rule, are slightly above normal. The temperatures yesterday afternoon in the interior of California were decidedly above normal, the thermometer reaching the 100 degree mark, or over, nearly everywhere in the Sacramento valley.

The indications are for fair weather in this district tonight and Wednesday, with slowly rising temperatures.
