NO CIGAR CHANGES
He Bought $5000 From 1894 to 1898, but Since Then the Trade Has Dwindled—Statistics Show Queer Articles Imported.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Washington, July 21.—Recent tariff discussions which include the rates of duty on articles almost unknown by name to the general public have illustrated the breadth of scope of the commerce of the United States. The fact that the world is ransacked for articles to contribute to the wants of the American public, and that the American producers and manufacturers in turn supply to all parts of the world articles which are in many instances not considered by the general public as entering into international trade, is pointed out by these discussions and the inquiries which grow out of them.

The great variety of the articles forming the trade of the United States with other countries is illustrated more clearly by the bureau of statistics figures of imports than those of exports. It is necessarily stated in terms of the tariff law. The fact that the tariff places varying rates of duty upon different articles, and that the bureau of statistics must state the quantity if possible and the value in all cases, is one of the reasons why the articles upon which a separate rate of duty is named require that bureau to differentiate more or less nearly every article of imports than that of exports. As a result its statement of articles and grades of articles imported contains many thousands of items.

A student of this statement, "Imports for Consumption," as issued by the bureau of statistics, and constantly consulted by statesmen in preparing and discussing and acting upon the pending tariff bill, shows many curious facts regarding articles imported into the United States.

Wild Animals Imported.
Wild animals, for example, imported for zoological exhibitions and scientific and educational purposes, which are permitted to enter free of duty because of their prospective use for educational and scientific purposes, amount to $200,000 between $5000 and $7000, while those imported for other purposes evidently exceeded this sum by far, since the group, "All Other Animals," aside from cattle, horses, mules, sheep, swine, animals for breeding purposes, and teams of immigrants, still shows a value of over $1,000,000.

Birds imported in 1908 amounted to over $300,000 in value, and while they are not specifically enumerated as to varieties, it is presumed that this group is largely composed of canaries and parrots.

Leeches are also enumerated by the bureau of statistics under its general head of animals imported, the total value of the imports of leeches in 1908 having been $5241, in 1907 $6992, in 1906 $4494, in 1905 $3853, in 1904 $2883, in 1903 $2125, and in 1902 $2418—time in leeches being thus of a growing character. The total value of the leeches imported into the United States in this decade ending with 1908 is about $40,000.

Leeches, it may be added, are imported free of duty. Snails were at one time an important article of importation, the records from 1894 to 1898 showing snails imported to the extent of over $5000, and in 1902 $2418—time dwindling, showing only $24 of imports in 1908, that the bureau discontinued its statements of this article.

"Divi-divi," an article of importation has been the subject of many jests by the humorists during the tariff discussions of the past few years. It is an article of no inconsiderable importance in the tanning industry, the product of a leguminous tree in the east Indies, and is used in tanning, and in the form of a pod, and amounting in quantity in 1908 to 134,000 pounds, valued at between $200,000 and $300,000. The value of the imports of the last decade has aggregated about $85,000. Divi-divi, which does not compete with other articles of material used in tanning, and which is required in the development of certain lines of this industry, is imported free of duty.

Rose leaves are also imported free of duty when brought in in a crude state, the value of the imports of 1908 being but $105, in 1907 $215, and in 1906 $279, the value of rose leaves imported in the decade ending with 1908 amounting to over $50,000.

DAY OF GLORY
tion. No one will want to take time to come. But, bless you, the stream of guests that flowed into the reception room of the Oregon building between 3 and 5 began to look like a mob before the afternoon was over. Everyone wanted to come and did come, to shake us by the hand and tell us how well we looked!

And then they all had fruit punch (from pure Oregon fruit), and cakes manufactured in Oregon, and a mighty good time talking it all over and renewing friendships on the wide verandas afterward.

Session of Former Portlanders.
It was like some big, old-fashioned house party, multiplied in numbers but with all the heartiness intact. Many men and women told us of having lived in Portland 10, 20, 30 years ago, and many whispered that they were going back. It was a veritable "old home day," full of happy incidents and joyous reunions, and not a few new friendships were begun.

Picture Shows Advertise Oregon.
The lectures in the Oregon building nearly every hour, with moving pictures on Oregon scenery and industries, drew continuously standing room houses. The elegant display of fresh Lambert cherries was surrounded every moment by crowds of admiring gossamers. The apples, apricots, and other fruits are especially notable, as much Washington fruit was frost killed and fine northwest fruit is not so abundantly displayed as it could be in almost any other year.

Portland Ladies' Orchestra.
The ladies' orchestra is another feature of the Oregon building social events, both morning and afternoon. The Stradivarius on which Miss Barber played so delightfully in the afternoon is owned by Dr. Hare of Portland, and is the only one of this make (1701) in America. It was presented to Dr. Hare with the understanding that he would never sell it; he kindly loaned it for Portland day, and its presence was much appreciated by thorough musicians, who realize what it means to listen to the only "Strad" of 1701 in America. There are but three in existence.

Want to Know about Portland.
A pleasant thing about "our day" is a real Portlander was the warm interest strangers manifested in our city. That little badge, "Portland, 600,000, 1913," on a coat lapel has acted as a free invitation to the stranger to stop and talk it over.

"How is Portland, anyway?" one would say to another, and then came a little chat about our city, which invariably ended with, "Yes, I'll get down your way. Portland's on my route. I want to see your town."

Eastern People Talking.
Several far eastern editors expressed the utmost interest, saying people were talking about Portland now in the east as never before, and a Chicago writer said she could hardly wait to get to Portland, she had heard so much about it from friends who attended our fair in 1905.

The Seattle Spirit Broadened.
Seattle has given the northwest a beautiful exposition. We can all feel proud and happy, and a part of it. Whatever the "Seattle spirit" may have signified once upon a time, from now on, it can mean only good will and a boost for the whole northwest, of which Oregon is proud to call herself the mother.

Journal Band's Concerts.
Last night The Journal band added its note of gaiety as the lights shined out resplendently upon a merry "fair" city and the wide gates were thrown open to care for the throng. All was as brilliant and enchanting as a fairy scene of y olden times.

Portland Day Hostesses.
Following are the hostesses who dispensed hospitality: Mrs. R. Lutke, 41 Thirteenth street; Mrs. Wynn Johnson, 581 Madison street; Mrs. W. J. Hoffman, 825 Hancock street; Mrs. J. C. Hiden, 720 Wasco street; Mrs. C. H. Hare, Mrs. J. N. Brown, Mrs. W. H. Wehrung, Mrs. E. W. Rowe, Mrs. M. D. Wisdom.

CHICAGO MURDERER
son, known to the police and criminal world as a score of cities over the country as "The Glimet Man," was one of the most daring and violent members of the famous Mortell-McGraw gang of the Windy City.

Finally sent to serve a term in Joliet, Ill., penitentiary for a robbery, Bissett came west when released. He was first heard of in Portland during the early part of February, 1904. He confessed later to the police that Silverfield's fur store was the most promising prospect to him in the city, and that from the first he had been preparing to loot the establishment of its most expensive wares.

Engaging a room in the Cosmos rooming-house on Morrison street, from which he could get a view of the police and special officers, he laid his plans. First, however, he robbed the home and establishment of Andrew Kan, adjoining the fur store, and prepared to gain entrance to the fur establishment by way of the Japanese bazaar. He made a special key to the bazaar that he might enter at any time of the night.

Desperate Plans Evolved.
One most sensational feature of the Silverfield robbery was the fact that after Bissett had entered Kan's store he suspended a bottle of nitro-glycerine, capable of blowing up the entire building, over the doorway in such a position that if anyone attempted to enter while he was at work, it would fall and explode. He also carried a revolver of large calibre, with which he asserted to Cullen he would blow the police off the map if they attempted to interfere with him.

New Dynamo for Lebanon Plant.
Lebanon, Or., July 21.—The Lebanon Electric Light & Water company has ordered a large dynamo, which it will install in its new plant. Since purchasing this plant the company, which is composed of local capitalists, has remodeled the old plant. The new dynamo is twice as large as the old one. It is being put in to furnish a day current. Several arc lights have been placed in various parts of the city.

Don't Swallow Drugs to Cure Catarrh
Hyomel (pronounced High-o-me) is a germ killing vapor of air which when breathed either through the mouth or nose, will kill catarrh germs and soothe and heal the inflamed and mutilated membrane.

Hyomel is such a powerful germ destroyer that it penetrates every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat. And it kills the catarrh germs because it gets where those health destroyers are.
