(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
New York, July 24.—District Attorney Jerome will appear as chief prosecutor for the state Monday at the resumption of the hearing in White Plains which will decide whether or not Harry K. Thaw will be released from the state hospital for the insane. Thaw will be made in exactly the same manner Mr. Jerome evidenced in the two former trials in his office today refreshing his memory in connection with the details of the evidence. Many records were gone over and for several hours he was in conference with different assistants, who gave expert testimony as to the insanity of Thaw. It will be the object of Jerome to prove that Thaw was insane at the time of the two trials, and that he is insane now.
Thaw has been thoroughly drilled and it was stated today that he will be the first witness called on Monday morning. Thaw will tell the whole story of his life from boyhood to the present time, to prove that he is perfectly sane.
All of the insanity experts will be in court.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
White Plains, N. Y., July 24.—"Of course, it will be a terrible task for me to have to sit in the witness box and face a merciless cross-examination in such a way as to prove to Justice Mills that I am totally sane and should be released from Matteawan; but I am confident that I can do it. I am confident that before the week is past I will be a free man, declared sane in the eyes of the world."
"This was the statement made tonight by Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, who, on Monday, faces the final test of his life, the determination of his mental state.
Mental Status.
Thaw has been undergoing a severe mental and physical strain, but he declared tonight that he would be in entry condition for the reopening of the proceedings.
The reopening of District Attorney William McKim's case into the Thaw case, up to the last session of the court, was regarded as excellent.
The relatives of Thaw have made out a prima facie case in Thaw's favor, said Justice Mills at the last session of the court, "and I would like to know whether or not the state will try to controvert this evidence."
Then it was that Assistant Attorney Mack, assisting Attorney Clark in the defense, outlined the state's contention that Thaw was sane in every particular save the killing of White and the ruin of young girls, but on these subjects he is incurable paranoiac. The state, he said, would not rely on anything but the examination of the physicians. Justice Mills struck the state's case by blowing by declaring the state must have the examination in open court, where he could watch every act.
Thaw's Sanity.
It is now up to Thaw to prove his sanity. Under the examination by Clark or Mack, Thaw felt sure he could do so. But Thaw is admittedly afraid of Jerome. It was Jerome who placed Thaw on the stand as a witness for the state at Poughkeepsie late at night when he was tired out, and subjected him to an examination that led to his going back to the asylum. Jerome, more than any other man, knows the ins and outs of the Thaw case.
Thaw fears Jerome may have something up his sleeve at the coming hearing. But he will be examined first by his own attorney, and will have a chance to make a favorable impression on the court before Jerome takes him in hand.

MRS. PARKER CALLS FOR JUSTICE

burglarized and a trunk containing important papers opened. This Mrs. Sutton absolutely denied.

"I am satisfied there is nothing in this new yarn," said Attorney Davis. "It is on par with the fake that was intended to exonerate Sutton's body."
Sutton's Goss Locked in Suitcase.
Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker told today for the first time of the existence of two revolvers not mentioned among her brother's effects at the marine officers' camp. They were found, she declared, locked in his suitcase inside his tent after his death. The navy department refused, so she said, to turn these revolvers over to her, but offered to let her have them at about $12 apiece. She declined to do so, not being at that time as familiar with the case as she became later. They were turned over to two student officers at one of the marine corps schools. Attorneys of the Suttons intend to bring up the matter of the revolvers in Sutton's suitcases during the present inquiry. The presence of the revolvers among Sutton's effects tends, so they believe, to cast doubt on the story that Sutton armed himself on the night when he is said to have shot at Adams and Roelker and to have killed himself.

There is likelihood that Mrs. Parker will testify that trouble existed between her husband and a week prior to Sutton's death. Mrs. Parker has intimated that she knew of such trouble. It arose from Adams having made a stirring remark to Sutton concerning Mrs. Roelker herself.

Roelker Drunk; Knows Nothing.
The developments of the trial show that former Lieutenant Roelker, who had been out on liberty on the night of the tragedy and returned to the reservation so much under the influence of liquor that he remembered nothing of what happened, until told by brother officers in the morning.

Neither the government nor the Suttons are longer looking for Roelker.

HATRED OF OFFICERS SAID TO HAVE MADE THEM BLIND TO DUTY

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Annapolis, Md., July 24.—When Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker takes the witness stand next week before the court of inquiry probing the circumstances of the death of her brother, Lieutenant James Adams through which the Suttons lost their fortune, she will tell of her interview with Lieutenant James Adams through which she obtained much of the startling information that caused them to insist upon a reopening of the case.
Adams, in his testimony, has repudiated the interview, or at least alleges that he made no damaging admissions. He also said that Mrs. Parker tonight, "but I shall not become afraid, and I have a story, a true story, a story that will make it clear."

That some court outside of a naval inquiry board will, in all probability, decide the matter, in which Lieutenant Sutton died is Mrs. Parker's prediction.

Whole Truth Must Come Now.
"A short time ago," said Mrs. Parker, "the family might have been satisfied with the state of the case, but after listening to contradictory evidence and stories of the terrible beating given Jimmie, the spirit of further fight was created in our hearts."

When I came to Annapolis to bury my brother two years ago, I told the officials here if they would have a full investigation it would disprove, even if it meant a suicide story, and it might possibly be called an accident. At the time we might have been satisfied with such a finding, and probably would have accepted with resignation an accidental verdict, and considered that we had won a victory.

Marine Officers Unhappy.
"Now it is different. The different stories told by the officers who fought with my brother and claim he killed himself are such that no one can be mother especially, will not rest content with a mere reversal of the first verdict. I regard it as likely that some court outside of a military tribunal will yet investigate my brother's death."

The statement is borne out by the chance remark by Attorney Davis before the inquiry today, noting an exception to a ruling at one of the sessions.

"I want the record kept straight," he said, "there is nothing in this matter other body may record upon this matter."

There is an air of expectancy about the naval academy tonight over what next week will bring forth. So far, it is conceded that all the witnesses have done their best to hold to the theory, save two chauffeurs, but now the Suttons will have their day in court and marine officers are anxious to know what trump cards they have to play.

Willard and Bevan in Danger.
It is generally believed here that, no matter what the court of inquiry decides about the case, both Lieutenant Willard and Lieutenant Bevan, who were ordered up for court martial, will be ordered up for court martial.

At the office of the day, it was Lieutenant Willard's duty to arrest Sutton and his brother officers, but on the witness stand Lieutenant Willard seemed to admit that he told Lieutenant Adams "to go in and punch Sutton's head off."

It is believed the court will also secure the first court of inquiry for its laxity in conducting its investigation and add orders to Colonel Charles E. Doyne, provost guard, for not making a more thorough investigation.

On the stand Doyne swore he made no investigation, because he was told Sutton killed himself, and he was told this by a marine officer.

EASTMAN MAY OWN ALL THE BARRELS

Circuit Court Decision in Western Coopera Case Makes It Possible for President to Corner Business of Pacific Coast.

Watson Eastman may gain control of the coopperage business of the Pacific coast as the result of a decision in the circuit court yesterday afternoon, refusing the application of the California Barrel company for an injunction to prevent the Western Coopera company from guaranteeing a $800,000 bond issue of the Eastman Timber company. Eastman is the president of the timber corporation of the Western Coopera company, and Frederick J. Koster is president of the California Barrel company. The case was precipitated by a disagreement between the two as to the purchase of the street tract in Clatsop county, Koster alleging that Eastman was using his stock by proxy to guarantee the bond issue, which was to be floated by the Eastman Timber company.

Had Koster won, the bond issue for which all arrangements have been made for next month would have been prevented. Eastman would have lost his opportunity to swing the big deal. Now he seems likely to succeed in his plan, giving him a clear field in securing a tract of timber land said to be worth $2,000,000.

Koster, who was in favor of a bond issue of $1,000,000, his plan being to use the additional funds in constructing a logging road to utilize the timber supply. At the directors' meeting of which he complains, it was voted to file supplementary articles of incorporation that would permit a bond issue, the amount not being specified. At a subsequent meeting it was decided to limit the issue to $800,000, in accordance with the views of Eastman. But as Koster was not opposed to the supplementary articles, his charges that his stock was used wrongfully did not hold.

Judges Morrow, Gantenbein and Gatsness heard the case together and agreed in the conclusions. Judge Morrow announced the decision of the court, but refrained from giving the reasons that influenced the views of the court. An effort by W. W. Cotton to learn the grounds of the court's decision was ineffective. Dan Koster, chief attorney for the Eastman interests.

Kennedy, a witness who has not appeared before, the testimony of the undertaker who prepared the body for burial, and the testimony of Mrs. Parker will all be developed at the sessions of the coming week.

ARMY OFFICER SAYS WITNESSES NEVER DARE TELL TRUTH

By John E. Lathrop.
Washington, July 24.—The purification of the army and navy must be the concern of the army and navy, said the lieutenant concerned in Sutton's case, should be dismissed from the service.
Beginning with this emphatic statement, one of the best known officers of the army discussed today the remarkable developments of the case at the hearing of the case at Annapolis. He was in conversation at the time with a United States senator, who declared the Sutton case was being seriously followed by members of both houses.

"Whatever may be the outcome of the Annapolis hearing," said the army officer, who is quoted, "whether Sutton committed suicide or was killed by one of the lieutenants that night, the testimony shows they practiced brutality, proving them unfit to remain in the service."

"People outside the army and navy cannot understand it, but nevertheless it is true that witnesses dare not tell the whole truth in these investigations, because if they did they would be marked men thereafter. Hence I assume that the witnesses in this case who belong to the service corps suppressed some essential facts."

"But everyone now knows Sutton was brutally treated that night. If severe court martial do not mark the army and navy will suffer in the public estimation."

The widespread demand has been created for drastic action. Evidence that the lieutenants beat Sutton savagely after he was exhausted beyond power to harm them has stirred up a sentiment here which it is believed will force further action, no matter what verdict the board of inquiry returns.

This week's evidence, with the numerous facts brought to light from other sources, proves Sutton was exceedingly unpopular, but the severe sentence is now visited upon the navy department for the absurdly inadequate court inquiry, and upon Sutton's brother lieutenants for combining to "beat his damned head off," as Lieutenant Willard, officer of the day, swore he advised that night.

The biggest party yet to leave the city will depart about midnight. The moon will furnish sufficient light for the party as far as the mouth of Nasium canyon, which cannot be entered before daybreak. The party expects to reach the McKenna sheep camp about 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Still another party will leave here at daybreak Sunday. Chief of Police Shull will lead the party with the four bloodhounds.

The six bloodhounds now engaged in the search are among the best known in the northwest. Macky's two dogs were in the chase after Harry Tracy in 1906. McKenna's hounds have made a reputation for their work in chasing criminals.

DOCTOR FRISBIE SPEAKS WELL OF MURDERED MAN

"What astonishes me in this case is," said Dr. Charles B. Frisbie, friend of the murdered man, who is acquainted with Dr. Collins, "that Collins, who could understand why Roy married her, and I don't think he could explain it himself."

"The most I could learn was that Mrs. Collins, who was years his senior, was suffering from nervous prostration and was being treated by Collins, who was roomed in her house. The woman was infatuated with him, but he did not care for her. 'Don't hold suspicion against other women, but she declared firmly that he did not love her and that he had treated her coldly and without compassion and they finally decided upon a separation.'

"He told me several times that she said she would never return to the United States alive except as his wife, and he naturally feared she would do away with herself, so he married her."
