LIVES OF BABES MENACED THROUGH LACK OF DAIRY INSPECTION BY STATE OFFICIAL

MILK KILLED CATS, SAYS ROLFES

Dairy Commissioner's Office Says the Sale of Milk From Diseased Cows Is None of Their Business—U. S. Takes a Hand.

What the Law Says.
Section 22. Every person, firm or corporation engaged in the sale of milk or cream in any city of 10,000 or more inhabitants, who keeps a cow or cows for the purpose of selling milk therefrom therein, shall, on the first day of April of each year, apply to the food and dairy commissioner, or inspectors appointed by him, for a certificate of inspection, and shall pay the sum of $2.50 for the same, provided always, that this certificate can be revoked at any time by said commissioner or inspector when said dairy is found not to be in a proper condition as to the healthfulness of the cows or cows, or as to cleanliness, etc.—General Laws of Oregon, Session of 1905.

Under this act Commissioner Bailey or his deputy are required to keep account of health in the dairies under their supervision. But Henry Rolfes' certificate is still in force, in spite of his own representations that tuberculous milk is poisonous, even to cats.

For two weeks Henry Rolfes, a dairyman supplying milk to Portland consumers has been trying to get Food and Dairy Commissioner J. W. Bailey to inspect his dairy, six miles out on the Cornell road. Rolfes states that at least one of his cows has tuberculosis and so reported to Bailey August 13. Further, Rolfes states to the dairy commissioner that the milk from this cow killed four cats to whom it was fed. But the commissioner refused and still refuses to act in the matter. The milk is still being sold in Portland, though Rolfes has voluntarily separated the sick cow from the rest of the herd and does not milk her.

Yesterday afternoon Rolfes appealed to the Journal: "I have paid four visits to Mr. Bailey's office," he said, "I have told him that one of my cows had tuberculosis and that I feared the rest of the herd was infected. Mr. Bailey first told me that the matter with my cow was musty hay. Then he said, or his man in the office said, that they would look into it."

Cow Has Tuberculosis.
"Then at my own expense I got a doctor and paid him $5. All he said was that the cow had tuberculosis in a bad stage. Then I came once more to Commissioner Bailey's office and told him I wanted my dairy inspected and that the milk from that cow was poisonous and I was afraid for the rest of my cows. He has done nothing and I can't make him do anything."

"I fed the milk to four cats and they all got as lean as a stick and died. My little girl drank some of it and it made her sick, too. I don't think the milk is good and I promptly put that cow off by herself. But I can't afford

RICH AROUSED BY RAGE OF POVERTY

Mrs. Besant, Theosophist, Says Social Conditions in England and This Country Are Intolerable and a Great Crisis Is at Hand.

Mrs. Annie Besant, President of the Theosophical Society.
Annie Besant, writer, publicist and now the head of the Theosophical society and the right hand of the British government in India in dealing with the social problems of the empire, arrived in Portland at 7 o'clock this morning and was taken with her party to the Nortonia hotel. Mrs. Besant will spend today in Portland and leave for San Francisco at midnight.

This morning Mrs. Besant gave The Journal an interview in which she discussed the social problem now confronting all the big governments of the western world. "We are at the opening of a new age," she said. "The present era is one in which the old order is passing away and a new one is being

PEOPLE WILL GET HIGH BRIDGE

Mayor Simon Says He Has No Intention to Interfere With Wish of Public—Some of the Large Appropriation May Be Saved.

The new Broadway high bridge will be built as soon as arrangements for its construction compatible with good business methods can be made by Mayor Simon. The mayor intended to take preliminary steps toward getting the big project under way yesterday and had made an appointment with Councilman Menefee, who represents the east side ward in which the bridge will be located, but the councilman was called out of town and the conference was postponed. At the earliest possible moment after his return Mayor Simon will see him and will decide upon some plan of action.

"There is no authority for the assumption in some quarters that I do not intend to give the people the kind of a bridge for which they voted. On the contrary, I wish to assure them their wishes will be carried out in every particular," said Mayor Simon today.

"If it is necessary to spend the full amount of the $2,000,000 bond issue to span the Willamette with a high bridge of the type contemplated, I will not stand in the way, but I think the results desired can be accomplished for a considerably less sum, and, if so, I am going to keep the surplus in the city treasury."

PINCHOT PLAN LAUDED AT SEATTLE

Delegates to the First National Conservation Congress Listen to Speech by J. N. Teal of Portland—Portentious Issues.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, Aug. 26.—The interior department is today preparing the statement of the Cunningham land cases, demanded yesterday by President Taft.

It is understood that Pinchot, who is supporting Glavin in his effort to have the Cunningham claims investigated before patented, has been requested to present his side of the controversy.

Developments in the Pinchot-Ballinger feud are expected to result from the meeting of conservationists at Seattle. Primarily the purpose of the half dozen or more national conservation congresses scheduled for this fall and winter, is to demonstrate the favorable attitude of the country toward the Pinchot policies of protection of the forests and preservation of water power lands against the encroachments of monopolies, and to voice the country's opposition to Secretary of the Interior Ballinger's apparent sanction of the actions of the monopolies in "grabbing" up valuable water power sites, timber lands and mineral claims.

Added interest is given the Pinchot-Ballinger feud by President Taft's action yesterday in calling upon the department of the interior for a full report on the notorious Cunningham Alaska coal cases. In these cases Ballinger is alleged to have disposed of government coal lands valued at millions of dollars to the Guggenheim and Morgan interests.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Seattle, Wash., Aug. 26.—With Gifford Pinchot, chief forester of the United States and chairman of the national joint conservation congress, and leading conservation authorities from all parts of the country present, the first national conservation congress, looking toward the establishment of wide and far reaching governmental protection policies, opened today at the Auditorium on the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition.

Following the recent irrigation congress at Spokane, and the Transmississippi congress at Denver, in which matters of deep interest to the west were discussed and made the subjects of resolutions, it is expected that this congress will mark the establishment of a
