STATE BOARD WELCOMES INQUIRY

day, and when he arrives he will do his duty.

Puts Question to Bailey.

"Here is a question I desire to ask the commissioner. Why does he not wish to cooperate with the state-board of health? I will answer the question in anticipation of any reply that he may care to make.

"No officer believing that tubercular milk is wholesome - at negatively, not wholesome - can cooperate with physicians and officers who believe such milk is rank poison. Here is the government conclusion on the subject, taken from circular 113, United States department of agriculture, on 'The unsuspicious but dangerously tuberculous cow.'"

"If the public were thoroughly informed of the dangers among which tuberculosis is only one of many, to which it is exposed through the use of impure, dirty and infected milk, the demand for milk of approved purity would rise to the magnitude of a concerted national movement."

"There is an important moral side to the milk question which must not be ignored. We may have the right - a very doubtful right, to be exact - to neglect the dangers to which we as adults, capable of judging and acting for ourselves, are exposed, but we have absolutely no right to neglect the conditions that cause suffering and death among children."

Responsibility Rests with Authority.

"Commissioner Bailey says that if the board of health has been cognizant of the deaths caused by impure milk, the board of health is responsible. That is problematical. Had the board of health been vested with the executive authority that rests in the office of the dairy and food commissioner, we should be responsible. But responsibility rests where there is authority. So we have a grand jury investigation that will determine for all time, not only these matters, but some others which at this time are equally pertinent, brought in connection with this crusade for pure milk."
