WEEK'S BUILDING RECORD SHOWS CONTINUED GAINS

Building permits providing for new equatruction valued at a little over $300,000 were issued for the week ending last night. The largest individual item in the list calls for the erection of a three story brick warehouse on Water street between Mill and Montgomery. The building is being erected for W. K. Smith and will cost close to $60,000. This warehouse is considered by many to be the forerunner in the establishment of an important warehouse district in South Portland. Along the lines of the Southern Pacific and Oregon Electric roads, running through South Portland, there is a large amount of space available for warehouse area, wiil undoubtedly have the effect of driving a considerable portion of the warehouse business of the city to the warehouse business of the city to the cheaper sites in South Portland.

Up until the last two months the presence of a railroad man in this section was equivalent to flashing a red flag before an antelope, the residents watched him as long as he was in sight, but the novelty has about worn off with the presence of the many surveyors, chief engineers, contractors, and the numerous other personages identified with railroad construction, and this ceaseless array has at last convinced the long-suffering-without-transportation residents of the interior that central Oregon will not only have one road, but that there will soon be two railroads ministering to their wants. Construction Work in Cen-

Madras, Or., Sept. 25.—A trip to the railroad camps between Trout Creek and Madras, that portion of the Harriman line which is not in conflict with the Oregon Trunk, shows that construction work is progressing steadily, although it seems somewhat slowly to the residents of this section who are yet on the "anxious" seat on railroac matters. Twohy & Dwyer have three camps in the vicinity of Porter Spring canyon, 10 miles north of Madras, and are making preparations to establish two more camps, one seven miles from this place and the other three miles from town at what is called the "divide," where there is a stretch of heavy work, a cut of about 35 feet being necsessary at this place to make a uniform grade.

Mr. Dwyer savs he needs drivers badly, and has a lot of teams "eating their heads off" because he has not men to take them out on the road. He says there was quite a number of men discharged when the 60-mile injunction was served on Twohy Bros., and these have made the report that there is no work in this section, but that this rumor will be dissipated in a short time when there will be plenty of men, and he says that the rainy season in the Williamette vailey will also cause an exodus of laborers to central Oregon.

FARMERS' DAY AT A.-Y.-P. EXPOSITION

Seattle, Sept. 24.—The three days' harvest home carnival at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, which opened today, attracted large crowds of farmers from all parts of the state and from several of the adjoining states, and judging from the attendance today, the three days devoted to the particular tastes and interests of the rural visitors will prove a big success. The carnival opened today with a rustic parade in which many of the participants carried the vagetables, fruits, etc., which they competed for the prizes offered. North Yakima, Wash., Sept. 25.—Silhouette figures stationed in the hills of the Moxee, where Company E of the National Guard is under encampment orders from the state, will be the object of attack Saturday in a sham battle. Loaded cartridges will be used and the results of fire at different ranges will be recorded. The position of the dummies or the distance will not be known by the officers or the men and it is up to them to pursue the enemy as in actual warfare. The object is to measure, the efficiency of the company's work. The scheme, which is not known to have been tried before, is the invention of Captain J. M. Curry.
