

RAILROAD TERMINALS ARE TOO SMALL

CARS BURIED OFFICIALS ON RAMP TRAIL OF MOUNTAIN GEORNS TRAILS

Hill Says Plenty of Roads and Plenty of Cars—Complains of Holdups—Errors in Education—Production Problem.

By Clarence Spade.
By Publishers Press.
New York, Oct. 9.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad system, before he left today for Wisconsin granted the Publishers Press a special interview.
Mr. Hill's statement that there are enough railroads in this country and an abundance of cars will prove a surprise to many capitalists interested in building new railroad lines.
"What we need in this country now," said Mr. Hill, "is not more railroads or equipment, but the thing of vital importance is more local terminals. This is true all over the country. With more terminals the railroads of this country could give a better service. The railroads have great difficulty in securing proper terminals. The demand of the public in every state in the United States is for better service. The railroads have met this demand as far as they could by increasing the efficiency of their equipment, but there is a limit to that kind of development and I am of the opinion that the limit has practically been reached in the large centers."
Roads Held Up for Terminals.
"It is very difficult to secure proper terminals, because of the high prices demanded for land in the cities where the railroads need terminals. With proper terminals the railroads can load and unload their trains with much greater ease and thus keep the cars in constant motion instead of piling them up on side lines."
"The railroads need in an abundance of space to load and unload their trains, and that will solve the railroad problem of the country."
"The failure among the railroads in the past to exceed those of any other kind of business and the consequent result is consolidation of lines."
"The movement to build waterways is all right, but it must not be carried on to the extent of embarrassing the nation."
Mr. Hill referred particularly to the methods employed in raising the money to build the Panama canal.
Let Education Educate.
"We are too extravagant in America in everything but education," he said. "Our schools are educating our children away from the occupations for which they are best fitted. If our children were only taught to read, to write plainly, to add correctly, a column of figures, they would do a lot more good than they do now."
"The rudiments of education seem to be neglected for some of the best of our children do not look for a solution of the farm problem through the public schools, because it would take 25 or 30 years to work out the problem. Our school children are deficient in mathematics and more attention

State Board of Health Begins Battle Against Foe of Portland's Babies—Milk Will Be Tested and Cows Examined.

Many requests for a definition of the relation sustained by the state board of health to Portland's pure milk campaign have been received. That relation may be thus stated:
General supervision over the health of the people is vested by law in the state board of health. Regulations intended to aid generally in conserving the health of the people are formulated by the board and enforced by local health officers. Only in localities infested by plague, epidemic or other extraordinarily unhealthy conditions does the board as a whole intervene, and when local health officers have shown or admitted themselves unable to control the situation. In such instances the state board of health exercises police or inspectorial power only in extreme cases. Its function is properly supervisory or in assembling and directing toward a common object all ordinary health preserving agencies.
Acting on evidence filed at the state health board meeting in Portland, Portland was declared to be suffering from a "plague of bad milk." An investigation by the board confirming the accuracy of this evidence, control of the situation was assumed by the board. In applying an extreme remedy to an extreme case, it will assemble and direct the forces represented by the dairy commission's office, the county health officer, physicians, who in time of necessity are health officers, and other officers, organized means to bring about a permanent disposition to aid in bringing success to Portland's health crusade.
In other words the state board of health turned to as the "court of final appeal," makes provision by using all active means to place the milk supply on trial, with a certainty of its ultimate condemnation.
This week, it is set, the milk microbe and all his kind must prepare to depart, bag and baggage from the vicinity of Portland. Final success has been obtained in arming health officers against the foe of Portland's babies, and these officers are on the microbe's trail.
Plans for the week, and for the remaining time required to adjust unclean methods of production, inspection, tests of cows for tuberculosis and diseases of the udder, surveillance of methods used in delivering milk, the taking of samples of milk delivered in the city to be subjected to bacteriological tests, and the dissemination of literature, bulletins, and other information that will be of educational value.
Dealers Must Have License.
These are plans formulated by the state board of health, which has decided that Portland's evil milk supply necessitates the application of an extreme remedy, and for the time state health board will take actual part with local health conserving agencies in the fight. In insisting that no milk be sold without a license, and in giving impetus to any plan for general education of dairymen and consumers to the dangers of dirty or diseased milk.
That in assuming leadership of the fight and responsibility for its success the state board of health struck a harmonious note of popular favor and appreciation is evidenced by the cordial expressions which members of that body are receiving. Another gratifying feature of the work undertaken is that the dairymen themselves take kindly to the board's supervision. In the past two days Dr. Robert C. Tenney, state health officer, has been receiving communications from dairymen who ask what they must do to conform to regulations, how they may adjust their own premises to the general requirements of the board and what they will need to be possessed of in the way of equipment and sanitary appliances in order to produce Class A or certified milk.
"The dairymen will find themselves

He's a Born Camper and a Marvel of Endurance at Rough Going—To Bed While Soaked Duds Dry—Hetch Hetchy's Destiny.

By W. Hoster.
(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
El Portal, Cal., Oct. 9.—Hot, tired, perspiring, but declaring that "this is the best we have seen since we started the trip," President Taft reached the Sentinel hotel on the floor of Yosemite valley, at 11:45 o'clock this morning.
The four mile walk down a descent of 2200 feet was made in exactly three hours. The hotel at Glacier Point had been left behind at 8:30 in the morning. Coaches met the party at the foot of the trail and carried them over the 15-minute ride to the Sentinel, where a crowd of Indians, regular cavalrymen, cowboys and mountaineers gave the president a rousing welcome to the valley and he shook hands all around before retiring to his room for a rest.
When the president finally reached Yosemite, he was so bathed in perspiration that he had scarcely a dry article of clothing on him. What was worse, there was no dry clothing at hand for the president to wear. As many have done before, in like circumstances, the president simply took off his wet clothing and went to bed, trusting to his valet to have the clothing dried for him by the time he wanted it again.
Baggage Wagon Saves the Day.
Fortunately there was no local committee waiting to call on him, so he was able to rest quietly in bed in the baggage wagon, while the presidential habitations were drying on the line.
Last night passed, and Taft was on the point of rising from bed and redonning his half wet clothing, when the baggage wagon, which had been sent to the hotel to hold the president's baggage, was brought to the hotel and the situation was saved.
It was the culminating incident in the four days of rough going in the mountains during which Taft had what Roosevelt would have described as a "bully time"—eating out of doors, retiring to a cave, and sleeping on a rock, bathing in a spring, climbing up and down mountains, joshing the natives, and listening to the Indian legends on the products of the section—eggs, ham, chicken, corn bread, cold milk and fruits, with all the frills of civilization taboos.
Taft Tires Out Lighter Man.
After luncheon the president again boarded a stage coach and had a drive around the floor of the valley before starting on his ride over the mountains to El Portal, where he boarded the car Mayflower, on which he is spending the night, preparatory to departing early tomorrow morning for Merced and Fresno, in each of which places he is billed for brief addresses. He is expected in Los Angeles on Monday morning.
The walk down Glacier trail this morning taxed the endurance of every man in the party, but the president, a good walker, such old Californians as Congressman Needham, English and McKinley, and the young men, after being compelled to climb upon a mule eventually, which led Taft to cry as he passed several hundred feet from the bottom and saw the mountain slowly winding its way down the mountain "There comes the retreat from Moscow."

PLUTE DEMON FREE AGAIN ON DESERT

Billy Boy's Besiegers Compelled to Retire, for Food and Water—Chase to Be Renewed—Desperate Battle Certain Finale.

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Bernardino, Cal., Oct. 9.—Billy Boy, the Plute Indian who murdered aged Mike Boniface and his daughter, Mary Nita, is again at large in the wastes of the Colorado desert, and the task of running him to earth must be recommenced. After yesterday's desperate skirmish with the murderer, in which Deputy Sheriff Charles Ritchie was wounded seriously, Sheriff Ralph Bates deployed about the mountainous region with the Plute Indian, in which Deputy Sheriff Charles Ritchie was wounded seriously. Sheriff Bates deployed about the mountainous region with the Plute Indian, in which Deputy Sheriff Charles Ritchie was wounded seriously.
After keeping their vigil throughout the night and until noon today, the men were compelled to save their own lives, to return to their base of supplies, 25 miles to the south. The men have been without food or water for more than 48 hours, and several of their number were in a precarious condition. They believe the Indian made good his chance for escape and will head for the Chemevu Indian reservation in southern Nevada.

Devilish Cruelty Displayed.
Sheriff Bates, who arrived here today with his jaded deputies, is confident that the Indian will be unable to penetrate the rugged San Bernardino mountains, and will be compelled to wander from water hole to water hole until another posse can return and take up the trail.
Late today Dr. W. H. Mills performed an operation upon Deputy Ritchie at the Marlborough hospital. He stated later that the murderer's bullet had passed through the hip bone and imbedded itself in the base of the spine. Several splinters of the lower vertebrae were removed during the operation. Mills gave it as his opinion that Ritchie would recover, but might be lifelong cripple.
Ritchie, according to Dr. Mills, after in the burning desert for six hours, after he was felled by the Indian's bullet, his body lay in an exposed spot, and when Jack Hyde, an Indian trapper, attempted to remove it, Billy drilled his hat with a Winchester bullet and sent him flying for safety.
Taunts From Behind Harried.
During the long hours while the cordons of officers encircled the fugitive's hideout, the Indian was harried and taunted and dared the deputies to show a head from behind the rocks where they lay. The officers do not expect to be able to take him alive and anticipate a desperate fight when they return to the chase.
The murderer began when he shot and killed Mike Boniface as he lay asleep beneath a tree at Banning on the evening of September 27. After abducting Mike's 14-year-old daughter, for whose hand he was a rejected suitor, he made for the desert. The body was found in the sands, two bullet wounds in her back telling her terrible story.

NAVY FURNISHES PRETTY ROMANCE

Daughter of Commander Potts, Retired, Weds Paymaster's Clerk.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Oct. 9.—Exclusive army and navy circles are greatly interested in a romantic wedding that took place at Bremerton, Wash., 15 months ago, and which has been kept a profound secret until the present time. The principals in the romance are Miss Ruth Potts, daughter of Commander Stacey Potts, U. S. N., retired, and Robert Ruffin Barton, a paymaster's clerk in the navy department at Philadelphia. Barton was stationed at Bremerton at the time of the marriage and Miss Potts had gone there to visit friends. Shortly afterward Barton was transferred to the east and Miss Potts returned to San Francisco.
Commander Potts first learned of the secret several days ago, when a letter came to the Potts mansion addressed to "Mrs. Robert Ruffin Barton." A family conference was hastily summoned and as a result Mrs. Barton is speeding to Philadelphia to join her husband.
A sister of Mrs. Potts-Barton is Mrs. Howard Lawton, wife of a navy officer. Miss Georgia Potts, an unmarried sister, is universally acknowledged to be the prettiest girl in the navy set.

PEARY READY WITH HIS ANSWER

Makes Reply to Dr. Cook's Claims to Having Discovered North Pole—Asserts That Faked Plan Was of Early Origin.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
New York, Oct. 9.—The carefully prepared evidence which Commander Peary has been preparing ever since his return from the North Pole and with which he intends to annihilate Dr. Cook's claims to have reached the Pole, is said to be complete.
General Thomas Hubbard, president of the Peary Arctic club, in conference with Herbert Bridgman, its secretary, has given the finishing touches to Commander Peary's attack.
The official statement is said to comprise many typewritten sheets. All those who have seen it were unanimous in their expression of belief that it completely disproves not only Dr. Cook's claim of the Pole, but many of the statements he has made concerning his adventures within the Arctic zone. Maps made by Cook's Eskimos of distances traveled by them while in his company, statements of other Eskimos as to what Cook had told them, and observations of the Peary party play an important part in the brief. Among other things, the document is said to contain a statement that the Cook expedition left this city two years ago with the determination to return with the assertion of polar discovery.
Combats Claims.
With this in mind Commander Peary, as he is expected to assert, laid his plans to combat claims of the Roosevelt last set sail for the polar sea. It is asserted that the document will tell of constant surveillance of Dr. Cook by Peary's men during the two years Cook spent in the ice-bound region and state that this surveillance re-

EMBEZZLES $1000 FINED $2454.10

Charles Hoedle, Clerk of Mill City School District, Must Go to Jail.

(Salem Bureau of The Journal.)
Salem, Or., Oct. 9.—Charles Hoedle, the Mill City school clerk who pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzling over $1000 of the school funds belonging to the Mill City district, was sentenced this morning to one year in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $2454.10. As Hoedle will be unable to pay the fine, he will be compelled to lay it out in the county jail at Salem at the rate of $2 a day, in addition to the year in the state prison.
Hoedle was arrested here last evening, when he was driving away from the city in an effort to overtake Wagner, the winner, who drove a Columbia, when the car was rear-ended by the car of the Cyclone turned turtle, flinging him 30 feet forward against a rail fence surrounding the embankment at the turn in the track. The machine turned completely over twice and was wrecked.
Three physicians who were at the scene rushed to the field and attended to the injured man. He was carried to Danbury hospital. He was found to have sustained a broken hip, and it is said that internal injuries are feared. It is believed here that the accident will not prove fatal.

POET'S GENIUS IS THROWN TO FLAMES

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Oct. 9.—It has just been learned that a number of valuable manuscript poems written by Charles Warren Stoddard just previous to his death, which have been sought in this city and in his old Boston library, have been destroyed.
The information is furnished by the dead poet's housekeeper. She has confessed that a few hours before his death he ordered her to build a fire in his room. One by one he went over the manuscripts that lay on a coverlet and when he had finished reading a wave of his hand consigned them to the flames. In this manner he saw his life work virtually turn to ashes, for, in addition to the poems that never saw the light of publicity, he destroyed every verse of his that had been published.
These facts were brought to the surface through the efforts of Ina Coolbrith, the poet, and A. M. Robertson, publisher, to get possession of the dead singer's poems for the purpose of gathering them all in one volume and publishing them.
One poem known to exist was eagerly sought. This was known under two titles, "In the Shadow" and "Where Life Flows." Perhaps there were two poems. If so, both dealt with the dropping of the final curtain in the drama of life, a subject seldom even hinted at by Stoddard other than with the most cheerful optimism.
The poem, or poems, took the opposite view. Readers of "Where Life Flows," declare that it contained the very essence of pessimism. This, it is thought, may have led to the burning of the manuscript.

De Palma was driving along at top speed in an effort to overtake Wagner, the winner, who drove a Columbia, when the car was rear-ended by the car of the Cyclone turned turtle, flinging him 30 feet forward against a rail fence surrounding the embankment at the turn in the track. The machine turned completely over twice and was wrecked.

SPRINKLING IS NOT HIS BELIEF

So Evangelist Has Man Arrested for Throwing Water on Young Son.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Albany, Or., Oct. 9.—Norman Gerke, clerk at the Russ house, was arrested this morning on a charge of sprinkling the 8-year-old son of Evangelist MacDonald, who is holding meetings in this city. Young MacDonald was around the hotel when Gerke was washing off the front walk and, according to Gerke, kept annoying him in spite of threats made by the clerk that he would soak the boy, the nuisance was kept up all day long. Gerke turned the hose on young MacDonald.
The evangelist, seeing that his son was being sprayed from the stream of water had the clerk arrested. The case was to have come up this afternoon before City Recorder Redfield, but has been postponed by Monday at 10 o'clock, as the attorney for Gerke was busy on another case. The case is creating a great deal of interest, as a large number of people have gathered to hear the outcome this afternoon.

Cornell promised to appear before Hays on Monday at 10 o'clock and give himself up on a warrant issued last Saturday. Hays, on some one would have been granted a writ of habeas corpus. ## GRANT B. DIMICK IS STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF RULE OF PEOPLE

Grant B. Dimick of Clarkamas county, announced candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of the state, has been appearing at the school, and stands flatfooted against the "assembly plan." He is for the rule of the people and the state go back to the old days of convention and corruption where the state is the weapon of the boss and the boss is king.
Judge Dimick made his position clear yesterday at a meeting of Sandy Clear, where he appeared at the school.
Judge Dimick in his address discussed county finances, road building, and then declared emphatically that the direct primary must be sustained by the people of Oregon unless they want to return to the old-fashioned strife, when men were arrayed against each other in every precinct and machine politics entered into every bit of county road work, selecting of jurors and even trial of cases in court. He said that had all been done away with and business men are now friends and are pulling together for the development of the county and state and the state go back to the old days of convention and corruption where the state is the weapon of the boss and the boss is king.
The speaker attributed the complete separation of the functions of the railroad commission, the abolition of free passes, and the absence of the special trains that formerly were supplied to the legislators and to the commissioners to the healthful operations of the initiative and referendum. His speech was warmly received and was virtually a declaration of war by a formally announced candidate for the Republican nomination against the proposed assembly plan.
There was unanimous approval of his position.
