TESTIMONY OF VALET DAMAGES RED-WIDOW (Continued From Page One.)

and the mourning which accentuated the prison pallor, one would have judged her the least excited person in the room.

Couillard insisted that after Mme. Steinhilf had been revived on the morning of May 21, and before he had seen the dead bodies, the accused woman told him that she had committed the murder, making no mention of the murder.

"After the police arrived and the scene of the crime was being examined, Mme. Steinhilf apparently fell ill and upon the verge of fainting from nervousness, excitement and fear," exclaimed the witness.

When the phone bell rang, he consulted the telephone book and found her name and address. He called her and she answered it. She was talking over the telephone in a cheerful voice as though no deed of blood had been committed, just a few short hours before.

Is Consummate Actress. If the story of the servants is true, and there is apparently no reason to doubt it at this time, Mme. Steinhilf is the most consummate actress of the age.

In the scene of blood and violence, with the corpses of her husband and another stretched out before her, victims of a cruel assassin, she could hardly restrain the sobs of heart-broken wife and child. But, on the next instant she could chat in the most matter-of-fact way, even jest over the whole thing.

May Revise Laws. On the other hand, Compere and Maclean are anxious to placate the "masses"...

RICH SPOKANE MAN ALIGNS WITH I. W. W.

Heated war now waging in Spokane between the Industrial Workers of the World and the police...

Judge Mann of the municipal court ruled that the mayor and his officials were unjustly discriminating against the Industrial Workers of the World in absolutely prohibiting them from speaking on the street corners...

The ordinance was unconstitutional, he declared, for it was in conflict with the constitution of the United States, but an older ordinance, over which the overtures of the revolutionists had passed before, was thereby placed in effect again.

Regulation—Not prohibition. Nearly a year had passed since the Industrial Workers of the World held their first fight for free speech...

This disappointment is in part the cause for a renewal of their fight, they declare. Judge Mann's decision that "we do not object to being regulated, but we will not be prohibited"...

Within an hour after Charles Thompson, one of their leaders, had been dismissed, they had organized a violent purpose of beating it. But to, they were arrested for disorderly conduct...

Three Days' Battle. For three days the police battled with their single handed, then the first denunciation was called on to assist in dispersing the rebellious crowds. Streams of water under heavy pressure were shot at random through the throngs...

Revolutionists are fast assembling from over all the coast and from the Rocky mountain country. The Socialists and some of the labor organizations that are called "scabs" by the Industrial Workers of the World, are on the front to offer their services in behalf of free speech.

It is costing thousands of dollars to the revolutionists, but strange as it may seem, business men and farmers are contributing food and money these men on the fight against the authorities. Men are crammed like sardines in the city jail and many of them are sick.

Anna Arquette and Isabelle Huxtable, feminine revolutionists, the latter a girl of 17, were among the women prisoners in the battle for nearly 30 hours. They claim to have been arrested while sitting quietly in the I. W. W. halls.

As many as 25 men were crammed together in the jail, with their feet and hands to remain there without food for nearly 12 hours. Conditions within the jail were almost unbearable. Windows were kept closed, the temperature was kept up to a high degree, and the stench of perspiring humanity was sickening.

Bread and water is the diet three times a day for those of the convicted ones who refuse to pay their fines or work them out on the rockpile, and prisoners will do either. These men are growing weaker every day, but they smile and say: "There are still many thousands of our fellow-workers to carry on the fight and we will win."

JOHN F. LOGAN SERIOUSLY ILL NEWSBOYS MUST WHISPER TODAY

Attorney for Defense in the Gadsby Case Has Nervous Breakdown.

John F. Logan, overcome by overwork and the nervous strain attendant upon the trial of the Gadsby alienation of affections case last week, in which case he is the chief counsel for the defense, lies seriously ill at his home, No. 327 East Sixth street, north.

Mr. Logan's illness will not interrupt the trial of the Gadsby suit. James Gleason, who is assisting him in the conduct of the defense, stated "last night that he will not ask for a continuance if Mr. Logan is unable to appear in court tomorrow."

Dr. James O. C. Wiley, who is attending Mr. Logan, said last night that the patient is improving and he thinks the attorney may be able to resume his place in the courtroom tomorrow.

John B. Stevenson, Mr. Logan's law partner, states that Mr. Logan is not likely to be seen in court again for at least a week. The hard work he has done on the Gadsby case in the primary and complete rest for a short period will restore him to his usual health.

The loss of Logan at this stage of the Gadsby case is conceded to be a serious blow to the defense, as the case is being argued by the attorneys. It has been made by him. Ranged on the other side are ex-Senator Charles W. Fulton, C. M. Idleman and J. V. Beach, and Logan has carried on the warring battle of legal questions with Fulton.

Mr. Logan's expected closing argument to the jury will be a serious disappointment to all who have listened to the case as it progresses.

Just what further evidence will be offered, if any, has not been revealed. After this will come rebuttal testimony for the plaintiff and then the final stages of the argument by the attorneys. It seems unlikely that the case will be closed before Tuesday afternoon, and it may last into Wednesday.

Tacoma Police Chief Issues Orders to Arrest Early Morning Vendors.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 6.—About the Sunday morning newspapers whistling snort is long and loud. Bring in the first newboys who peep.

"People in the hotels downtown and in the homes of Tacoma cannot sleep with the newboys howling their wares beneath the windows. So many complaints of the disturbing noises have come to me that I have ordered the arrest of all newboys who dare call aloud the Sunday morning newspapers."

"How late in the morning do these objects lie abed?" the chief was asked. "Well, on an average, say until 9:30 or 10 o'clock."

"But will not such an order put the laugh on the side of the city?" "I cannot help that," the chief replied. "The people seem to want to sleep, and I like to sleep as long as I like—especially Sunday mornings. The newboys must keep silent until after sleeping hours."

The next order will be to rumble streetcars to don gum slippers and for pedestrians who get out early to walk in the middle of the road, that the somnolent may not be disturbed.
