

MANY PORTLAND WIDER STREETS; MEN INTERESTED IN NEW BUILDINGS

Outcome of Alaska Coal Land Investigation Eagerly Watched Here. Speakers at Civic Institute Make Strong Pleas for Improvements.

Many Portland people are very much interested in the controversy now raging between ex-special agent Glavis and his former superior, R. A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior. It is because many Portland people are also interested in Alaska coal lands in much the same way as those who promoted the Cunningham coal land deal. The Anglo-American Coal company is a corporation, formed by a number of well known Portland men; among them H. L. Pittock of the Oregonian. Many other well known Portland men have bought stock in the company. The chief trouble is that the company does not as yet own the land from which it intends to mine the Alaska coal. The reason, or one of the reasons, rather, is that the patents to the land are held up pending the investigations being made into the Alaska coal land deal. Back in 1905, or about that time, a number of Portland men conceived the idea of securing a large tract of Alaska coal land and forming a mining company to dig out the coal for the market. Accordingly these men filed on coal land claims covering a large tract of land in Alaska. A short time afterwards they formed the Anglo-American Coal company and began the sale of stock in this corporation. A great deal of this stock was sold and is now held by men in this city and elsewhere. Before any of the claims had gone to patent the investigation of the Alaska cases was begun by the interior department, and the Portland claims were caught in the general order holding all such claims from patent until the investigations were concluded. Special Agent Glavis and his assistants, when they made the general investigation of the Alaska lands, ran across the claims of the men back of the Anglo-American company, and they were held up along with the Cunningham claims and all the rest. They are still held up. It was found in the investigation that the men back of the company had filed on the claims with the intention of forming a corporation which would have control of the lands. It was also found that the promoters of the company had sold stock, thus giving proportional ownership in the lands, to a large number of men other than the original claimants. Because of this the lands were held up from patent, and will continue to be so held until the Glavis-Ballinger tangle is straightened out one way or the other. If Glavis should be able to arouse opposition to the intention of Ballinger to send the lands to patent, to such a degree that the Ballinger plan would be overthrown, then the Portland applicants and promoters of the company would be out their lands, and the stockholders would be in their stock, and out their money paid for it. For that reason the Glavis-Ballinger controversy holds a very live local interest, and its outcome is being followed with a great deal of suspense by many financially interested men in the city.

THE STRANGER WITHIN OUR GATES

J. J. Peyton, Blackwell, Okla.—Blackwell has a sanitary milk system that seems to me a good one. Every month a special inspector—one who knows how to test milk—visits each dairy. He stays long enough to examine conditions. If they are not satisfactory he reports them to his superior—a committee of three—who take immediate steps to shut off the milk supply from that dairy until the evil conditions are remedied. This man also sees that every cow suffering from tuberculosis is killed.

FAMOUS COMEDIAN COMING TO PORTLAND

When the curtain drops for the last time next Saturday evening on "The Queen of the Highway," the short season of stock at the Portland theatre will have come to an end and after one dark week, the Shubert attractions will appear steadily until the close of the season, in June. As the production to reopen the uptown playhouse, one of the last and best of Clyde Fitch's comedies, "The Bachelor," with Charles Cherry in the stellar role, will be offered by Sam S. and Leo Shubert, Inc. Mr. Cherry is one of the best known of the modern school of English actors and his week's engagement, beginning Sunday, November 21, will be his first appearance locally, although his name is well known to all patrons of the theatre. His vehicle is of a typical Fitchian order and the supporting cast is one consisting of metropolitan players. His tour of the west will equal the record set by John Mason earlier in the season. Mr. Cherry closed Sunday evening at the Maxine Elliott theatre in New York and will reach Seattle in time to open at the Alhambra next Sunday evening.

Strengthen S. P. & S. Bridges.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Husum, Wash., Nov. 11.—The bridges on the Goldendale branch of the S. P. & S. have been rebuilt, allowing all freight cars to now be loaded to their full capacity. Heretofore but 60,000 pounds was the car limit, but this has been advanced to 100,000 pounds. The immense piles of wheat on the ground outside the warehouses will be reduced rapidly from now on.

A man who owns a fine coffee plantation in Jamaica said:

"Four years ago I discovered that coffee was ruining my health and I quit and have been using Postum ever since."

Experience taught this man that he could not drink his own high-grade coffee.

Its active drug—CAFFEINE—irritates the nervous system, interferes with digestion, and trouble is sure to follow.

Some folks may take the hint and change to Postum.

It is absolutely free from drugs, and when well made, that is, boiled 15 minutes, it has a delicious taste similar to the mild, high-grade Javas, with the natural vital food elements of the field grains that repair the damage done by coffee.

Over 175,000,000 feet of fully ripe timber in the Umpqua national forest. The city council had been investigating the possibilities offered in appropriation of the water of Laying creek for a municipal supply, but prior to this the parties interested in the purchase of the merchantable timber had made application to the forestry officials to purchase a given area. Twenty-five per cent of the money received from the sale goes into the school and road funds. This sale requires at least $250,000 to handle at the lowest government figure, so it will be seen that a considerable sum will be available to Lane and Douglas counties as their pro rata.

A Good Smoke.

CORVALLIS LIMITS MAY BE EXTENDED

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Corvallis, Or., Nov. 11.—The city limits of Corvallis will be extended to include the property of the Oregon Agricultural college and adjacent territory if the special election set by the city council for December 15 results as most people anticipate. The city council also raised the city attorney's salary to $100 per month and the salary of city judge from $40 to $60.

O. A. C. BUYS NEW CAMPUS GROUND

Regents Meet and Transact Much Business—Install New Heating Plant.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, Or., Nov. 11.—The O. A. C. regents have finished their business meeting, and as a result considerable important business was taken care of. The most important transaction was the opening of bids for the new heating plant. F. A. Erlanson, who is at present erecting the new armory, was successful in securing the contract in a field of eight bidders.

$16,948 being the amount stated in Erlanson's bid. The building will start at an early date. The Hallow Heating company of Portland will install the heating apparatus, at a cost of $12,950. Land valued at $12,500 was purchased by the regents from the estates of Perrot-Wilson & Woodcock. This property lies between the upper and lower campus, and has been desired for a long time by the college authorities to complete the continuity of the college land holdings. Plans were also laid for the enlarging of the summer schools. Lecturers who have won national fame in their various specialties will be secured to augment the regular teaching staff. In addition to assisting in the disposal of business, Honorable W. W. Cotton, who represents Portland as a regent, addressed the student body. He chose as his subject "The Human as a Machine," and in an address full of pointed and valuable suggestions he emphasized the value of preserving and caring for the human body. The other regents in attendance were Honorable W. M. Pierce of La Grande, Honorable C. L. Hawley of McCoy, Honorable J. K. Weatherford of Albany, Honorable J. T. Apperson of Park Place, Honorable B. F. Irvine of Portland and Honorable E. E. Wilson of Corvallis. Young Hobber to Reform School.
