These dairymen sell milk to Damascus creamery in East Portland. Samples were taken by Special Inspector Hutchinson.

The Consumers' league will join forces with the city and state in protecting Portland against dirty or diseased milk. Arrangements for worthy dairymen to receive quality certificates from the organization were made at a meeting held yesterday.

Two classes of milk will be recognized by the pure food committee of the league as being worthy of recommendation, namely, certified milk as the highest standard of purity to which milk can be brought, and Class A, or a milk not so high in quality. Labels showing the milk's quality will be provided dairymen by the pure food committee and these labels will be placed on each bottle of milk thus recommended.

In order to make sure that the milk which is recommended actually comes up to the class where it is graded, the Consumers' league will find it necessary to employ a skilled veterinarian to make inspection of dairies where the operators wish to be recommended for the quality of their product. Another man will be employed to act as clerk and to keep a general supervision of the work. The salaries of these will be paid by joint arrangement between the dairymen and the Consumers' league.

A number of dairymen have already expressed a desire to raise their dairies and the products of their dairies up to a standard where they can be certified to by the Consumers' league as such a certification on the part of the consumer, they consider, would be the best obtainable advertisement of a properly conducted business. The plan seems assured of success from the beginning.

Many Questions Asked.

Many questions were asked by members of the league during yesterday's meeting why correction of the evils of the milk supply have not been made long ago. It was unanimously agreed that had the state dairy and food commissioner properly administered the duties of his office during many years ago, his parents would not have been in such evil condition as they are proved to have become, and the cows would not be so generally affected with tuberculosis.

Hearty approval of a grand jury investigation which will disclose the real nature of the reasons why Portland has been compelled to tolerate dirty and diseased milk was expressed and a recommendation adopted that the Consumers' league as representative of the milk consumers of Portland give to the investigation all possible assistance and cooperation.

THE STRANGER WITHIN OUR GATES

"A peculiar incident occurred on the train yesterday, said A. R. Munson, Hot Springs, Ark., at the Oregon today. 'At Nampa, Idaho, a man got on the train dressed in ragged clothing, and he looked like a laboring man. His face looked familiar, so I got up, walked by him, returned, stopped and spoke to him. I was right. He was an old schoolmate of mine in St. Louis 40 years ago. His parents were wealthy and he had hundreds of opportunities to make something of himself, but he preferred to roam the country. Drink did the rest. He is now working on the section near Nampa.'"

D. W. Garvice, Boston, Mass.—I am in the automobile business, and have many opportunities to watch the progress of the business. In Boston alone 20 new automobile firms have entered into business since last January, while 13 livery stables have gone out of business. I understand that a new auto—one that consumes air instead of gasoline—is about to be perfected in the east. I'm sure that some day such a machine will be a success.

W. A. Walthill, Medford, Or.—When the proposed electric line for Rogue river valley is completed our population will go up by leaps and bounds. There are thousands of acres of valuable land that will produce excellent fruit that is yet unplanted. There is money in the valley for a couple of millions of people.
