

JAPANESE WARRIORS, SAYS NEW AMBASSADOR

Baron Uchida Contends That His Fellow Countrymen Would Develop Economic Resources by Calling Attention to Pacific.

By Emil Andraas.
(Publishers Press Leased Wire.)
Vienna, Nov. 20.—Just prior to his departure for the United States Baron Uchida, the new Japanese ambassador to the United States, gave a very interesting interview to the Politische Correspondenz.

Baron Uchida denied that the relations between Tokio and Washington had ever at any moment lost their excellently friendly character, and declared that there was no foundation for the view that the economic aims of the United States in China must lead to sharp antagonism with Japan. The policy of economic invigoration is solely a policy of economic relationship between Japan and China. But Japan does not aspire to economic supremacy in China at the expense of all other states. China can only be developed with the help of the great commercial states, and the supposition that Japan is disquieted by American plans for the opening up of China is contrary to the truth. The leading principles of Japanese policy in regard to China are the open door for trade and the maintenance of Chinese territorial integrity.

What Japan really desires, concluded the ambassador, is that the commerce of the world may be attracted to the Pacific on the largest scale and that the Pacific may become to Asia what the Atlantic is to Europe.

Trouble in Montenegro.

The recent rising of the Vassioevich tribe in Montenegro, which at one time threatened to upset the delicate balance of affairs in the near east, was in reality one of the signs of the struggle which is going on in the principality between the partisans of the old and new regimes. A few years ago Prince Nicolas, who has always ruled as an unquestioned autocrat, with the moral help of some of his nobles, granted a constitution to his people with the idea of bringing them more into line with modern European ideas. This innovation did not meet with unqualified approval in the principality, and a large part of the nation looked on the change as one fraught with danger for a state that had never known a constitutional government. The Crown Prince Danilo, who has married a German princess, is an advocate of the new order of things, and as he will one day have to rule over the Black mountains, his opinion is naturally of some weight. But his younger brother, Prince Mirko, is entirely an upholder of the old state of affairs and it is around him that all those who are discontented with the endeavor to Europeanize Montenegro are rallying themselves. Prince Mirko, like his grandfather and namesake, is one of the old school of thought, and the struggle between him and his elder brother will be worth watching as it will probably have no slight influence on the future of the southern Slavs.

Robbers and Robbers.

The railway station at Bragula, Servia, is so infested with snafus that special precautions are taken while the trains stop to prevent the reptiles entering the compartments.

An American lady coming up from Constantinople was appalled to find a small snake coiled around the handle of her traveling bag. A search resulted in the discovery of several others among the passengers' rugs.

Robberies and assaults on wealthy railroad passengers seem to be becoming very frequent, and numerous cases have been reported during the past few days.

When the Vienna-Warsaw express arrived at Lublin for dinner, the guard discovered that all the occupants of one first class compartment, four men and three women, were unconscious and all efforts to rouse them were in vain until a doctor was brought. He found that they had been chloroformed, and an examination showed that they had been robbed of all their money and valuables. So far no trace has been discovered of the thief. In the same express the day before a Polish manufacturer named Gblutowski was found dead with a bullet through his head, and it is thought this murder may have been the work of the same criminal. In this case, too, robbery was the motive.

Monarchs Fraternize.

The recent meeting between King Ferdinand of Bulgaria and the crown prince of Serbia at Kruevatz was of a very friendly character. There was also an exchange of telegrams between King Ferdinand and King Peter. At the special request of King Ferdinand M. Novacovic, a former premier in a coalition cabinet, was one of the party who went to Kruevatz to greet him.

The Xrent of the Times.

The debut of the ballet will shortly occur of seven beautiful ladies belonging to the harem of the deposed sultan, Abdul Hamid. One of these ladies is, it is stated, the Princess Ala So-rah Zoraido, a leading favorite with the deposed sultan, and of Indian origin. The formation of the troupe is due to the enterprise of the ex-sultan's principal actor, Kaido, who, incidentally has the position and title of general, and who proposes to present on the stage some of the Viennese music halls, a series of "operettes" from the life of the harem, always providing, it is cautiously added, that the censor does not raise any difficulties. Should the performance prove to the taste of the Viennese public, possibly one of these days New York may also enjoy the opportunity of witnessing it.

Courteous Policy.

A party of 250 Turkish notables have been on a visit here. They were received at the station by a military band, an honor generally confined to the Emperor Francis Joseph, who made known his desire that every courtesy should be extended to the guests.

Besides being lavishly entertained in the capitals, the notables were invited to visit several of the chief centers of manufacture and industry in the monarchy. Altogether the government did everything in the power to commend since the Turks that their country has no better friend than Austria-Hungary. The desire of official and industrial circles was of course to obliterate the memory of the events of last winter and regain for Austria her share in Turkish trade, which she lost at the time of the Turkish boycott.

"Busy Burke's" Monday Offerings Will Make Tomorrow's Sale Unparalleled for Bargains

Turkey Numbers Will Be Published in Our Big Monday Advertisement

"Busy Burke" wanted to make twenty families Thanksgiving Dinner merry, so we gave away that many fine, big dressed Turkeys to twenty purchasers who spent 25c in the store last week. The names and ticket numbers of the fortunate buyers will be published in tomorrow evening's advertisements—watch for list; also announcement of our big weekly Plentiful Tuesday Sale. Look for them.

Truly, "unparalleled" best describes the amazing bargains "Busy Burke" is offering for Monday, for every reduction offered is a bona fide bargain, while we defy competition to duplicate the low prices quoted. Every item herein is of intense interest to our patrons, for each article is selected with a view of pleasing our customers, the great working people. Again we wish to impress upon your mind that this is the working people's store, and their's alone. The so-called "bon ton" trade we do not want—do not cater to. The working people's trade has built up this store and it is their needs alone that we desire to supply, hence our ever eagerness to cater to the workingman's needs and not to the rich man's dollar. That this is in reality "Portland's Great Bargain Store for the Great Working People"—a title that we believe is justly earned—is more than demonstrated in these unequalled Monday offerings by "Busy Burke."

Underwear, Hosiery, Corsets, Domestic Have Been Moved to Basement

The great expansion of the business in these departments necessitated their removal to different sections of the store. You will find the large Domestic Department in the new Basement Section. URGE MILKMEN TO STERILIZE

Philadelphia Women Want Dirt Eliminated From Milk Cans.

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—An attempt will be made by the Philadelphia Alliance for the Care of Babies to induce large milk dealers to sterilize the cans in which milk is shipped, to the city, and thus decrease the danger of infection to babies.

Investigation by Dr. Joseph S. Neff, director of the bureau of health and charities, has led to the discovery that these cans are often sour and, otherwise foul, because the farmers who ship the milk have no facilities for properly cleansing or sterilizing them. The big dealers signed their willingness to perform this service for them and return the cans free from dirt and germs if money can be found to install a sterilizing plant in the milk depots.

This is only one phase of the work of the alliance which has started its fall campaign to reduce infant mortality by giving full lectures on the care of infants, in school houses.

Owing to educational methods which are being pursued, the mothers being visited in their homes, and instructed in the proper feeding of their little ones, the death rate in September was 7 per cent less than last year, and 37 per cent less than in 1907 and 1908.

The alliance, which is organized in nearly every ward of the city, with ward chairmen and representatives from the leading women's organizations to carry on the work, will try hard to banish soothing syrups and paregoric from the homes of the poor, will induce mothers to give up the artificial feeding of their children, and will point out the danger of gastro-enteritis arising from the use of whole cow's milk for infants.

The movement has enlisted the hearty support and cooperation of physicians who have consented to lecture to public schools and give general advice to poor mothers.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. Paul L. McCononey, an address on first aids to the injured in the home was delivered in the Lincoln school, Twentieth street and Fairmount avenue, by Dr. Walter Eastrell Lee. The meeting was well attended by Polish and Italian women, many of whom took their babies. The address was translated by the interpreter into both languages.

EMPLOYER STARTS 200 BANK ACCOUNTS

Chicago, Nov. 20.—Although many of them had but little thought of "saving up for a rainy day," 200 employees of the Acorn Manufacturing company are the proud possessors of bank accounts. Moreover, each was the recipient of the nucleus for a "nest egg" in the form of a crisp $1 bill donated by E. W. Wray, president of the company.

Mrs. Wray called his employees into the office of the factory. He expounded the merits of a savings account and then offered to make an initial deposit of $1 for each. The offer was accepted by all the employees, many of whom gave a portion of their week's wages to clerks of the Northern Trust company, who had gone to the factory armed with bank books.

"The spirit of thrift should be encouraged by every employer," said Mr. Wray. "The employees in our factory already are enthusiastic advocates of the idea."

Killed by Smelling Salts.
South Norwalk, Conn., Nov. 20.—While in bed at her home Mrs. Joseph O'Brien met a tragic death from suffocation, caused by the fumes from a bottle containing smelling salts. Mrs. O'Brien, who was complaining of headache and in the afternoon she went to sleep with a bottle of smelling salts at her nose. The fumes from the bottle was spilled and ran over her face and nose. The fumes produced death while she slept. Dr. R. H. Huntington, medical officer of the health department, removed the fumes from the room and the body was taken to the morgue.
