

REMAIN TO LEBANON YOUTH NEED NO CROOKS TO CATCH CROOKS

Winfield Huddleson Taken Reformation of Police Department Gives Thieves No Place.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Albany, Or., Nov. 22.—Winfield Huddleson, a 29 year old Lebanon boy, is in the St. Mary's hospital in this city suffering from a deep gash in his right arm, the big artery having been severed by Huddleson's cousin, Merritt Jennings, while the boys were in a dispute that resulted in the death of a pocket knife on the main street of Lebanon yesterday morning.

Merritt Jennings, the 16 year old cousin who did the stabbing, is now in the county jail, having given himself up yesterday morning. He does not seem to fear the consequences of his act. In talking over the affair he said that he was first struck by Huddleson and that he was sober at the time, also that he had always been a friend of Huddleson. The trouble between the two started when Jennings went to the Huddleson home at midnight to get some blankets he had left there. Huddleson says Jennings was drunk and that he shut the door in his face. About an hour later the boys met on the main street in the north part of the town. Huddleson was taking Wild Jennings to his room.

Jennings Draws Knife. A dispute at once arose over the previous trouble. Huddleson attempted to take Merritt Jennings and his brother home, he says, when Merritt drew a knife and began stabbing him. A boy named Ingram was with Merritt at the time.

After Merritt Jennings had stabbed Huddleson, he ran away, going 10 miles to Tangent where he boarded a train for Albany, giving himself up to Sheriff W. B. Mealy and others, all of whom were investigated by the federal grand jury in connection with the Oregon land frauds.

Mr. Henny will leave Portland for San Francisco, Cal., in a few days, to return the early part of January to participate, probably with Mr. McCourt in the prosecution of the fraud cases. During the few days he will remain here he will take up details of the most important cases and communicate with Mr. Worthington, who is expected to arrive in Portland in a few weeks.

Regarding retrial of the government action against Williamson, Mr. McCourt averred that nothing definite has been decided as yet, but that the government would probably be come to until the land fraud cases were well under way.

BE TRIED JAN. 10

Though the definite setting of criminal cases on the federal docket, the majority of which are Oregon land fraud actions, including that againstlinger Hermann, was today postponed until Tuesday morning, United States District Attorney John McCourt asserted that January 10 would be about the date of the calling of the Hermann trial.

Judge R. S. Bean set this case for trial January 10, with the provision that if counsel was unable to be present, the date might be changed.

The case of J. W. Gerber, the La Grande, Or., banker, was set to follow the Hermann trial.

On inability of Mr. McCourt and Francis J. Henny, special government prosecutors, to learn definitely from counsel for Hermann and others indicted, as to what trial dates would most suit their convenience, requests were made by both today to Federal Judge R. S. Bean, presiding, to have the definite setting postponed.

Both Mr. Henny and Mr. McCourt desire to consult the wishes of Henry Worthington, chief of counsel for Hermann, before having the trial date for the ex-congressman's case definitely set. Hermann's case, which is the most important of the list, will be the first tried.

Mr. McCourt said today that the question of the dismissal of a majority of the pending indictments would not be seriously considered until the cases came for trial. However, Judge Bean has recently dismissed indictments against J. H. Thompson, Earl Benson, W. B. Mealy and others, all of whom were investigated by the federal grand jury in connection with the Oregon land frauds.

Learn Reason, Not Memory

Little time was wasted in the preliminaries of organization in the annual county teachers' institute, which met at 9 o'clock this morning in the assembly room at the Washington High school, as just 20 minutes after the 100 teachers were called to order the actual work of the institute was begun by Assistant City Principal D. A. Grout, who gave an interesting half hour's talk on primary numbers.

Professor Grout prefaced his lecture with the statement that he was opposed to the old method of committing to memory the addition and multiplication tables. "Results as we used to understand the meaning of this word in the school room are not wanted," declared he. "The primary pupil must be taught to find out each result for himself by learning numerical relations. It is more profitable to the child to know and know how to do than it is to know because the table says so."

After the speaker, Professor Grout impressed upon the teachers that a third year pupil had not mastered numerical relations he should be required to commit the tables to memory. Mr. Grout will continue the discussion of numbers in the afternoon, taking up the work of the intermediate grades. County Superintendent of Schools Robinson made a short talk on composition and language. He outlined the essentials of a good language exercise of the part of the child as follows: Clear seeing and clear thinking; desire to tell and freedom in telling; growth in power to express clearly, connectedly and in good English. The essentials of a good language exercise on the part of the teacher, he said, are: Success in the child mental activity and the desire to express, and a definite aim in specific language training.

"Mental activity is aroused by systematic exercises in the fundamental discipline of expression," said the speaker. "They are observation exercises, picture exercises, story exercises, letter writing and dictation work." Superintendent Robinson will conclude his lecture on language work this afternoon.

The picture talk by Miss Simmons, instructed in the art school of the museum of art, was of especial value to the teachers and was followed closely by every member of the institute. "There are but three essentials in art," said Miss Simmons. "These are: lines, light and dark, and color, and they must all be beautiful. The underlying principle in art is harmony. Anything to be artistic must harmonize with the purpose for which it is to be used, and with its surroundings."

Miss Simmons' morning subject was "Pictures, Their Educative Value." At this afternoon's session of the institute she will give a talk on "A Picture Study."

CONSPIRACY TO CHEAT, HE FEARS

H. G. Sibray Brings Suit Against George E. and Dora Devereaux.

Asserting that George E. Devereaux and Dora Devereaux, brother and sister, are in a conspiracy to cheat him out of property bid in at a sheriff's sale under execution, H. G. Sibray has begun suit in the circuit court to have a deed from Devereaux to his sister set aside and to secure a writ of assistance to place him in possession of two lots in Portsmouth, the property involved.

The complaint shows a mix-up in title and two deeds on record as the result of a mistake in attaching the wrong property. Sibray first brought suit on May 15, 1907, and an attachment was issued for two lots, but they were not properly described. When the mistake was learned a new attachment was issued, under date of June 6. Meanwhile Devereaux had conveyed the property to his sister in a deed of gift, the deed bearing date of May 22. Sibray says the deed was not actually executed until June 1.

Under the second attachment the property was sold by the sheriff and the circuit court confirmed the sale in January, 1908. Sibray alleges that the deed of Devereaux to his sister was fraudulent and was intended to defeat his judgment. Devereaux, who is a local architect, was sued for divorce by his wife last week, and in her complaint she alleged that the Fortmouth lots conveyed to her sister-in-law are held by the latter in trust for Devereaux. Is Sibray right the lots do not belong in the Devereaux family at all and the wife will not be able to draw an interest in them if she is successful in her suit for divorce.

WHISKERS IN SMOKE; INSURANCE COVERS

En route to San Francisco, Cal., to collect insurance on his whiskers, Fred W. Palmer, of the California metropolis, stopped off in Portland Saturday and Sunday to allow the remnants of his facial fungus appropriate ton-sorial attention. He was registered at the Nortonia hotel.

Fifty years of age, and endowed with considerable capital, Mr. Palmer, when his hair began to thin, insured the fading hair-growth for $100. At the same time he took out a $50 policy with Lloyd's of London, Eng., through the San Francisco agent, on his whiskers, which, alas, were then water-lot.

Being pronounced perfectly bald in two years after taking out the policy, Mr. Palmer collected the $100 on his hair. But his whiskers, which he lovingly put to his chin until last week in Vancouver, B. C.

While smoking a cigar in the lobby of the Vancouver hotel on a rainy afternoon, Mr. Palmer fell asleep. Unfortunately, the lighted cigar dropped down into the facial foliage, and set it afire. Mr. Palmer's own private blaze was put out with a fire extinguisher.

With his whiskerettes closely cropped, Mr. Palmer is today on his way to San Francisco to interview Lloyd's agents about the $50.

A Gold Dust Home is a Healthy Home. In dirt lurks danger of disease. This truth is being emphasized more and more by the revolution of modern science. Uncleanliness is not only undesirable but positively unwholesome. Most of the life which the human body suffers are due to germs, and dirt is the favorite lodging place of these germs. Remove the dirt and germs and you have a healthy home.

No more efficient cleaning agent has been discovered than Gold Dust washing powder. It cleans and disinfects everything well. It is used in the laundry, in the kitchen, in the bathroom, in the nursery, in the school, in the office, in the hotel, in the restaurant, in the public house, in the street, in the park, in the city, in the country, in the world.

Rev. William Parsons of the Third Presbyterian church, Thirteenth and East Pine, delivered his first evening sermon there last evening, the text being "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God."

Rev. William Parsons of the Third Presbyterian church, Thirteenth and East Pine, delivered his first evening sermon there last evening, the text being "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God." He said: "If we see the Christ as he is and love him as we should we shall live as we ought. Today as of old people perish for the lack of a vision. Today, as of old, it is the vision of the Christ that transforms men. Call the roll of the heroes of righteousness and each will go back to his vision of Christ as the beginning and the dynamo of the better life."

The Vision of Christ. "Have you ever seen the Christ? Whether you have or not, look at him with me through the vision of his greatest interpreter. "Nau in this vision saw that Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ." The identification was complete. He knew that the one who appeared and who was the God and crucified prophet of Nazareth. That is apt to be the first thing about a transforming vision of Christ today. That the man of Nazareth is the Christ, not a man who is a fiction of our imagination, but the God and crucified prophet of Nazareth, is the one anointed of God, to be both Saviour and Lord of this world, a thing obscured from the vision of too many today.

Then he discovered that Jesus of Nazareth was the living Christ. He saw him and spoke with him. The tomb had yielded to the invincible power of his essential Godhead. "It was the purpose of Jesus in the sacrament of the supper that we should never forget his death for our sins. But too many worship him as though he were dead, apparently forgetting his declaration in his revelation to John, 'Who was dead, but am alive forever more.'"

Imperfect Vision Hinders. "It is an imperfect vision that hange the flag at half mast on Good Friday, fills the churches with images of broken and dying man, or preaches exclusively on the first half of that historic text, 'Who was delivered for our offences, but raised again for our justification.' One of the faults of the age's vision is that it has, but one glimpse of the living Christ, the living Christ, literature, that is Marie Correll's sketch in the 'Master Christian.'"

While basing our hope of redemption on a crucified Saviour we need the living Christ for our inspiration. The Christ able to enter into and maintain personal relations with us. "I saw the vision. "In this vision Paul saw the king of the second palm and Daniel's vision and the first chapter of the Apocalypse. What it was that wrung from him that term 'Lord' he does not here tell us. It might have been his glorious majesty. It might have been the sudden slipping into the prophetic of the truth, confessed until then in a great and analytical mind, concerning this prophet of Galilee. Whatever the explanation the supposed impostor of Galilee was suddenly transformed in his mind to God's king.

"We need this element of the vision today as he needed it. The kingship of Jesus is a little understood, as is his priestly office by many whose Christianity is imperfect. To most men the term brings to their minds only the personal dominion which a personal Christ exercises through the truth upon the individual. A truth to be sure but not the whole truth. The whole truth as history we need a vision of the Christ that adds to this a rational connection between the majestic figure of John's vision, who walks amid the candlesticks and holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, and the church today, so through the prophetic of the truth, confessed until then in a great and analytical mind, concerning this prophet of Galilee. Whatever the explanation the supposed impostor of Galilee was suddenly transformed in his mind to God's king.

"In this vision who appeared to him Saul saw also a conquering Christ. One able not only to subdue him, but who was planning to bring all men to that recognition of his rule and right that wrung the term 'Lord' from this man's lips. The man's name was Saul. His vision revealed this to him. And Christianity from that day to this has been made an aggressive religion by the real comprehension of Christ.

"Today we need this vision to fit us for present needs. With so many people quitting the church is dead, with many more a little shaky as to its future, and so many pessimistically giving up the social conflict, perfectly sure that the world is growing worse and that it is a hopeless thing to do of anything until the Lord comes in person to take up the conflict, with all this doubt and pessimism, we need this vision of the conquering Christ.

"The vision of the horseman of Revelation 19, in his progress through the kingdoms of this world, the vision that comes with the echo of that voice, 'the kingdoms of our Lord have become the kingdoms of our Lord; the vision that comes from the facts of the progress of Christianity in the world. When we get this vision as we should it will be the thing that will crown with success the splendid organizations of today.

Must Be Freed From Satan. "But with this vision of the conquering King came the vision of the compassionate Saviour; compassion for him in his blindness, compassion for all in bondage to error, with blind eyes and Satan's shackles, toiling in darkness and hopelessness. This was the thing that moved the Christ. "In the midst of social work we are apt to lose this thought from the vision. We do well to socialize our Christianity, but we must not forget that the great need of men is for freedom from the power of Satan. It is to give the freedom of mind and heart that the Christ conquers men? Men say, What has the church to offer? The answer is, This vision, interpreted to the age. This is her greatest service. Because of this she is called 'The pillar and ground of the truth.' To make men see this vision is the true evangelism, and to get it ourselves is our best equipment. To get it we look at the Christ through the word and to perfect it we get lips that we can say, 'I have seen the vision of the heavenly vision.'"

Probate Court Gets Final Report Allowing Much Real Property to Stand.

W. C. Noon Jr., and T. J. Armstrong today filed in the probate court their final report as executors of the estate of W. C. Noon and applied for discharge from their duties. A large amount of real property in Multnomah county has not been disposed of, but the heirs desire to hold this as stands.

These heirs, Emily J. Noon, the widow, Viola E. Noon, Alma E. Noon, Ralph A. Noon and Stuart Freeman, also hold a claim against the estate, to pay which it would be necessary to sell the real estate that is left, or part of it. But the heirs desire to take over the property in place of having the property sold. It consists of the Noon homestead and over 50 lots in different parts of the city.

The cash on hand for distribution amounts to $5,734.43. The receipts were $128,713.50, and the disbursements $128,988.88. Claims were paid to the amount of $60,570. In addition to the cash there is personal property valued at $244.

W. C. Noon died in August, 1904, and a case involving the construction of the will was carried to the state supreme court, resulting in a victory for Mrs. Noon and the other heirs. H. M. Calk was originally one of the executors, and he received $175 for his services. W. C. Noon Jr. and Armstrong, the remaining executors, ask for $1840 each for their work. They also ask for the payment of $2000 to Northup & Northup for legal services. The claim of W. C. Noon Jr. will be offset by rental he owes for property in Holaday's addition.

Judge Webster has fixed December 28 as the date for setting the final account.
