

NIGHT CLOTHES IN STREET CHASE

Man Discovers Bedfellow Stole His Money and Lively Sprint Follows.

A five block dash in his night clothes was what Gustave Blasch, a lecturer, rooming at 25 1/2 North First street, made this morning after a man who had stolen his clothes. He ran so fast that the pursued man was forced to seek a hiding place in the basement under a building at Fifth and Couch streets, where two patrolmen found him.

Walter Northcutt was the name the man gave when taken to the police station. He said his home was at 1300 Loise avenue, Fruitvale, Cal. Blasch shared his bed with him last evening. This morning at 3 o'clock he was awakened by a tugging under his pillow where he had $18. He saw Northcutt standing over him.

Northcutt ran down the stairway, turned upon Couch street and started east. He took to the street, with Blasch closely following. The two men raced up the street like two Marathon runners, with Blasch, who was dressed in nothing but night clothing and barefooted, a good second. Several pedestrians followed, and when the runners reached Fifth street a large crowd had gathered. C. A. Johnson, 51 North Ninth street, located Northcutt in the basement. He ran out and into the arms of Emil Glutach and Patrolmen Hensen and Jnskeep.

At the station he refused to state why he took his sleeping partner's clothing. A tallow candle and a bunch of skeleton keys were found in his pockets. A charge of larceny was placed against him, to which he pleaded guilty. Judge Bennett gave him 90 days on the rockpile.

ORGANIZED LABOR OPPOSED TO THE ASSEMBLY PLAN

Organized labor is emphatically opposed to the "assembly" plan, by which Republican machine politicians hope to nullify the direct primary law. Following is the full text of the resolutions adopted by the State Federation of Labor, which concluded its sessions Thursday: "Whereas, the primary law (section 11) says: 'Every such political party shall nominate all its candidates for public office under the provisions of this law, and not in any other manner, and it shall not be allowed to nominate any candidate in the manner provided by section 2791 of Ballinger & Cotton's Annotated Code; and

"Whereas, in spite of this law, and in utter defiance of it, there is a movement to hold an 'assembly' to select party candidates for recommendation to the primaries; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we recognize in this movement an attempt by unlawful process to set aside and render void the chief function of the direct primary law; that we believe this attempt to nullify the direct primary will be followed if successful by a similar stealthy destruction of direct legislation; that we hold it to be a first duty of all good citizens without respect to party, to meet and resist this cunning attempt to take away the people's rights; and that we will join with all such citizens in an effort to defeat the candidates put forth by such unlawful and forbidden 'assembly,' and to thereby save the direct primary, direct choice of senator and direct legislation unimpaired to the people."

THE STRANGER WITHIN OUR GATES

"Don't blame the hens for the egg fannies that come upon us every winter," said Marcus W. Dysart, Waterloo, Iowa, at the Perkins today. "That kind of talk is very pleasing to the egg trust, but it isn't fair to the hen. There would be egg fannies in the summer, too, if the trust could have its way. This trust is one of the greatest evils this country has. Some day somebody will invent a substitute for eggs, and he can't do it any too quickly to suit most of us."

Chester Harger, Poncha, Colo.—Three weeks ago I was visiting in Mexico, and when I returned to Colorado I found that I could not reach home owing to the snow blockades. Then I immediately bought a ticket for the Pacific coast. This snow business is beginning to grate on me, and I am going to sell my farm and try a new country for a few years. If the present good weather continues here I think Oregon will be my future home.

A. B. Clark, Fredonia, Ariz.—The call of the wild was never so strong as the call of the desert. There are hundreds of old prospectors who have lived on the Arizona desert for 20 years, never pinning for civilization or human companionship, but happy, just to be there in that silent, barren waste. And the lure of gold is not all that holds them.

SOCIETY TO EXPLAIN LIFE OF OREGON BIRDS

A meeting of the Oregon Audubon society will be held in the lecture room at the public library this evening at 8 o'clock. William L. Dawson of Seattle, president of the Washington Audubon society, will give a talk on some of the interesting phases of bird life that he has collected after years of study in the field. Mr. Dawson is a naturalist of a great deal of ability. His recent book, "The Birds of Washington," published by subscription, has attracted wide attention among bird lovers.

In his talk before the Audubon society Mr. Dawson will show some of the original drawings that were used in "The Birds of Washington," as well as some of the enlarged photographs. These drawings were made by Mr. Allan Brooks, who is recognized as the foremost bird and animal artist in the west, and one of the best in America. The meeting and the exhibition will be open to the public. All interested are invited to attend.

PORTLAND'S VIOLINS DISCUSSED BY WOMEN

The Portland Women's club enjoyed an exceptionally interesting program yesterday afternoon at its meeting in the Woodcraft hall. "The History of the Violin" was the subject of a paper by Mrs. Evelyn Allen Acheson, and it was followed by an interesting narration concerning a number of violins in Portland, particularly a Stradivarius in Mrs. J. C. Hare's possession. Upon the latter Waldemar Lind gave a number of delightful selections, including the adante movement of the Vieuxtemps Second Concerto and Sara-
