Pistol Play Charged Against Two Husbands in Divorce Suits Filed Today.

Gunplays are charged against two husbands by their wives in suits for divorce filed in the circuit court. G. S. Keller went so far as to take two shots at Nellie N. Keller, she says, but his aim was bad and he only shattered a plate she carried in her hand. John Har- air" per, the other belligerent husband, did more than flourish a gun and threaten Annie Harper, but at another time he is alleged to have struck her while he had an ax in his hand.

Mrs. Harper gives a long list of cruel ties, alleging threats to kill, chokings and bad names. She gays that in January of last year her husband shoved her over upon a warm kitchen range, mean time threatening her. This was done in the presence of Hannah Smith, she says, but the same witness is named to a choking affair. She says Harper humiliated her by pointing his finger at her and making insulting remarks in the presence of their children, that he persuaded their little boy to spy on her, and that on January 11, this year, he locked her out in the cold until she was compelled to call the police to return

For seven years, Mrs. Harper says, her husband has falled to provide for her, and she has been forced to work as a waitress, seamstress and housekeeper. desires the custody of their four children, from 7 to 12 years of age. Both she and her husband are 40 years of age. They were married in Paw-tucket, R. I., in 1897. Mrs., Keller, who was married in Fort Scott, Kan., in 1902, tells a story only a little less harrowing. After the oting episode, when the plate was split by a bullet, she was afraid to live with Keller, she says, and she came to Portland. Her husband also moved to Portland, and last spring she returned to live with him, under his promise of better treatment. But she alleges that he drank heavily and abused her, so she Aviation Field, Los Angeles, Jan. 15.

Will Louis Paulhan loop the loop in his big Farman biplane? Though the Frenchman and his manager have formally denied that the aerial wizard has such a hazardons plan in contemplation, it is persistently rumored that the daring bird man fully intends to make the attempt.

Members of the committee in whom Paulhan has confided admitted today that he had in mind a feat which either would eclipse any other feat ever performed in an aeroplane or would end i his death.

Massoni, one of his pupils, was asked egarding the plans of his teacher. He said nothing, but instead significantly swung his arm in a circle upward, ther pointed to his neck.

Does that mean that Paulhan will turn a complete somersault in the air?

was asked. Massoni smiled slightly, repeated his pantomime and walked away. It was announced today that Paulhan and Curtiss for the first time would race this afternoon, provided the wind was not The committee worked some time before the aerial giants could be persuaded to agree to contest. According to the plans the aeroplanes will be started on opposite sides of the field. To pass his opponent either would be compelled to fly either over or under the other machine

Despite the storm clouds which have been hanging over southern California for the past two days, the attendance at the meet shows no indications of falling off.

Long before noon the trains arriving at Dominguez Junction were filled with enthusiasts anxious to be early at the grounds so as not to miss any of the exhibitions.

It is an open secret that Charles K Hamilton will make another attempt ate this afternoon to beat Paulhan's altitude record if the atmospheric conditions are favorable.
