SECY. WILSON TO BE CITY'S GUEST

Other Distinguished Men Will Also Add Dignity to Coming Rose Carnival.

The only big attraction of its kind offered among Pacific coast cities this year is the Rose Festival in Portland, June 4-11.

"I have received from passenger agents of the big lines assurance that special advertising will be given the Rose Show this year, and special inducements in the way of rates offered."

"The meeting of the passenger agents is to be held in Chicago, January 25. McCormick of the O. R. & N. Co. told me that the Rose Show would be their big western travel card for the entire summer's business."

"Yes," said President Ralph W. Hoyt, of the Rose Show association, "that is true, every word of it. The magnitude of our plans is surprising even ourselves."

"The advertising features of this year's show are to pass anything ever before heard of. But I want some more money to carry out our plans. Many haven't given as much as they ought to make our way easy. The hotels have greeted us splendidly, but many real estate and business interests that have the potential of doing us good have not shown by their donations the interest they should manifest."

"Portland has in the rose," said Mr. Hutchin, picking up the thread of discussion, "an asset which other cities might try to equal in vain. The city is famous for many things, but preeminently for the rose, which gets its best opportunity for being lauded here, because of the incomparable climate."

Dr. Drake, president of the Rose society, has been assured that Luther Burbank will be in Portland during the rose planting season. Paul De Longre, famous painter of roses, who was unable to come last year, will be a guest.

From John Barrett, head of the federal department of Latin-American republics, a letter came to President Hoyt which was taken as a tribute most gratifying.

"The Portland Rose Festival should have the hearty support of all persons interested in the good name, the rapid growth, and the permanent prosperity of the city of Portland and the great Pacific northwest."

"Wherever I have traveled—in Asia, in Europe and in South America—I have described the way roses grow in beauty and abundance in any home city of Portland, Or. I have found that I always awaken the keenest interest and a desire among people hearing these things to visit a section of the United States that has a climate and a soil that will grow such flowers."

"The Portland Rose Festival will receive vast benefits from liberal advertising of its Rose Festival, and in making that event an unprecedented success."
