

LESS STOCK WORK IS MAYOR'S ORDER TO POLICE FORCE

New York's Executive Takes Steps to Make Life More Worth Living for Humble Citizens.

By Ralph Johnson.
(Publishers Press Leased Wire.)
New York, Feb. 5.—Mayor Gaynor has evidently made up his mind that life in New York for the common people shall be better worth the living. One of the ways he intends to bring this about is to curb the restless night stick of the too energetic cop. It has long been the privilege of the New York policeman to bat the unimportant citizen over the head whenever in his judgment the said citizen needed it, but now the "force" is to be deprived of this particular diversion. Already several too-ready policemen have become private citizens and there are others slated for the loss of shield and buttons and the mandate has gone forth that in the future the policeman who uses his night stick over the head of even the humblest citizen must be able to show good cause or lose his job.

Athletes in Public Service.

Did it ever occur to you that there are a good many former college athletes holding public life these days, and that they are making good? The first work done since Christmas in cleaning New York streets of something like a two foot snowfall, by Big Bill Edwards, street cleaning commissioner, is a case in point. In his day Edwards was the star of the Princeton football squad.

Mr. Pincho's successor as chief forester, Henry S. Graves, played on the Yale eleven, while every follower of the sport knows Lee McClung, now treasurer of the United States.

Another football man, George Woodruff, was last year made an United States judge by President Taft. Woodruff, after leaving Yale, coached the Pennsylvania team and was the author of the "guards back" formation which won so many games for the Red and Blue, and, incidentally, swelled the hospital list of opposing teams.

Mr. Pincho's successor as chief forester, Henry S. Graves, played on the Yale eleven, while every follower of the sport knows Lee McClung, now treasurer of the United States.

James Freeman Curtis, the new assistant secretary of the treasury, is a Harvard man and at one time was the intercollegiate golf champion. His secretary, Fred Currier, was a Harvard baseball star. Robert Bacon, the new ambassador to France, was a notable oarsman at Harvard.

Everett Lake, one of the best half-backs that ever wore the crimson of Harvard, is now lieutenant governor of Connecticut. He is expected to be the nominee for governor this fall. "Big" Hefflinger, the best guard of any Yale team, may be nominated for mayor of Minneapolis by the Republicans this year. Roosevelt wanted to appoint Hefflinger as a civil service commissioner, but the former football player declined.

Maurice U. Ely, a former Yale football captain, is anxious to show the people of Brooklyn what he can do as a public servant and is trying to wrest the leadership of the First assembly district from Michael J. Daly.

Should Protect Salmon.

Among the recent visitors from the coast in New York was Charles S. Carr of Tillamook, Or. "The people of Oregon are aroused to the necessity of taking some action for the preservation of the salmon fisheries," he said, "because of the reckless and wasteful fishing methods that have injured the Columbia river fisheries and the matter will be taken up by the legislature without question."

"The people by a referendum vote in 1908 gave a majority of 26,000 for a law that was enacted by the legislature to prohibit salmon fishing beyond the head of tide-water on the Columbia. But the matter got into the courts under an injunction suspending the enforcement of the laws, and before the legal question could be settled the law was repealed, and a substitute was passed prohibiting fishing on Sunday and shortening the season by several weeks."

There is a prevailing sentiment," added Mr. Carr, "which will assert itself sooner or later in favor of prohibiting salmon fishing above tide-water—that is, above where the salt water ceases and where the salmon commence to spawn. On every river, except the Columbia, and in Alaska, salmon fishing has been stopped at the head of the tide, and it will be done in our country."

COLUMBIA GEORGE KILLED AGED "WITCH"

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Pendleton, Or., Feb. 5.—The pardoning of Columbia George, the Imitilla Indian murderer, by President Taft last Wednesday, recalls one of the most interesting murders in the history of the northwest, and in which old traditions superstitions played an important part. George, together with Toy-toy, another Indian, was sentenced to a life term on McNell's Island several years ago for the killing of Anna Edna, a squaw.

According to the history of the crime, Columbia George was visiting with the Yakima Indians prior to the commission of the murder, and while there was taken ill. The medicine man of the tribe told him that there was a witch on the Unatilla reservation who had cast an evil spell over him and that until she was dead, he could not recover from his sickness.

While searching for the alleged witch George fell in with Toy-toy. The latter's father had just died, and he too was in search of the evil woman who was responsible for his parent's demise. He persuaded George that Anna Edna was the "evil genius."

GLASGOW AWAITS COMING OF GREAT W. C. T. U. THROUGH

World's Convention of Largest Woman's Organization in May and June to Attract Delegates From 50 Countries.

(Publishers Press Leased Wire.)
By Paul Lambeth.
London, Feb. 5.—England is preparing to entertain thousands of earnest women from the four quarters of the globe in May and June. They will be delegates to the eighth convention of the "World's Women's Christian Temperance Union, which meets in Glasgow June 4 to 11.

Already the Scotch metropolis has put the general election excitement behind it and is in a cold-water ferment. The shopkeepers are laying in extra stocks of white ribbon, Glasgow women are preparing to take full possession of the city. They are making ready for the greatest gathering of women ever seen in the land of cakes.

Fifty countries will be represented in this great assemblage of delegates representing the largest organization in the world composed exclusively of women.

"That America will lead in the size of her representation is assured by the fact that already tours have been arranged, with New York, Philadelphia and Montreal as the starting points. America leads in membership in the W. C. T. U., having over 300,000. Great Britain has 250,000.

Among American women who will be here are Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens of Portland, Me., who is vice-president-at-large of the world's body, the Countess of Carlisle being president, and Miss Anna A. Gordon of Evanston, Ill., one of the honorable secretaries; Miss Agnes Slack of England, being the other. It is expected that the American contingent will begin to arrive early in May and large numbers have engaged passage on the Celtic, of the White Star line, and on the Canada of the Dominion line, for May 21.

Glasgow will give them all a good hearty Scotch welcome. All Scotland will contribute to its warmth, while Great Britain and Ireland will offer whatever entertainment the time and the inclination of the visitors will permit them to accept. But Glasgow will be very jealous in her hospitality and it is planned to hold the visitors in and around that city by a round of local entertainments and interesting excursions that shall prove satiating.

Committees already are at work. The community at large is becoming actively interested. Big programs are being taken shape in practical preparations for all sorts of demonstrations; and in these, while in the main the promotion of the temperance cause will be the predominant idea, no opportunity will be lost of sending the visitors back to their homes impressed with the picturesque beauty and the warm hospitality of Bonny Scotland.

Travels of British Royalty.

Canada and British Columbia and the other British possessions across the sea are to have an opportunity to see the two young sons of the prince of Wales next year and it may be the young prince will make a visit to some of the leading American cities.

The two princes—Prince Edward is 16, whilst his brother is 10—will thus be following in the footsteps of their father, the prince of Wales, who, at the age of 14, together with his elder brother, the duke of Clarence, made what amounted to a tour of the more distant overseas states of Great Britain. As cadets on H. M. S. Bacchante the royal brothers visited Australia, Japan, South Africa, Egypt and India. The prince of Wales himself will visit Cape Colony in the autumn for the purpose of opening the new parliament of United South Africa.

The arrangements for the king's forthcoming holiday are now almost complete. His majesty proposes to leave this country about the second week in March after the two usual spring courts have been held at Buckingham palace, and will travel direct to Biarritz, halting for one night at Paris on the way. He will remain at his famous spring resort for about three weeks, when he will travel to Marseilles to meet the Queen and Princess Victoria upon the royal yacht, Victoria and Albert. Their majesties will then take rather a lengthy trip in the Mediterranean.

His majesty will subsequently leave the royal yacht and return to this country, arriving during the first week in May. He majesty will then go to Denmark, and does not expect to be in London until quite three weeks later. This yachting trip is being taken at the advice of his majesty's physicians.

A Strenuous Worker.

Herbert Gladstone, who is to be the first governor general of the new Dominion of South Africa, is not nearly such a "young" politician as many people imagine. For he was born 57 years ago, and has had 29 years of strenuous political work in the house of commons.

But to look at him, you would never take him for a day over 40, and his youthfulness of appearance is undoubtedly due to the wholehearted way in which he enters into everything he does, either work or play.

In his office he is an absolute martyr to work, and no man gets through more dry official papers and statistics and assimilates them all with greater promptitude than he. Mr. Gladstone once told a meeting at West Ham that he would like to give work not only to all at West Ham but to a good many in the west and as well.

Asked if he liked work himself, "I guess," replied Mr. Gladstone, "that I have done as much work as you in my time. If you care to shoulder a pick, a spade or an axe, I am willing to compete with you." The chances are that the heckler would have suffered a severe defeat, for, like his father, Mr. Gladstone is a firm believer in exercise. He has excelled in all sports, and still goes shooting and fishing.

Each Customer Shares the $25,000

Our Annual Savings in Interest and Taxes Because We Built on the East Side

Do you know that West Side business property is getting entirely too high for the furniture business? Do you see the newspaper accounts from day to day of single lots selling for $250,000, of quarter blocks for $350,000 and $400,000? Do you know that furniture is so bulky that it takes a building covering a quarter block and from four to six stories high to display even $50,000 worth of furniture? Now, suppose we had built on the West Side; naturally, the investment would have been hundreds of thousands of dollars more than our present investment, and the extra money involved would have had to be reckoned with from an interest standpoint, while much larger taxes would also have had to be considered. Then suppose we had sold the same quantity of furniture during the year, is it not reasonable that we would have had to charge our customers more than $25,000 a year extra for the very same furnishings? Is there any way we could have avoided it? Now, suppose we were paying rent on the West Side, the landlord would have had to have a profit on his investment, making our expense of doing business still larger. If anyone can figure out how West Side merchants can sell furniture as low as we do, he will be the greatest mathematician we ever saw. There must be a reason for all things. Our business for January was 80 per cent larger than that of January of last year, which is evidence that the people are rapidly learning that our prices are lowest.
