Hermann did seem to be opposed to the creation of forest reserves. Particular-ly was this so if withdrawals would have stopped frauds, and none had been made while land grabbers had been getting large areas of holdings by fraud. Hermann had an understanding with these conspirators, and did even what he otherwise would have done, then he would be guilty of conspiracy, for he would have omitted to do anything to stop frauds. If he had this knowledge, then he was guilty. Rermann's Duty to Investigate. If Hermann knew that the school land law was being violated, then it was his duty to make an investigation. If he failed to make this investigation for the purpose of helping the conspiracy along, then he was as much guilty o conspiracy as if he had been guilty of the omission through a tacit understanding with the other conspirators. He then went over the indictmenti showing just what the defendant was charged with, and contended that if the defendant was shown to have entered into an agreement with one of the defendants to promote the creation of the reserve, that such showing was sufficient to prove his connection with the conspiracy.

A conspiracy must be a tacit understanding which would accomplish an unlawful purpose by concert of action. If the mind of Hermann met with the mind of Mays or Jones that he would assist in the scheme mapped out by every day. them, then he was a party to the con-spiracy. If he conveyed to them, only tacitly, that he would assist, then he Don't forget to cut them out.

Rermann Shrewd Witness.

Heney contended that Hermann, as a witness, had been "in unction unsurpassed and in palaver unapproached.' In his testimony the jury got palaver Attractive Mt. Tabor Aca very chary manner,

Senatorial ambition, Heney argued, had inspired Hermann to overlook irregularities in the administration of the land office. He had Special Agents Loomis and Ormsby to push his political campaigns. B. F. Allen of California had won a place in his heart because he had told Hermann of kind grate, words said about him by people in Ore-

Ambition was a good thing, Heney argued, but it was not right for this ambition to close his eyes to frauds, or wrote latters to Allen about grapes and oranges, but not about land frauds, or the way Hyde and Benson were looting the government in California. When Hermann had done this in his treatment of special agents, then it was necessary to watch closely his treatment of state senators and representatives who had votes for United States senator, Heney argued.

Conspiracy Largely Thought.

Mr. Heney then took up the evidence for analysis. He said that it was neces-sary to know the atmosphere surrounding a conspiracy or a contract in prov ing it. Evidence of the character of Hermann had been put in by the de-fense for the purpose of showing that he was reputed to be honest, and thus to disprove that he would do anything such as is charged in the indictment.

H. W. Scott was put on the stand, and drew a distinction between the political character and the personal character of the defendant. One editorial in particular was important of remembrance. and in that Mr. Scott had charged that Hermann was a sleek and oily politician, to whose resignation from the commissionership he would interpose no objection. Scott had characterized him as a person not of the highest type of statesmanship, not the type of man Oregon should be proud to have as her representative in Congress; a man adror, in unction unsurpassed and in palaver unapproached.

Overt Act Not Necessary.

TWO WAYS

To make money, one way is to work for every dollar you can get: the other is to put every dollar you get to work for you. If you have $10 to put down and $5 per month to pay on a lot, put it to work. Take the next Rose City car at Third and Yamhill, go to our of-fice at end of line. You will not hesi-tate to buy in such a beautiful rapid home building district. Good invest-ment. Good home buy.
