There were two men in the holdup and both were masked. They entered the postoffice, blew open the safe and stole its contents. They broke open the general store and took everything of value that could be quickly changed into coin. The things then went to the Divide hotel, held up the night clerk and secured a small sum of money. After terrifying the inhabitants, the outlaws rode from the town. A posse started in pursuit shortly afterward. Divide is 30 miles from here and the Butte authorities are preparing to join in the hunt if the bandits head this way.
