

LOUISIANA HAS AN EXCLUSIVE SYSTEM OF LAW

Laws Based Upon Code of Napoleon—Ordinances Relating to Families Very Strict—Many Break Laws.

By Frederic J. Haskin. Washington, Feb. 21.—Louisiana is the only state in the union that has a system of law exclusively its own.

In all the other states the jurisprudence is based upon the common law, which is their legal heritage from the English founders of the republic. The law which prevails in Louisiana, is based upon the code Napoleon, and that in turn rests upon the old Roman civil law.

As both the common and the civil law have the same object—the safeguarding of individual rights and interests—there is not at bottom so much difference between the two systems as might seem at first glance. The divergences are largely matters of procedure of the methods by which suits may be instituted and conducted.

For example, in the United States courts, and in the courts of practically all the other states, there is a law suit and an equity suit, and the two may not be confounded. In the Louisiana courts there is no equity suit, but the law and the equity may be passed upon in the same proceeding by the same judge.

Children Protected. The Louisiana law diverges most widely from the common law in all that relates to the family. In the common law the emphasis falls upon the man as an individual. In the Louisiana code, as in the French law, he is viewed essentially as a member of the family.

Partnership of Married People. One of the most benevolent provisions of the law is that which determines the ownership of the earnings of a married couple. The code proceeds on the theory that in the great majority of cases the husband is the wage earner of the partnership, though confined within the walls of her home, are of equal value and importance.

RHEUMATISM Gout, Sciatica, Lumbago Cured by Liguocide

Two Years Suffering. "While at Davis, Ind., I met a man who had suffered from rheumatism for two years standing. In my arms and hands, by taking Liguocide, he was cured. I have since cured many others. C. G. Bray, Ursula, Ark., November 28, 1906.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO MOTHER

David Lloyd George.

In a recent autobiography prepared for a London paper, David Lloyd George tells of his early days in these simple terms: "My father was a schoolmaster and a Unitarian, and he left Wales to follow his profession in England. He was stationed at Manchester and Liverpool in Liverpool he was master of the Hope-street school, the manager of the school was the Rev. Dr. Martineau, and in this great divine was one of the early influences, in many ways, on my life and that of my people. He was a friend of my father, and we have several memorials of their friendship in 1833.

My father died when I was but 2 years old. He left a very small fortune for my mother, and she had to make a hard struggle to bring up her children. She was a fine character—brave, unselfish and courageous. She never complained, and never spoke of her struggles. It was not till long after that her children fully appreciated how much they owed to her, and how fine her spirit had been in the hard task of bringing up her fatherless family.
