New York, March 12 .- The college man s coming into his own in business. The time was not so long ago when practical men of affairs felt rather a contempt for the college graduate. But this time has passed. John S. Thayer, third vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad, ecently expressed the prevailing idea

"We need men of brains, but brains is only one essential quality. We must have men who are broadened out, and above all men who have spirit and can keep it alive. We need men with personal magnetism and men who think, and this applies even to trackmen. We need men with tact: even the conductors must use this every day of their lives.

"I don't say we unfairly prefer college men, because we have in our ranks men who have the energy to make their own college out of every day life. We have manufactured officers in the ranks in the past, and we must do so in the We believe, though, that the man who stands the best chance of advancement is the one who has the college education.

Popular in the Bast.

This movement for nounday services for the convenience and spiritual uplift of the business men and women who do not have the opportunity to attend the daily service in the churches is being extensively carried out in all the large cities of the east, and has been the source of great spiritual comfort to the business world.

Among the speakers who will address the Portland meetings will be Bishop Kentor of Olympia, Bishop Rows of Alaska, Bishop Paddock of eastern Oregon, the Rev. E. V. Shayle of Scattle and Frank G. Shelby, general western tray eling secretary of the Brotherhood of St Andrew

Fifteen thousand cards will be distributed about the city during the next fortnight, announcing the services and program, which is as follows:

Laymen's Organization.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew is an organization of laymen, formed a little over a quarter of a century ago in Chicago, the object being "the spread of Christ's kingdom among men, espe-clally young men." Organized by 12 young men, it has since spread over the entire globe, with strong membership in Africa, Japan, and wherever the Anglican communion is to be found. There are now in this country over 1000 senfor branches with a membership of 10,-000 men, while the juniors total another 5000. The Brotherhood works under the leadership of the clergy, and by daily prayer, personal influence and invitations to church services aims to exert a wholesome, manly influence on those with whom they associate. They visit hospitals, jails and other institutions where may be found men in need, and their records show that they have been a splendid Christian example wherever they have become active.
