

ONLY $6320 IN THE OREGON TRUST ON DAY IT OPENED UP

First bond regarding the supposed instability of the bank. This testimony was extracted from the witness with considerable difficulty by the prosecutor, over the objection of C. W. Fulton, chief counsel for Moore. Hayes had testified that he had an opportunity to examine the securities held by the bank while Moore and Morris were absent in San Francisco to purchase the vaults and fixtures for the new location at Sixth and Washington streets.

Fulton's Objects. "Did you talk with Moore regarding the condition of the bank?" asked Fitzgerald. "I don't remember that I did," said Hayes. "Did you tell why you wanted to withdraw?" "I don't remember."

Fulton objected to the statement made by Fitzgerald in the presence of the jury, and the court instructed the jury to disregard all the prosecutor had said. But the court refused to strike out testimony as to the amount of the bond issue authorized. The witness also testified to the sale of $100,000 to the Jackson County bank. Stryker was on the stand when court adjourned at noon.

So far, the defense had played a waiting game. No objection has been offered to the testimony regarding the way the bank was started or the details of such transactions as the Golden Eagle overdrafts. The purpose of the defense, evidently, is to disclaim any knowledge on the part of Moore as to the most of the queer banking with which the testimony of the state, has so far dealt.

was purchased on May 7, 1907, and various receipts of Portland Home telephone bonds and stock were shown from January to July, 1907, aggregating about $70,000.

Traces Golden Eagle Notes. Fitzgerald next traced through the books the Golden Eagle notes, given to cover overdrafts. The first was on May 22, 1907, for $7000. Others were for $20,000, $27,335, $32,300 and $15,000, the aggregate sum being $101,635. Schultz said he did not know what these notes were for and he did not know who initiated the notes by tearing off the signature of Gus Lowit. Fitzgerald then showed the writing off of the Golden Eagle indebtedness by the exchange of telephone stock and bonds for it.

Fulton, on cross-examination, asked Schultz if he had ever believed the bank insolvent. The witness said he did not. He knew only what the books showed. The day before the bank closed he knew the cash had run low and knew there was some alarm among the tellers. But he thought the bank would come through all right and he did not withdraw his own deposit of $175 or $200. His brother had a deposit of $150 in the bank when it closed, and his sister had $30 there.

Ralston Gives More Testimony. L. O. Ralston, the first president of the bank, was recalled to finish his testimony. He was still unable to positively identify the first ledger kept by the institution. He had run over his personal account, comparing it with his deposit book, he said, and found some entries agreed, while others did not agree. He did not know the handwriting in the book, and said he could not be positive about its being the ledger kept during his presidency. Nor could he identify a copy of the by-laws, although he said he supposed it was correct. He was not cross-examined.

Assistant Cashier Graves, recalled by the state, promptly identified the ledger examined by Ralston, and it was admitted in evidence. He said he could not tell exactly how much cash the bank had on the first day of its existence, but on the first day the accounts opened it showed only $6320 on hand.

Stryker Last Witness. S. W. Stryker, a dentist, former vice president of the Estacada State bank, also former vice president of the Pacific & Eastern railroad, was the last witness of the morning session. He was called to tell of the transaction wherein the Oregon Trust purchased $100,000 of the bonds of the railroad. He said the road was incorporated by W. Cooper Morris, who was its president; George Estes, who was secretary and manager of the railroad, president of the Estacada bank and also bond man for the Oregon Trust; Walter H. Moore and himself. He held $125,000 of the stock, Moore and Morris having equal amounts.

Repeated objections by Fulton shut out many of the questions asked by Fitzgerald of Stryker. The court held it was immaterial at this time to show how much Moore paid for his stock. Fitzgerald said he desired to show that Moore paid nothing for this stock, that the road was bonded for $1,000,000, and that Moore then turned around and paid out $100,000 of the money of the bank to purchase bonds. Judge Bronaugh said the road probably was bonded on its mileage, and the amount of stock paid or unpaid would have nothing to do with it.

Fulton objected to the statement made by Fitzgerald in the presence of the jury, and the court instructed the jury to disregard all the prosecutor had said. But the court refused to strike out testimony as to the amount of the bond issue authorized. The witness also testified to the sale of $100,000 to the Jackson County bank. Stryker was on the stand when court adjourned at noon.

is apparently dawdling upon the Harriman people. Through Rough Country. The distance from Coos Bay to Drain, on the main line of the Southern Pacific, is approximately 88 miles, and the survey runs through a rough country, so that at best it will take about 18 months to complete the line, and this, it is figured, will be none too soon to keep pace with the march of the Oregon Electric into the upper reaches of the Willamette valley.

ELEVEN MAYBRAY RACE SWINDLERS GIVEN MAXIMUM

were named in the indictment, indicating the wide range of territory over which the members of the gang are alleged to have piled their loot. The sums lost by the victims varied from $1500 to $20,000, the latter sum having been placed on a fake horse race, it is said, by a Missouri banker.

As a basis of operation the gang used, according to the indictment, the cities of Burlington, Davenport, Council Bluffs, Iowa; St. Louis, Seattle, Denver, Little Rock and New Orleans, to which places, it is alleged, victims were taken by the numerous "steerers". The indictment named 85 persons who are alleged to have been victims of the gang, most of whom live in the western states.

Had Excellent System. The system by which the gang worked was brought out in all its details at the trial. The evidence showed how the gang first got its eye on a prospective victim, how the "steerer" succeeded in drawing him on, how the gang finally got hold of him and how he was fleeced. Furthermore, the evidence showed how the gang operated for its own protection, how the athletic contests were arranged, and how the heads of the alleged conspiracy were able to secure as aids and allies a large number of athletes, horsemen, wrestlers and other sporting men of more or less wide reputation, together with numerous other men who had long criminal records.

Every move of the gang from its first inception until its dissolution was brought out and testimony of a highly sensational nature marked the case as one of the most important and far-reaching criminal operations the country has ever known.

Godard, who was acquitted, will be tried again on other charges when other defendants now under indictment are brought to trial.

RUSH ROAD FROM COOS BAY TO VALE BY WAY OF BURNS

work rest for awhile, there being no imminent cause for fear of serious competition at that time. But now that the Hill people are rapidly pushing their way through the Willamette valley by means of extensions of the Oregon Electric, the danger of losing a rich field is apparently dawdling upon the Harriman people. Through Rough Country. The distance from Coos Bay to Drain, on the main line of the Southern Pacific, is approximately 88 miles, and the survey runs through a rough country, so that at best it will take about 18 months to complete the line, and this, it is figured, will be none too soon to keep pace with the march of the Oregon Electric into the upper reaches of the Willamette valley.

The Natron cut-off will soon be completed between Springfield and Odell, and it would furnish a suitable link in the chain of branches across the state. From Odell the road can be built eastward through the level sagebrush lands and bunch grass fields of Lake and Harney counties to Burns, thus completing the chain.

Newcomers are now flooding into these counties for the purpose of taking up public lands, and it is estimated that by the time the road could be completed, under the most favorable circumstances, a great portion of the now arid lands will be pretty heavily settled.

Good Engineer in Charge. The construction of the Coos Bay-Drain branch is under the direct supervision of Chief Engineer William Hood, of San Francisco, who is regarded as one of the foremost engineers in the country, although the project is really within the jurisdiction of the engineers in Oregon. That the contract for the completion of the project will be let in the near future is said to be certain.

The Yale-Burns project is supposed to be handled by the Oregon Short Line, and it is reported that a contract for a portion of that work has already been let.

Transformation of steam to electric power on the west side division of the Southern Pacific through the Willamette valley is also up to Chief Engineer Hood at San Francisco, and it is reported that before the end of the coming summer the work of electrifying the line between Portland and Dallas will be well under way.

Preparatory work on the big power plant at the headwaters of the Clackamas river has been in progress for some time, also under the guidance of Chief Engineer Hood at San Francisco.

The construction of the power plant will involve the outlay of about $250,000 and consulting engineers say the plant will be capable of developing at least 20,000 kilowatt of power, or more than enough to handle all the business that the entire west side division might secure.

Best Prescription For Kidney Troubles

Of all medicines and mixtures for the kidneys, liver or bladder, the one given here is probably sweeter, more palatable and more effective than any other. Mix together six ounces good pure gin with one-half ounce fluid extract buchu, then add one-half ounce-murax compound. Mix these well together and take in doses of one to two teaspoonfuls three times a day after eating. The ingredients can be had of any good druggist.

The above prescription quickly and permanently cures lame back, rheumatic pains in the joints, highly colored urine, scanty, frequent or burning urination, dizziness, pains in the head, all of which are well known signs of trouble in the kidneys and other urinary organs.

Registered at the St. Francis hotel in San Francisco Saturday were J. L. Harrington, R. C. Riley, C. R. Murdock, H. M. Wheeler, E. R. Conahan and Mr. and Mrs. C. Simons, all of Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. French are in Seattle as the guests of Mrs. Fred Rice Rowell, and will spend the month.

In honor of Miss Dorothy Morrison, Paymaster Bright of the Bremerton navy yard gave a box party at the Moore theatre in Seattle, Saturday evening. Miss Morrison was a guest the same afternoon at a musicale party given by Mrs. Field of Seattle in honor of Mrs. Griswold, Miss Morrison's hostess. Wednesday evening Commander and Mrs. Bertolletti gave a dinner aboard the Philadelphia for Naval Constructors and Mrs. Rupert and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Benedict of Eureka, Cal. Additional guests were Lieutenant and Mrs. Griswold, Mrs. Field, Miss Dorothy Morrison and Dr. Bachman. Miss Susan Clarke will join Mrs. William R. Ellis, wife of Representative Ellis, entertained at a pretty luncheon last week in her apartment in the Burlington, at Washington, D. C., assisted by Mrs. Faggett, of Tennessee, one of the wives of the congressional committee who went to Hawaii last summer. The table decorations were red carnations and American Beauty roses. Miss Beatrice Evelyn Wilson, the child pianist, entertained the guests afterward with several piano selections.

John Barrett, director of the international bureau of American republics, gave a luncheon at the New Willard hotel in Washington, D. C., last week in honor of Henry White, late ambassador to Paris. Mr. Barrett is well known here.

Queen Alexandra's jewels at the first court last month consisted of countless rows of pearls and diamond orders, half concealing the deep blue ribbon of the Garter. The large Cullinan diamond blazed on her corsage and on her head was posed the famous crown of Maltese crosses. Her majesty wore the coronation crown of India and Danish family orders. In addition to the starter ribbon and diamond star in her corsage was the famous ruby which Henry V wore in his helmet at the battle of Agincourt, now mounted with diamonds in form a cross which her majesty wears on occasions such as last month's court.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mathison and little son are in Washington en route to Germany.
